Epistle to the Reader.

SIR, If this Writing be not acceptable, here is already enough, and too much of it, but if it be, it is but a rough draught; for I have not been yet two years about it, nor ever saw all or halfe my Papers together: And now in the bringing them to light, they have been dispersed into three Presses, where because I could not be present at them all, I was present at none, by which means the weaknesse of my performance, hath been so strangely managed for the worse, that I am quite out of countenance at my worke, which the ensuing errors mended, will not be perfect, but not mended, is not to be understood: Wherefore let me intreat you before you cast away the time in beginning to read, that you mend the Faults according unto the ensuing Corrections: Which done, I dare promise you that if I have not made you a good flight, I have sprung you the best Quarry: For though the Discourses be full of crudities, the Modell hath had perfect concoction.

The Introduction or Order of the Work.

Oceana is saluted by the Panegyrist after this manner; O the most blessed and fortunate of all Countreys Oceana! How deservedly hath Nature with the bountyes of Heaven and Earth endued thee? thy ever fruitfull womb not closed with Ice, nor dissolved by the raging Star; where Ceres and Bacchus are perpetuall Twins. Thy Woods are not the harbour of devouring beasts; nor thy continuall Verdure, the ambush of Serpents: but the food of innumerable herds and flocks presenting thee their Shepherdesse with distended dugs or golden Fleeces. The wings of thy Night involve thee not in the horrour of darknesse, but have still some white feather, and thy Day is that for which we esteem this, the longest. But this Extasie of Plinie's (as is observed by Burton) seemeth to allude as well unto Marpesia and Panopea, now Provinces of this Common-Wealth as unto Oceana her self. Plinie's Description of Oceana.

To speak of the people in each of these Countreys, this of Oceana for so soft an one, is the most martiall in the whole World. Let States that aym at greatnesse (saith Verulamius) take heed how their Nobility and Gentlemen do multiply too fast, for that maketh the common Subject grow to be a Peasant and base Swain driven out of heart, and in effect but a Gentlemans labourer: Even as you may see in Coppice woods, if you leave the Staddles too thick, you shall never have clean underwood, but shrubbs and bushes: So in Countries, if the Gentlemen be too many, the Commons will be base; and you will bring it to that, that not the hundredth pole will be fit for an Helmet, especially as to the Infantry which is the nerve of an Army, and so there will be great population and little strength. This which I speak of hath been no where better seen then by comparing of Oceana and France, whereof Oceana though far lesse in territory and population hath been nevertheless as overmatch! in regard the middle people of Oceana make good Souldiers, which the Peasants in France do not. In which words, Verulamius (as Machiavill hath done before him) harps much upon a string which he hath more perfectly tuned, and that is the ballance of Dominion or Property: as it followeth more plainly in his praise of the profound and admirable device of Panurgus King of Oceana, in making Farms and houses of Husbandry of a Standard, that is, maintained with such a proportion of Land unto them, as may breed a Subject to live in convenient plenty, and no servile condition, and to keep the Plough in the hand of the owners, and not meer hirelings: And thus The Nature of the people. Essay 29.

Terra potens armis atq; ubere glebæ.

But the Tillage bringing up a good Souldiery, bringeth up a good Common-Wealth: which the Author in the praiſe of Panurgus did not mind, nor Panurgus in deſerving that praiſe; for where the owner of the Plough comes to have the Sword too, he will uſe it in defence of his own; whence it hath happened, that the people of Oceana in proportion unto their propriety have been alwaies free: and the Genius of this Nation hath ever had ſome reſemblance with that of antient Italy, which was wholly addicted unto Common-Wealths, and where Rome came to make the greateſt accompt of her Ruſtick Tribes, and to call her Conſuls from the Plough; for in the way of Parliaments, which was the Government of this Realm, men of Country Lives have been ſtill intruſted with the greateſt affairs, and the people have conſtantly had an averſion from the wayes of the Court, Ambition loving to be gay, and to fawn, hath been a gallantry looked upon as having ſomething in it of the Livery; and Husbandry or the Country way of life, though of a groſſer ſpinning, as the beſt ſtuffe of a Common-wealth according unto Ariſtotle, (Agricolarum democratica reſpublica optima) ſuch an one being the moſt obſtinate aſſertreſſe of her liberty, and the leaſt ſubject unto innovation or turbulency: Wherefore till the foundations (as will be hereafter ſhewed) were removed, this people was obſerved to be the leaſt ſubject unto ſhakings and turbulency of any: Whereas Common-wealths, upon which the City life hath had the ſtronger influence, as Athens, have ſeldome or never been quiet, but at the beſt are found to have injured their own buſineſſe by overdoing it. Whence the Urbane Tribes of Rome conſiſting of the Turba forenſis, Libertines that had received their freedom by manumiſſion, were of no reputation in compariſon of the Ruſticks. It is true, that with Venice it may ſeem to be otherwiſe, in regard the Gentlemen (for ſo are all ſuch called as have right unto the Government) are wholly addicted unto the City life; but then the Turba forenſis, the Secretaries, Cittadini, with the reſt of the populacy are wholly excluded; otherwiſe a Common-wealth conſiſting but of one City, would doubtleſſe be ſtormy, in regard that ambition would be every mans trade: but where it conſiſteth of a Country, the plough in the hands of the owner, findeth him a better calling, and produceth the moſt innocent and ſteddy Genius of a Common-wealth, ſuch as is that of Oceana.

Marpeſia being the Northern part of the ſame Iſland, is the dry nurſe of a populous and hardy people; but where the Saddles have been formerly too thick: whence their courage anſwered not unto their hardineſſe, except in the Nobility, who governed that Country much after the manner of Poland, ſave that the King was not elective, till the people received their liberty, the yoke of the Nobility being broken by the Common-Wealth of Oceana: which in grateful return is thereby provided with an inexhauſtible Magazeen of Auxiliaries: Panopea, the ſoft mother of a ſlothful and puſillanimous people, is a neighbour Iſland, anciently ſubjected by the Arms of Oceana; ſince, almoſt depopulated for ſhaking off the Yoke, and at length replanted with a new Race. But (through what vertues of the ſoyl, or vice of the air ſoever it be) they come ſtill to degenerate: wherefore ſeeing it is neither likely to yield men fit for Arms, nor neceſſary it ſhould; it had been the intereſt of Oceana, ſo to have diſpoſed of this Province, being both rich in the nature of the ſoyl, and full of commodious Ports for Trade, that it might have been ordered for the beſt in relation unto her purſe: Which in my opinion (if it had been thought upon in time) might have been beſt done by planting it with Jewes, allowing them their own Rites and Lawes, for that would have brought them ſuddainly from all parts of the World, and in ſufficient numbers; and though the Jews be now altogether for Merchandize, yet in the Land of Canaan (ſince their exile from whence they have not been Landlords) they were altogether for agriculture; and there is no cauſe why a man ſhould doubt, but having a fruitfull Country and good Ports too, they would be good at both. Panopea well peopled, would be worth a matter of four millions dry rents, that is, beſides the advantage of the agriculture and Trade, which with a Nation of that induſtry comes at leaſt unto as much more. Wherefore Panopea being farm'd out unto the Jews, and their heirs for ever, for the pay of a Provincial Army to protect them during the term of ſeven years, and for two millions annual revenue from that time forward; beſides, the Cuſtoms, which would pay the Provincial Army, would have been a bargain of ſuch advantage, both unto them and this Common-Wealth, as is not to be found otherwiſe by either. To receive the Jewes after any other manner into a Common-wealth, were to maim it: for they of all Nations never incorporate, but taking up the room of a Limb, are of no uſe or office unto the body, while they ſuck the nouriſhment which would ſuſtain a natural and uſeful member.

The nature of the Panopeans.

If Panopea had been ſo diſpoſed of, that Knapſack, with the Marpeſian Auxilliary, had been an ineſtimable treaſure; the ſituation of theſe Countries being Iſlands, (as appeaas by Venice how advantagious ſuch an one is to the like Government)

Situation of the Common-wealth of Oceana.

seemeth to have been designed by God for a Common-wealth: and yet that through the streightnesse of the place, and defect of proper Arms, can be no more then a Common-wealth for preservation; whereas this reduced unto the like Government is a Common-wealth for encrease; and upon the mightiest foundation that any hath been laid from the beginning of the World unto this day.

(Illam arctâ sapiens Neptunus compede stringit: Hanc autem glaucis sapiens complectitur ulnis.)

The Sea giveth law unto the growth of Venice, but the growth of Oceana giveth law unto the Sea.

These Countries having been anciently distinct and hostile Kingdoms, came by Morpheus the Marpesian, who succeeded by hereditary right unto the Crown of Oceana, not onely to be joyned under one head, but to be cast, as it were by a charm, into that profound sleep, which broken at the length by the Trumper of Civill War, hath produced the effects, that have given the occasion unto the ensuing Discourse, divided into Four Parts.

1. The Preliminaries, shewing the Principles of Government:
2. The Councill of Legislators, shewing the Art of making a Common-Wealth.
3. The Modell of the Common-Wealth of Oceana, shewing the effect of such Art.
4. The Corollary, shewing some consequences of such a Government.

The Preliminaries, shewing the Principles of Government.

Janotti, the most excellent describer of the Common-wealth of Venice, divideth the whole Series of Government into two Times or Periods. The one ending with the liberty of Rome, which was the course or Empire, as I may call it, of antient prudence, first discovered unto mankind by God himself, in the fabrick of the Common-wealth of Israel, and afterward picked out of his footsteps in nature, and unanimously followed by the Greeks and Romans. The other beginning with the Arms of Cæsar; which extinguishing liberty were the Translation of ancient into modern prudence, introduced by those inundations of Huns, Goths, Vandalls, Lombards, Saxons, which breaking the Roman Empire, deformed the whole face of the world, with those ill features of Government, which at this time are become far worse in these Western parts, except Venice, (which escaping the hands of the Barbarians, by vertue of her impregnable situation, hath had her eye fixed upon ancient Prudence; and is attained to a perfection even beyond her Copy.)

Definitions of Government.

Relation being had unto theſe two Times, Government (to define it (de jure) or according to antient Prudence) is an Art whereby a Civil Society of men is inſtituted and preſerved upon the foundation of common right or intereſt, or (to follow Ariſtotle and Livy) it is the Empire of Lawes and not of Men.

And Government (to define it (de facto) or according unto modern Prudence) is an Art whereby ſome man, or ſome few men, ſubject a City or a Nation, and rule it according unto his or their private intereſt: which, becauſe the Lawes in ſuch caſes are made according to the intereſt of a man, or of ſome few Families, may be ſaid to be the Empire of Men, and not of Lawes.

The former kind is that which Machiavill (whoſe Books are neglected) is the onely Politician that hath gone about to re-
Page 180. treive: and that, Leviathan (who would have his Book impoſed upon the Univerſities) goes about to deſtroy. For, It is (ſaith he)
Page 377. another errour of Ariſtotle's Politicks, that in a well ordered Common-wealth, not Men ſhould govern, but the Lawes: What man that hath his natural Senſes, though he can neither write nor read, does not find himſelf governed by them he fears, and believes can kill or hurt him when he obeyeth not? or, who believes that the Law can hurt him, which is but words and paper, without the hands and ſwords of men? I confeſſe, that (Magiſtratus eſt lex armata) the Magiſtrate upon his Bench, is that unto the Law, which a Gunner upon his Platform is unto his Cannon. Nevertheleſſe I ſhould not dare to argue with a man of any ingenuity, after this manner: An whole Army, though they can neither write nor read, are not afraid of a Platform, which they know is but Earth or Stone; nor of a Cannon, which without a hand to give fire unto it, is but cold Iron; therefore a whole Army is afraid of one man. But of this kind is the ratiocination of Leviathan (as I ſhall ſhew in divers places that come in my way) throughout his whole Politicks, or worſe; as where he ſaith of Ariſtotle and
Page 111. of Cicero, of the Greeks and of the Romans, who lived under popular States, that they derived thoſe rights not from the principles of Nature, but tranſcribed them into their books, out of the practice of their own Common-wealths, as Grammarians deſcribe the rules of Language out of Poets. Which is as if a man ſhould tell famous Hervey, that he tranſcribed his Circulation of the bloud, not out of the Principles of Nature, but out of the Anatomy of this or that body.

To go on therefore with this Preliminary Diſcourſe: I ſhall divide it according unto the two definitions of Government relating unto Janotty's two Times), into two parts: the firſt treating of the Principles of Government in general, and according to the Ancients; the ſecond treating of the late Governments vernments of Oceana in particular, and in that of Modern Prudence.

Government, according to the Antients, and their learned Diſciple Machiavill, (the onely Polititian of later Ages) is of three kinds; The Government of One man, or of the better ſort, or of the whole people: which by their more learned names are called Monarchy, Ariſtocracy, and Democracy; theſe they hold, through their proneneſſe to degenerate, to be all evill. For whereas they that govern, ſhould govern according to reaſon; if they govern according unto paſſion, they do that which they ſhould not do: Wherefore as reaſon and paſſion are two things, ſo Government by Reaſon is one thing, and the corruption of Government by Paſſion is another thing, but not alwaies another Government: as a body that is alive is one thing, and a body that is dead is another thing, but not alwaies another Creature, though the corruption of one come at length unto the generation of another. The corruption then of Monarchy is called Tyranny; that of Ariſtocracy, Oligarchy; and that of Democracy, Anarchy. But Legiſlators having found theſe three Governments at the beſt to be naught, have invented another conſiſting of a mixture of them all, which onely is good; this is the doctrine of the Ancients. Diviſion of Government.

But Leviathan is poſitive, that they are all deceived, and that there is no other Government in Nature then one of the three; as alſo that the fleſh of them cannot ſtink, the names of their corruptions being but the names of mens phanſies; which will be underſtood when we are ſhown which of them was Senatus Populuſq; Romanus.

To go mine own way, and yet to follow the Ancients: The Principles of Governments are twofold, Internal, or the goods of the Mind; and External, or the goods of Fortune. The goods of the mind are natural or acquired virtues, as Wiſdom, Prudence and Courage, &c. The goods of Fortune are Riches. There be goods alſo of the Body, as Health, Beauty, Strength, but theſe are not to be brought unto account upon this ſcore, becauſe if a man or an Army acquire Victory or Empire, it is more from their Diſcipline, Arms, and Courage, then from their natural health, beauty, or ſtrength, in regard that a people conquered may have more of natural ſtrength, beauty and health, and yet find little remedy. The Principles of Government then are in the goods of the mind, or in the goods of fortune. To the goods of the mind, anſwers Authority; to the goods of fortune, Power or Empire. Wherefore Leviathan, though he be right where he ſaith, that Riches are Power; is miſtaken where he ſaith, that Prudence, or the reputation of Prudence is power: for the learning or prudence of a man is no more power, then the learning or prudence of a book or Authour, Goods of the Mind and of Fortune. Empire and Authority.

which is properly Authority; a learned Writer may have authority though he have no power; and a fooliſh Magiſtrate may have power, though he have otherwiſe no eſteem or authority; the difference of theſe two is obſerved by Livy in Evander, of whom ſaith he, (regebat magis Authoritate quam Imperio) he ruled rather by authority then power.

Empire. To begin with Riches, in regard that men are hung upon theſe, not of choice as upon the other, but of neceſſity and by the teeth: for as much as he who wanteth bread, is his ſervant that will feed him: if a man thus feed an whole people, they are under his Empire.

Diviſion of Empire. Empire is of two kinds, Domeſtick and National, or Forrain and Provinciall.

Dominion. Domeſtick Empire is founded upon Dominion.

Domeſtick Empire. Dominion is Propriety reall or perſonall, that is to ſay, in Lands, or in money and goods.

Ballance in Lands. Lands, or the parts and parcels of a Territory, are held by the Proprietor or Proprietors, Lord or Lords of it, in ſome proportion; and ſuch (except it be in a City that hath little or no Land, and whoſe revenue is in Trade) as is the proportion or ballance of dominion or property in Land, ſuch is the nature of the Empire.

Abſolute Monarchy. If one man be ſole Landlord of a Territory, or overballance the people, for example, three parts in four, he is Grand Signior: for ſo the Turk is called from his Property; and his Empire is abſolute Monarchy.

Mixed Monarchy. If the Few or a Nobility, or a Nobility with the Clergy be Landlords, or overballance the people unto the like proportion, it makes the Gothick ballance (to be ſhewn at large, in the ſecond part of this Diſcourſe) and the Empire is mixed Monarchy, as that of Spain, Poland, and late of Oceana.

Popular Government. And if the whole people be Landlords, or hold the Lands ſo divided among them, that no one man, or number of men, within the compaſſe of the Few or Ariſtocracy, overballance them, the Empire (without the interpoſition of force) is a Commonwealth.

Tyranny. Oligarchy. Anarchy. If force be interpoſed in any of theſe three caſes, it muſt either frame the Government unto the foundation, or the foundation unto the Government; or holding the Government not according unto the ballance, it is not natural, but violent: and therefore if it be at the devotion of a Prince, it is Tyranny; if at the devotion of the Few, Oligarchy; or if in the power of the People, Anarchy: each of which confuſions, the ballance ſtanding otherwiſe, is but of ſhort continuance; becauſe againſt the nature of the ballance, which not deſtroyed, deſtroyeth that which oppoſeth it.

But there be certain other confuſions, which being rooted in the the ballance are of longer continuance, and of greater horrour, as first, where a Nobility holdeth half the Property, or about that proportion, and the people the other half; in which case without altering the ballance, there is no remedy but the one must eat out the other: as the people did the Nobility in Athens, and the Nobility the people in Rome. Secondly, when a Prince holdeth about half the Dominion, and the people the other half, which was the case of the Roman Emperours, planted partly upon their military Colonies, and partly upon the Senate and the people, the Government becometh a very shambles both of the Princes and the people. Somewhat of this nature are certain Governments at this day; which are said to subsist by confusion. In this case to fix the ballance is, to entail misery: But in the three former not to fix it is, to loose the Government. Wherefore it being unlawfull in Turky, that any should possesse Land but the Grand Signior, the ballance is fixed by the Law, and that Empire firm. Nor, though the Kings often fell, was the Throne of Oceana known to shake, until the Statute of Alienations broke the pillars, by giving way unto the Nobility to sell their Estates, (Si terra recedat, Jonium æquo frangat mare.) Lacedemon while she held unto her division of Land made by Lycurgus, was immoveable, but breaking that, could stand no longer. This kind of Law fixing the ballance in Lands is called Agrarian, and was first introduced by God himself, who divided the Land of Canaan unto his people by Lots, and is of such virtue, that where ever it hath held, that Government hath not alter'd, except by consent: as in that unparallell'd example of the people of Israel, when being in liberty they would needs choose a King. But without an Agrarian, Government whether Monarchical, Aristocratical, or Popular, hath no long Lease.

For Dominion personal or in money, it may now and then stir up a Melius or a Manlius, which if the Common-wealth be not provided with some kind of Dictatorian power, may be dangerous, though it have been seldom or never successfull: because unto propriety producing Empire, it is required that it should have some certain root or foot-hold, which, except in Land, it cannot have, being otherwise as it were upon the wing.

Nevertheless, in such Cities as subsist most by Trade, and have little or no Land as Holland and Genoa; the ballance of Treasure may be equal unto that of Land in the cases mentioned. Ballance in money.

But Leviathan, though he seem to scew at Antiquity, following his furious Master Carneades, hath caught hold of the publick sword, unto which he reduceth all manner and matter of Government; as, where he affirms, this opinion, (that Page 89.

any

any Monarch receiveth his power by Covenant, that is to ſay, upon conditions) to proceed from the not underſtanding the eaſie truth, That covenants being but words and breath, have no power to oblige, containe, constrain or protect any man, but what they have from the publick ſword. But as he ſaid of the Law, that without this ſword it is but paper, ſo he might have thought of this ſword, that without an hand it is but cold iron. The hand which holdeth this ſword is the Militia of a Nation; and the Militia of a Nation, is either an Army in the field, or ready for the field upon occaſion. But an Army is a beaſt that hath a great belly and muſt be fed; wherefore this will come unto what paſtures you have, and what paſtures you have will come unto the ballance of propriety, without which the publick ſword is but a name or meer ſpit-frog. Wherefore to ſet that which Leviathan ſaith of Arms and of Contracts a little ſtreighter; he that can graze this beaſt with the great belly, as the Turk doth his Timariots, may well deride him that imagines he received his power by covenant, or is obliged unto any ſuch toy: it being in this caſe onely that covenants are but words and breath. But if the propriety of the Nobility ſtocked with their Tenants and retainers be the paſture of that beaſt, the Ox knowes his Maſters Crib; and it is impoſſible for a King in ſuch a conſtitution, to raign otherwiſe then by Covenant; or if he break it, it is words that comes to blowes.

Arms and Contracts.

Page 90. But, ſaith he, when an Aſſembly of men is made Soveraign, then no man imagineth any ſuch Covenant to have paſt in the Inſtitution: but what was that by Publicola, of appeal unto the people, or that whereby the people had their Tribunes? Fy, ſaith he, Nobody is ſo dull as to ſay, that the People of Rome made a Covenant with the Romans, to hold the Soveraignty on ſuch or ſuch conditions; which not performed, the Romans might depoſe the Roman people. In which there be remarkable things; for firſt, he holdeth the Common-wealth of Rome to have conſiſted of one aſſembly, whereas it conſiſted of the Senate and the People; That they were not upon covenant, whereas every Law enacted by them was a covenant between them. That the one Aſſembly was made Soveraign, whereas the people who onely were Soveraign, were ſuch from the beginning, as appears by the ancient ſtyle of their Covenants or Laws (cenſuere Patres, juſſit Populus); That a Councill being made Soveraign, cannot be made ſuch upon conditions; whereas the Decemviri being a Council that was made Soveraign, was made ſuch upon conditions. That all conditions or covenants making a Soveraign, the Soveraign being made, are void; whence it muſt follow, that the Decemvirs being made, were ever after the lawful Government of Rome, and that it was unlawful for the Common-wealth of Rome to depoſe the Decemvirs: as alſo that Cicero, if he writ otherwiſe out of his Common-wealth, did not write out of

Nature.

Nature. But to come unto others that ſee more of this ballance.

You have Ariſtotle full of it in divers places, eſpecially where he ſaith, that Immoderate Wealth, as where One man or the Few have greater poſſeſſions than equality or the frame of the Common-wealth will bear, is an occaſion of Sedition, which ends for the greater part in Monarchy; and that for this cauſe the Oſtraciſme hath been received in divers places, as in Argos and Athens. But that it were better to prevent the growth in the beginning, then, when it hath gotten head, to ſeek the remedy of ſuch an evil. B. 5. 3. 3. 9.

Machiavill hath miſſed it very narrowly and more dangerouſly, for not fully perceiving, that if a Common-wealth be galled by the Gentry, it is by their overballance; he ſpeaks of the Gentry as hoſtile to popular Governments, and of popular Governments as hoſtile unto the Gentry; and makes us believe, that the people in ſuch are ſo enraged againſt them, that where they meet a Gentleman they kill him; which can never be proved by any one example, unleſſe in civill Warr; ſeeing that even in Switz the Gentry are not onely ſafe, but in honour. But the ballance as I have ſaid it down, though unſeen by Machiavill, is that which interpreteth him, and that which he confirmeth by his Judgment in many other as well as in this place, where he concludes, That he who will go about to make a Common-wealth where there be many Gentlemen, unleſſe he firſt deſtroy them, undertakes an impoſſibility: and that he who goes about to introduce Monarchy where the condition of the people is equal, ſhall never bring it to paſſe, unleſſe he cull out ſuch of them as are the moſt turbulent and ambitious, and make them Gentlemen or Noblemen, not in name but in effect, that is, by enriching them with Lands, Caſtles, and Treaſures, that may gain them power amongſt the reſt, and bring in the reſt unto dependence upon themſelves, to the end that they maintaining their ambition by the Prince, the Prince may maintain his power by them. D. B. 1. C. 55.

Wherefore as in this place I agree with Machiavill, that a Nobility or Gentry overballancing a popular Government, is the utter bane and deſtruction of it; ſo I ſhall ſhew in another, that a Nobility or Gentry in a popular Government not overballancing it, is the very life and ſoul of it.

By what hath been ſaid, it ſhould ſeem that we may lay aſide farther diſputes of the publick Sword, or of the right of the Militia; which, be the Government what it will, or let it change how it can, is inſeparable from the overballance in dominion: not, if otherwiſe ſtated by the Law or Cuſtome as in the Common-wealth of Rome (Conſules ſine lege Curiata rem militarem attingere non potuerant) where the people having the ſword, the Nobility came to have the overballance; availeth it unto other end than deſtruction: for as a building ſwaying The right of the Militia ſtated.

from the foundation must fall, ſo the Law ſwaying from reaſon, and the Militia from the ballance of Dominion. And ſo much for the ballance of National or Domeſtick Empire which is in Dominion.

Ballance of forraign Empire.

The ballance of Forraign or Provincial Empire is of a contrary nature. A man may as well ſay that it is unlawfull for him who hath made a fair and honeſt purchaſe to have tenants, as for a Government that hath made a juſt progreſſe, and inlargement of it ſelf, to have Provinces. But how a Province may be juſtly acquired, appertaineth to another place; in this I am to ſhew no more, then how or upon what kind of ballance it is to be held; in order whereunto, I ſhall firſt ſhew upon what kind of ballance it is not to be held. It hath been ſaid, that National of Independent Empire, of what kind ſoever, is to be exerciſed by them that have the proper ballance of Dominion in the Nation; wherefore Provincial or dependent Empire is not to be exerciſed by them that have the ballance of Dominion in the Province, becauſe that would bring the Government from Provinciall and dependent, to National and independent. Abſolute Monarchy, as that of the Turks, neither planteth her people at home nor abroad, otherwiſe then as Tenants for life or at will; wherefore her National and her provincial Government is all one. But in Governments that admit the Citizen or Subject unto dominion in Lands, the richeſt are they that ſhare moſt of the power at home: whereas the richeſt among the Provincials, though native Subjects, or Citizens that have been tranſplanted, are leaſt admitted to the Government abroad: for men like flowers or roots being tranſplanted take after the ſoyl wherein they grow. Wherefore the Commonwealth of Rome, by planting Colonies of her Citizens within the bound of Italy, took the beſt way of propagating her ſelf, and naturalizing the Country; whereas if ſhe had planted ſuch Colonies without the bounds of Italy, it would have alien'd the Citizens, and given a root unto liberty abroad, that might have ſprung up forraign or ſavage and hoſtile to her; wherefore ſhe never made any ſuch diſperſion of her ſelf and her ſtrength, till ſhe was under the yoke of her Emperours, who disburdening themſelves of the people, as having leſſe apprehenſion of what they could do abroad then at home, took a contrary courſe.

The Mamaluc's, (which till any man ſhew me the contrary, I ſhall preſume to have been a Common-wealth conſiſting of an Army, whereof the common Souldier was the People, the Commiſſion-Officer the Senate, and the General the Prince) were forraigners, and by Nation Circaſſians, that govern'd Ægypt; wherefore theſe never durſt plant themſelves upon Dominion, which growing naturally up into the National intereſt, ereſt muſt have diſſolved the forraign yoke in that Province.

The like in ſome ſort may be ſaid of Venice, the Government whereof is uſually miſtaken: for Venice, though ſhe do not take in the people, never excluded them. This Common-wealth, the Orders whereof are the moſt Democratical or Popular of all others, in regard of the exquiſite Rotation of the Senate, at the firſt inſtitution took in the whole people; they that now live under the Government, without participation of it, are ſuch as have ſince either voluntarily choſen ſo to do, or were ſubdued by Arms. Wherefore the Subject of Venice is governed by Provinces, and the ballance of Dominion not ſtanding, as hath been ſaid, with Provincial Government: as the Mamaluc's durſt not caſt their Government upon this ballance in their Provinces, leſt the National intereſt ſhould have rooted out the forraign; ſo neither dare the Venetians take in their Subjects upon this ballance, leſt the forraign intereſt ſhould root out the Nationall, which is that of the 3000 now governing; and by diffuſing the Common-Wealth throughout her Territories, loſe the advantage of her ſituation, by which in a great part ſhe ſubſiſteth. And ſuch alſo is the Government of the Spaniard in the Indies, unto which he deputeth Natives of his own Country, not admitting the Creolios unto the Government of thoſe Provinces; though deſcended from Spaniards.

But if a Prince or a Common-wealth may hold a Territory that is forraign in this, it may be aſked, why he may not hold one that is Native in like manner? To which I anſwer, becauſe he can hold a forreign by a Native territory, but not a Native by a Forreign; and as hitherto I have ſhewn what is not the Provinciall ballance, ſo by this anſwer it may appear what it is, namely the overballance of a native Territory to a forraign; for as one Country ballanceth it ſelf by the diſtribution of propriety according unto the proportion of the ſame, ſo one Country overballanceth another, by advantage of divers kinds. For example, the Common-wealth of Rome overballanced her provinces by the vigour of a more excellent Government oppoſed unto a crazier, or by a more exquiſite Militia oppoſed unto one inferiour in Courage or diſcipline: The like was that of the Mamaluc's being an hardy unto the Aegyptians that were a ſoft people. And the ballance of a ſituation is in this kind, of wonderfull effect; ſeeing the King of Denmark, being none of the moſt potent Princes, is able at the Sound to take Tole of the greateſt: and as this King by the advantage of the Land can make the Sea tributary; ſo Venice, by the advantage of the Sea, in whoſe arms ſhe is impregnable, can make the Land to feed her Gulph. For the Colonies in the Indies, they are yet babes that cannot live without ſucking the breaſts of their mother-Cities, but ſuch as, I miſtake, if when they come of age they do not wean themſelves: which cauſeth me to wonder at Princes that delight to be exhauſted in that way. And so much for the principles of power whether National or Provinciall, Domestick or Forraign; being such as are External, and founded in the goods of Fortune.

Authority. I come unto the principles of Authority, which are Internall, and founded upon the goods of the Mind; These the Legislator that can unite in his Government with those of fortune, cometh neareſt unto the work of God, whose Government consisteth of Heaven and Earth: which was said by Plato, though in different words, as, when Princes should be Philosophers, or Philosophers Princes, the world would be happy; and saith Solomon, There is an evil which I have seen under the Sun, which proceedeth from the Ruler, (enimvero neq; nobilem, neq; ingenuum, nec libertinum quidem armis præponere, regia utilitas est.) folly is set in great dignity, and the rich (either in vertue and wisdome, in the goods of the mind, or those of fortune upon that ballance which giveth them a sense of the Nationall interest) sit in low places. I have seen servants upon horses, and Princes walking as servants upon the earth. Sad complaints, that the principles of Power and of Authority, the goods of the mind, and of fortune, do not meet and twine in the wreathe or Crown of Empire! Wherefore if we have any thing of Piety or of prudence, let us raise our selves out of the mire of private interest, unto the contemplation of Virtue, and put an hand unto the removal of this Evil from under the Sun; this evil against which no Government that is not secured, can be good; this evill from which the Government that is secure, must be perfect. Solomon tells us, that the cause of it is from the Ruler, from those principles of power which ballanced upon earthly trash, exclude the heavenly treasures of Virtue, and that influence of it upon Government, which is Authority. We have wandered the Earth to find out the ballance of power: but to find out that of Authority, we must ascend, as I said, nearer Heaven, or to the Image of God, which is the Soul of man.

Divines

Tacit.

Grot.

The Soul of man (whose life or motion is perpetual contemplation or thought) is the Mistris of two potent rivalls, the one Reason, the other Passion, that are in continuall suit; and according as she gives up her will to these or either of them, is the felicity or misery which man partakes in this mortall life.

For as what ever was passion in the contemplation of a man, being brought forth by his will into action, is vice and the bondage of Sin; so what ever was reason in the contemplation of a man, being brought forth by his will into action, is Virtue and the freedome of Soul.

Again, as those actions of a man that were sin, acquire unto himself repentance or shame, and affect others with scorn or pity, so those actions of a man that are virtue, acquire unto himself Honour, and upon others Authority.

Now Government is no other then the Soul of a Nation or City: wherefore that which was reason in the debate of a Common-wealth, being brought forth by the result, must be virtue; and for as much as the Soul of a City or Nation is the Soveraign power, her virtue must be Law. But the Government whose Law is virtue, and whose virtue is law, is the same, whose Empire is Authority, and whose Authority is Empire.

Again, if the liberty of a man consist in the Empire of his reason, the absence whereof would betray him unto the bondage of his passions: Then the liberty of a Common-wealth consisteth in the Empire of her Lawes, the absence whereof would betray her unto the lusts of Tyrants: and these I conceive to be the principles, upon which Aristotle and Livy (injuriously accused by Leviathan for not writing out of nature) have grounded their assertion, that a Common-wealth is an Empire of Lawes and not of Men. But they must not carry it so. For, saith he, The liberty, whereof there is so frequent and honourable mention in the Histories and Philosophy of the ancient Greeks and Romans, and the writings and Discourses of those that from them have received All their Learning in the Politicks, is not the liberty of particular men, but the liberty of the Common-wealth. He might as well have said, that the Estates of particular men in a Common-wealth, are not the riches of particular men, but the riches of the Common-wealth; for equality of estates causeth equality of power, and equality of power is the liberty not onely of the Common-wealth, but of every man. But sure a man would never be thus irreverent with the greatest Authors, and positive against all Antiquity, without some certain demonstration of truth; and, what is it? Why, there is written on the Turrets of the City of Luca in great Characters at this day the word LIBERTAS, yet no man can thence infer, that a particular man hath more liberty or immunity from the service of the Common-wealth there, then in Constantinople. Whether a Common-wealth be Monarchical or Popular, the freedom is the same. The Mountain hath brought forth, and we have a little equivocation! For to say, that a Luchese hath no more liberty or immunity from the Laws of Luca, then a Turk hath from those of Constantinople; and to say that a Luchese hath no more liberty or immunity by the Lawes of Luca, then a Turk hath by those of Constantinople, are pretty different speeches: the first may be said of all Governments alike; the second scarse of any two; much lesse of these, seeing it is known, that whereas the greatest Bashaw is a Tenant as well of his head, as of his estate, at the will of his Lord; the meanest Luchese that hath Land, is a freeholder of both, and not to be controlled but by the Law, and that framed by every private man unto no other end, (or they may thank themſelves) then to protect the liberty of every private man, which by that means comes to be the liberty of the Common-wealth.

But ſeeing they that make the Lawes in Common-wealths are but men, the main queſtion ſeems to be, how a Common-wealth comes to be an Empire of Lawes, and not of Men? or how the debate or reſult of a Common-wealth is ſo ſure to be according unto reaſon; ſeeing they who debate, and they who reſolve be but men. And as often as reaſon is againſt a man, ſo often will a man be againſt reaſon.

This is thought to be a ſhrewd ſaying, but will do no harm; for be it ſo, that reaſon is nothing but intereſt, there be divers intereſts, and ſo divers reaſons.

As firſt, there is Private Reaſon, which is the intereſt of a private man.

Secondly, there is Reaſon of State, which is the intereſt (or errour as was ſaid by Solomon) of the Ruler or Rulers, that is to ſay, of the Prince, of the Nobility, or of the People.

Thirdly, there is that Reaſon which is the intereſt of mankind,
Hooker.B.1. or of the whole. Now if we ſee even in thoſe natural agents that want ſenſe, that as in themſelves they have a Law which directeth them, in the means whereby they tend to their own perfection, ſo likewiſe that another Law there is, which toucheth them as they are ſociable parts united into one body, a Law which bindeth them each to ſerve unto others good, and all to prefer the good of the whole, before whatſoever their own particular; as when ſtones or heavy things forſake their ordinary wont or center, and fly upwards, as if they heard themſelves commanded to let go the good they privately wiſh, and to relieve the preſent diſtreſſe of Nature in common. There is a common right, Law of Nature, or intereſt of the whole; which is more excellent, and ſo acknowledged to be by the agents themſelves, then the right or intereſt of the parts onely. Grot. wherefore though it may be truly ſaid, that the creatures are naturally carried forth, unto their proper utility or profit: that ought not to be taken in too general a ſenſe; ſeeing divers of them abſtain from their own profit, either in regard of thoſe of the ſame kind, or at the leaſt of their young.

Mankind then muſt either be leſſe juſt then the creature, or acknowledge alſo his common intereſt to be common right. And if reaſon be nothing elſe but intereſt, and the intereſt of mankind be the right intereſt, then the reaſon of mankind muſt be right reaſon. Now compute well, for if the intereſt of popular Government come the neareſt unto the intereſt of mankind, then the reaſon of popular Government muſt come the neareſt unto right reaſon.

But it may be ſaid, that the difficulty remains yet; for be the intereſt of popular Government right reaſon, a man doth not look

look upon reason as it is right or wrong in it self, but as it makes for him or against him: wherefore unleſſe you can ſhew ſuch orders of a Government, as like thoſe of God in nature ſhall be able to conſtrain this or that creature to ſhake off that inclination which is more peculiar unto it, and take up that which regards the common good or intereſt; all this is to no more end, then to perſwade every man in a popular Government, not to carve himſelf of that which he deſires moſt, but to be mannerly at the publick Table, and give the beſt from himſelf unto decency and the common intereſt. But that ſuch orders may be eſtabliſhed, as may, nay muſt give the upper hand in all caſes unto common right or intereſt, notwithſtanding the nearneſſe of that which ſticks unto every man in private, and this in a way of equal certainty and facility, is known even unto girles, being no other then thoſe that are of common practice with them in divers caſes. For example, two of them have a Cake yet undivided, which was given between them, that each of them therefore may have that which is due: Divide, ſayes one unto the other, and I will chooſe; or let me divide, and you ſhall chooſe: if this be but once agreed upon, it is enough: for the divident, dividing unequally loſes, in regard that the other takes the better half; wherefore ſhe divides equally, and ſo both have right. O the depth of the wiſdom of God! and yet by the mouthes of babes and ſucklings hath he ſet forth his ſtrength; that which great Philoſophers are diſputing upon in vain, is brought unto light by two ſilly girles, even the whole myſtery of a Common-wealth; which lyes only in dividing and chooſing: nor hath God (if his works in nature be underſtood) left ſo much unto mankind to diſpute upon, as who ſhall divide, and who chooſe, but diſtributed them for ever into two orders, whereof the one hath the naturall right of dividing, and the other of chooſing. For Example;

The orders of popular Government in Nature.

A Common-wealth is but a civill Society of men: let us take any number of men (as twenty), and forthwith make a Common-wealth; twenty men (if they be not all ideots, perhaps if they be) can never come ſo together, but there will be ſuch difference in them, that about a third will be wiſer, or at leaſt leſſe fooliſh then all the reſt; theſe upon acquaintance though it be but ſmall, will be diſcovered, and (as Stags that have the largeſt heads) lead the herd; for while the ſix diſcourſing and arguing one with another, ſhew the eminence of their parts, the fourteen diſcover things that they never thought on; or are cleared in divers truths which had formerly perploxed them: wherefore in matter of common concernment, difficulty or danger, they hang upon their lips as children upon their fathers, and the influence thus acquired by the ſix, the eminence of whoſe parts, is found to be a ſtay and comfort to the the fourteen, is (AUTHORITAS PATRUM) the authority of the Fathers. Wherefore this can be no other then a natural Ariſtocracy diffuſed by God throughout the whole body of mankind, to this end and purpoſe; and therefore ſuch, as the people, have not only a natural, but a poſitive obligation to make uſe of as their guides; as where the people of Iſrael are commanded to take wiſe men and underſtanding and known among their Tribes, to be made Rulers over them; the ſix then approved of, as in the preſent caſe, are the Senate, not by hereditary right, or in regard of the greatneſſe of their eſtates onely, which would tend unto ſuch power as might force or draw the people; but by election for their excellent parts, which tendeth unto the advancement of the influence of their virtue or authority that leads the people. Wherefore the office of the Senate, is not to be Commanders but Counſellors of the people; and that which is proper unto Counſellors, is firſt to debate the buſineſſe whereupon they are to give advice, and afterward to give Advice in the buſineſs whereupon they have debated; whence the Decrees of the Senate are never Lawes, nor ſo called, but SENATUSCONSULTA, and theſe being naturally framed, it is their duty (FERRE AD POPULUM) to propoſe in the caſe unto the people. Wherefore the Senate is no more then the debate of the Common-wealth. But to debate is to diſcern or put a difference between things that being alike are not the ſame, or it is ſeparating and weighing this reaſon againſt that, and that reaſon againſt this, which is dividing.

The People. The Senate then having divided, who ſhall chooſe? Ask the girles; for if ſhe that divided muſt have choſen alſo, it had been little worſe for the other, in caſe ſhe had not divided at all, but kept the whole Cake unto her ſelf, in regard that being to chooſe too, ſhe divided accordingly. Wherefore if the Senate have any farther power than to divide, the Common-wealth can never be equall. But in a Common-wealth conſiſting of a ſingle Councill, there is no other to chooſe then that which divided; whence it is, that ſuch a Councill faileth not to ſcramble, that is, to be factious; there being no other dividing of the cake in that caſe but among themſelves.

Nor is there any remedy but to have another Councill to chooſe. The wiſdom of the Few may be the light of Mankind; but the intereſt of the Few is not the profit of Mankind, nor of a Common-wealth; wherefore ſeeing we have granted intereſt to be reaſon, they muſt not chooſe, leſt it put out their light; but as the Council dividing conſiſteth of the wiſdom of the Common-wealth, ſo the Aſſembly or Councill chooſing, ſhould conſiſt of the intereſt of the Common-wealth: as the wiſdom of the Common-wealth is in the Ariſtocracy, ſo the intereſt of the Common-wealth is in the whole body of the People: and whereas this, in caſe the Common-wealth consist of an whole Nation, is too unweildy a body to be assembled, this Councill is to consist of such a Representative as may be equall, and so constituted, as can never contract any other interest then that of the whole people; the manner whereof being such as is best shewn by exemplification, I remit unto the Modell. But in the present case, the six dividing, and the fourteen choosing, must of necessity take in the whole interest of the twenty.

Common-

Dividing and choosing in the language of a Common-wealth is debating and resolving; and whatsoever upon debate of the Senate is proposed unto the people, and resolved by them is enacted (AUTHORITATE PATRUM ET JUSSU POPULI) by the authority of the Fathers, and the power of the people, which concurring make a Law.

The Magistracy.

But the Law being made, saith Leviathan, is but words and paper without the hands and swords of men; wherefore as those two orders of a Common-wealth, namely the Senate and the people are Legislative, so of necessity there must be a third to be executive of the Lawes made, and this is the Magistracy; in which order with the rest being wrought up by art, the Common-wealth consisteth of the Senate proposing, the People resolving, and the Magistracy executing: whereby partaking of the Aristocracy as in the Senate, of the Democracy as in the People, and of Monarchy as in the Magistracy, it is compleat. Now there being no other Common-wealth but this in Art or Nature, it is no wonder if Machiavill have shew'd us, that the Ancients held this onely to be good; but it seemeth strange to me, that they should hold, that there could be any other: for if there be such a thing as pure Monarchy, yet that there should be such an one as pure Aristocracy, or pure Democracy, is not in my understanding. But the Magistracy both in number and function is different in different Common-wealths: nevertheless there is one condition of it that must be the same in Every one, or it dissolves the Common-wealth where it is wanting: And this is no lesse then that as the hand of the Magistrate is the executive power of the Law, so the head of the Magistrate is answerable unto the people, that his execution be according unto the Law, by which Leviathan may see, that the hand or sword that executeth the Law is in it, and not above it.

The Orders of a Common-wealth in experience, as that of Israel.

Now whether I have rightly transcribed these Principles of a Common-wealth out of Nature, I shall appeal unto God and to the world. Unto God in the Fabrick of the Common-wealth of Israel; and unto the world in the universal Series of ancient prudence. But in regard the same Common-wealths will be open'd at large in the Council of Legislators, I shall touch them for the present, but sleightly; beginning with that of Israel.

Of Israel.

The Common-wealth of Israel consisted of the Senate, the People, and the Magistracy.

The

The People by their firſt diviſion, which was genealogical, were contained under their ten Tribes, houſes or families; whereof the firſt born in each was Prince of his Tribe, and had the leading of it (Numb. 1.) the Tribe of Levi onely being ſet apart to ſerve at the Altar, had no other Prince but the High Prieſt. In their ſecond diviſion they were divided locally by their Agrarian, (Joſ. c. 13. to c. 42.). or the diſtribution of the Land of Canaan unto them by Lot, the tythe of all remaining unto Levi; whence according unto their locall diviſion, the Tribes are reckon'd but twelve.

The People. The Aſſemblies of the people thus divided were methodically gathered by Trumpets (Num. 10. 7.) unto the Congregation; which was it ſhould ſeem of two ſorts. For if it were called by one trumpet onely, the Princes of the Tribes and the Elders onely aſſembled, (Numb. 10. 4.) but if it were called with two, the whole people gathered themſelves unto the Congregation, Num. 10. 3.) for ſo it is rendred by the Engliſh: but in the Greek it is called Eccleſia, or the Church of God, (Judg. 20. 2.) and by the Talmudiſts, Synagoga magna. The word Eccleſia was alſo anciently and properly uſed for the Civil Congregations or Aſſemblies of the people in Athens, Lacedemon, and Epheſus, where it is ſo called in Scripture, (Acts 19. 23.) though it be otherwiſe rendred by the Tranſlators, not much as I conceive to their commendations, ſeeing by that means they have loſt us a good leſſon, the Apoſtles borrowing that name for their ſpiritual Congregations, to the end that we might ſee they intended the Government of the Church to be Democratical or Popular, as is alſo plain in the reſt of their conſtitutions.

The Church or Congregation of the people of Iſrael, aſſembled in a Military manner, (Judg. 20. 2.) and had the reſult of the Common-wealth, or the power of confirming all their Lawes, though propoſed even by God himſelf, as where they make him King, (Exod. 19.) And where they reject or depoſe him as Civil Magiſtrate, and elect Saul, (1 Sam. 8. 7.) it is manifeſt that he giveth no ſuch example unto a Legiſlator in a popular Government, as to deny or evade the power of the people, which were a contradiction: but, though he deſervedly blame the ingratitude of the people in that action, commandeth Samuel, being next under himſelf Supream Magiſtrate, to hearken unto their voyce, (for where the ſuffrage of the people goes for nothing, it is no Common-wealth) and comforteth him, ſaying, They have not rejected thee, but they have rejected me, that I ſhould not reign over them. But to reject him that he ſhould not reign over them, was as Civill Magiſtrate to depoſe him. The power therefore which the people had to depoſe even God himſelf as he was Civil Magiſtrate, leaveth little doubt, but that they had power to have rejected any of thoſe Lawes confirmed by them them throughout the Scripture, which (to omit the ſeverall parcels) are generally contained (Deut. 29.) under two heads, thoſe that were made by Covenant with the people in the Land of Moab, and thoſe which were made by Covenant with the people in Horeb: which two, I think, amount unto the whole body of the Iſraelitiſh Lawes: but if all and every one of the Lawes of Iſrael being propoſed by God, were no otherwiſe enacted than by Covenant with the people, then that onely which was reſolved by the people of Iſrael, was their Law; and ſo the reſult of that Common-wealth was in the people. Nor had the people the reſult only in matter of Law: but the power in ſome caſes of Judicature, (Joſ. 7. 16. Judg. 20. 8, 9, 10.) as alſo the right of leuying War, (Judg. 20. 8, 9, 10. 1 Sam. 7. 6, 7, 8.) cognizance in matter of Religion, (1 Chron. 13. 2. 2 Chron. 30. 4.) and the election of their Magiſtrates, as the Judge or Dictator, (Judg. 11. 11.) The King, (1 Sam. 10. 17.) The Prince, (1 Machab. 14.) which functions were exerciſed by the Synagoga magna, or Congregation of Iſrael not alwayes in one manner: for ſometimes they were performed by the ſuffrage of the people, viva voce, (Ex. 9. 3, 4, 5.) ſometimes by the Lot onely, (Joſ. 7. 1 Sam. 10.) and ſometimes by the Ballot or by a mixture of the lot with the ſuffrage, as in the caſe of Eldad and Medad, which I ſhall open with the Senate.

The Senate of Iſrael called in the Old Teſtament the ſeventy Elders: and in the New the Sanhedrim; which word is uſually tranſlated the Council: was appointed by God, and conſiſted of Seventy Elders beſides Moſes, (Num. 11.) which were at the firſt elected by the people, (Deut. 1.) but in what manner, is rather intimated (Numb. 11.) then ſhewn: nevertheleſſe, becauſe I cannot otherwiſe underſtand the paſſage concerning Eldad and Medad, of whom it is ſaid, that they were of them that were written, but went not up unto the Tabernacle; then with the Talmudiſts, I conceive that Eldad and Medad had the ſuffrage of the Tribes, and ſo were written as competitors for Magiſtracy; but coming afterwards unto the Lot, failed of it, and therefore went not up unto the Tabernacle, or place of confirmation by God, or to the Seſſion-houſe of the Senate with the Seventy upon whom the lot fell to be Senators: for the Seſſion houſe of the Sanhedrim was firſt in the Court of the Tabernacle, and afterwards in that of the Temple, where it came to be called the Stone Chamber or Pavement, (John) If this were the Ballot of Iſrael, that of Venice is the ſame tranſpoſed: for in Venice the competitor is choſen as it were by the lot, in regard that the Electors are ſo made, and the Magiſtrate is choſen by the Suffrage of the great Council or Aſſembly of the people. But the Sanhedrim of Iſrael being thus conſtituted, Moſes for his time, and after him his ſucceſſour, ſate in the midſt of it as Prince or Archon, The Senate.

and at his left hand the Orator or Father of the Senate, the reſt of the bench coming round with either horn like a Creſcent, had a Scribe attending upon the tip of it.

The Senate in regard that the Legiſlator of Iſrael was infallible, and the Laws given by God, ſuch as were not fit to be alter'd by men, is much different in the exerciſe of their power from all other Senates, except that of the Areopagites in Athens, which alſo was little more then a Supream Judicatory; for it will hardly, as I conceive, be found that the Sanhedrim propoſed unto the people, till the return of the Children of Iſrael out of Captivity under Eſdras, at which time there was a new Law made, namely, for a kind of excommunication, or rather baniſhment, which had never been before in Iſrael: nevertheleſſe it is not to be thought that the Sanhedrim had not alwaies that right, which from the time of Eſdras it more frequently exerciſed, of propoſing unto the people, but that they forbare it in regard of the fulneſſe and infallibility of the Law already made, whereby it was needleſſe. Wherefore the function of this Council, which is very rare in a Senate, was executive, and conſiſted in the adminiſtration of the Law made (*Deut.*17.9,10,11.); and whereas the Council it ſelf, is often underſtood in Scripture by the Prieſt and the Levite: there is no more in that, ſave onely that the Prieſts and the Levites, who otherwiſe had no power at all, being in the younger years of this Common-wealth, thoſe that were beſt ſtudied in the Lawes were the moſt frequently elected into the Sanhedrim. For the Courts conſiſting of three and twenty Elders ſitting in the gates of every City, and the Triumvirates of Judges, conſtituted almoſt in every village, which were parts of the executive Magiſtracy ſubordinate unto the Sanhedrim, I ſhall take them at better leiſure, and in the larger Diſcourſe; but theſe being that part of this Common-Wealth which was inſtituted by Moſes upon the advice of Jethro the Prieſt of Midian, (Exo. 18.) as I conceive an Heathen; are unto me a ſufficient warrant even from God himſelf who confirmed them, to make farther uſe of humane prudence where ever I find it, bearing a teſtimony unto it ſelf, whether in Heathen Common-wealths or others. And the rather, becauſe ſo it is, that we who have the holy Scriptures, and in them the Original of a Common-wealth made by the ſame hand that made the World, are either altogether blind or negligent of it, while the Heathens have all written theirs, as if they had had no other Copy. As, to be more brief in the preſent account of that which you ſhall have more at large hereafter,

The Magiſtracy.

Athens conſiſted of the Senate of the Bean propoſing, of the Church or Aſſembly of the people reſolving and too often debating, which was the ruine of it, as alſo of the Senate of the Areopagites, Areopagites, the 9. Archons, with divers other Magistrates executing.

Lacedemon consisted of the Senate proposing, of the Church or Congregation of the people resolving onely, and never debating; which was the long life of it; and of the two Kings, the Court of the Ephors, with divers other Magistrates executing. Of Lacedemon.

Carthage consisted of the Senate proposing and sometimes resolving too, of the people resolving and sometimes debating too, for which fault she was reprehended by Aristotle, and she had her Suffetes, and her hundred men with other Magistrates executing. Of Carthage

Rome consisted of the Senate proposing, the Concio or people resolving and too often debating, which caused her storms; as also of the Consuls, Censors, Ædiles, Tribunes, Prætors, Quæstors, and other Magistrates executing. Of Rome.

Venice consisteth of the Senate or Pregati proposing, and sometimes resolving too, of the great Council or Assembly of the people, in whom the result is constitutively; as also of the Doge, the Signory, the Censors, the Dieci, the Quazancies, and other Magistrates executing. Of Venice.

The proceeding of the Common-wealths of Switzerland and Holland is of a like nature, though after a more obscure manner; for the Soveraignties, whether Cantons Provinces or Cities, which are the people, send their Deputies Commissioned and instructed by themselves (wherein they reserve the result in their own power) unto the Provincial or general Convention or Senate, where the Deputies debate, but have no other power of result then what was conferred upon them by the people, or is farther conferred by the same upon farther occasion. And for the executive part they have Magistrates or Judges in every Canton Province or City; besides those which are more publick, and relate unto the league, as for controversies between one Canton, Province or City, and another, or the like between such persons as are not of the same Canton Province or City. Of Switz & Holland.

But that we may observe a little farther how the Heathen Polititians have written, not onely out of nature, but as it were out of Scripture: As in the Common-wealth of Israel, God is said to have been King; so the Common-wealth where the Law is King, is said by Aristotle to be Kingdom of God. And where by the lusts or passions of men, a power is set above that of the Law deriving from reason, which is the dictate of God; God in that sense is rejected or deposed that he should not reign over them, as he was in Israel. And yet Leviathan will have it, that by reading of these Greek and Latine (he might as well in this sense have said, Hebrew) Authors, young men and all others that are unprovided of the antidote of solid reason, receiving a strong and delightfull impression of the great exploits of War, atchieved by the Conductors of Page 170.

their Armies, receive withall a pleasing Idea of all they have done besides: and imagine their great prosperity, not to have proceeded from the emulation of particular men, but from the virtue of their popular form of Government: not considering the frequent seditions and Civil wars produced by the imperfection of their Policy. Where first the blame he layes to the Heathen Authors, is in his sense laid unto the Scripture; and whereas he holds them to be young men, or men of no antidote that are of like opinions, it should seem that Machiavill the sole retreiver of this ancient Prudence, is to his solid reason a beardlesse boy that hath newly read Livy: and how solid his reason is, may appear; Where he grants the great prosperity of ancient Common-wealths: which is to give up the controversie: For such an effect must have some adequate cause; which to evade, he insinuates, that it was nothing else but the emulation of particular men; as if so great an emulation could have been generated without as great virtue; so great virtue without the best education; the best education without the best Lawes; or the best Lawes any otherwise then by the excellency of their policy.

But if some of these Common-Wealths as being lesse perfect in their policy then others, have been more seditious, it is not more an argument of the infirmity of this or that Common-wealth in particular, then of the excellency of that kind of Policy in generall, which if they that have not altogether reached, have nevertheless had greater prosperity; what would befall them that should reach?

In answer to which question, let me invite Leviathan, who of all other Governments giveth the advantage unto Monarchy for perfection, to a better disquisition of it, by these three assertions:

The first, That the perfection of Government lyeth upon such a libration in the frame of it, that no man or men, in or under it, can have the interest; or having the interest, can have the power to disturb it with sedition.

The second, That Monarchy reaching the perfection of the kind, reacheth not unto the perfection of Government, but must have some dangerous flaw in it.

The third, That Popular Government reaching the perfection of the kind, reacheth the perfection of Government; and hath no flaw in it.

The first assertion requireth no proof.

For the proof of the second; Monarchy, as hath been shewn, is of two kinds, the one by Arms, the other by a Nobility; and there is no other kind in art or nature: for if there have been anciently some Governments called Kingdoms, as one of the Gothes in Spain, and another of the Vandals in Africa, where the King ruled without a Nobility, and by a Council of the people

ple only; it is expreſly ſaid by the Authors that mention them, that the Kings were but the Captains, and that the people not onely gave them Lawes, but depoſed them as often as they pleaſed; nor is it poſſible in reaſon that it ſhould be otherwiſe in like caſes: wherefore theſe were either no Monarchies, or had greater flawes in them then any other.

But for a Monarchy by Arms as that of the Turk, (which of all models that ever were cometh up unto the perfection of the kind) it is not in the wit or power of man to cure it of this dangerous flaw, That the Janizaries have frequent intereſt and perpetual power to raiſe ſedition, and to tear the Magiſtrate, even the Prince himſelf, in pieces. Therefore the Monarchy of Turky is no perfect Government.

And for a Monarchy by a Nobility as of late in Oceana (which of all other models before the declination of it came up to the perfection in that kind) it was not in the power or wit of man to cure it of that dangerous flaw; That the Nobility had frequent intereſt and perpetuall power by their retainers and tenants to raiſe ſedition, and (whereas the Janizaries occaſion this kind of calamity, no ſooner then they make an end of it) to levy a laſting War, unto the vaſt effuſion of blood, and that even upon occaſions wherein the people, but for their dependance upon their Lords had no concernment, as in the Fewd of the Red and White. The like hath been frequent in Spain, France, Germany, and other Monarchies of this kind; wherefore Monarchy by a Nobility is no perfect Government.

For the proof of the third Aſſertion, Leviathan yieldeth it unto me, that there is no other Common-wealth but Monarchical or Popular: wherefore if no Monarchy be a perfect Government, then either there is no perfect Government, or it muſt be popular; for which kind of conſtitution I have ſomething more to ſay, then Leviathan hath ſaid, or ever will be able to ſay for Monarchy; as,

1. That it is the Government that was never conquered by any Monarch, from the beginning of the World unto this day: for if the Common-wealth of Greece came under the yoke of the Kings of Macedon, they were firſt broken by themſelves.

2. That it is the Government that hath frequently led mighty Monarchs in Triumph.

3. That it is the Government, which if it have been Seditious, it hath not been from any imperfection in the kind, but in the particular conſtitution; which where ever the like hath happened, muſt have been unequall.

4. That it is the Government, which if it have been any thing near equall, was never ſeditious; or let him ſhew me what ſedition hath happened in Lacedemon or Venice.

5. That it is the Government, which attaining unto perfect equality, equality, hath such a libration in the frame of it, that no man living can shew which way any man or men in or under it, can contract any such interest or power as should be able to disturb the Common-wealth with sedition; wherefore an equal Common-wealth is that onely which is without flaw, and containeth in it the full perfection of Government. But to return.

By what hath been shewn in reason and experience it may appear, that though Common-wealths in generall be Governments of the Senate proposing, the people resolving, and the Magistracy executing; yet some are not so good at these orders as others, through some impediment or defect in the frame, ballance, or capacity of them, according unto which they are of divers kinds.

Division of Common-Wealths. The first division of them is into such as are single as Israel, Athens, Lacedemon, &c. and such as are by leagues, as those of the Achæans, Ætolians, Lyceans, Switz and Hollanders.

The second (being Machiavil's) is into such as are for preservation, as Lacedemon and Venice, and such as are for encrease, as Athens and Rome, in which I can see no more, then that the former taketh in no more Citizens then are necessary for defence, and the latter so many as are capable of encrease.

The third division (unseen hitherto) is into equall and unequall, and this is the main point especially as to domestick peace and tranquillity; for to make a Common-wealth unequall, is to divide it into parties, which setteth them at perpetuall variance, the one party endeavouring to preserve their eminence and inequality, and the other to attain unto equality; whence the people of Rome derived their perpetuall strife with the Nobility or Senate: but in an equal Common-wealth, there can be no more strife then there can be over-ballance in equall weights; wherefore the Common-wealth of Venice, being that which of all others is the most equal in the constitution, is that wherein there never happen'd any strife between the Senate and the people.

An equall Common-wealth is such an one, as is equall both in the ballance and foundation, and in the superstructures, that is to say, in her Agrarian Law, and in her Rotation.

Equal Agrarian. An equal Agrarian is a perpetuall Law establishing and preserving the ballance of dominion, by such a distribution, that no one man or number of men within the compasse of the Few or Aristocracy, can come to overpower the whole people by their possessions in Lands.

As the Agrarian answereth unto the Foundation, so doth Rotation unto the Superstructures.

Rotation. Equal Rotation is equall vicissitude in Government, or Succession unto Magistracy conferred for such convenient terms, enjoying equall Vacations, as take in the whole body by parts, succeeding ceeding others through the free election or ſuffrage of the People.

The contrary whereunto is Prolongation of Magiſtracy, which traſhing the wheel of Rotation, deſtroyes the life or natural motion of a Common-wealth. Prolongation of Magiſtracy.

The election or ſuffrage of the people, is freeſt, where it is made or given in ſuch a manner, that it can neither oblige (qui beneficium accepit libertatem vendidit) nor diſoblige another; or through fear of an enemy, or baſhfulneſſe towards a friend, impair a mans liberty. Ballot.

Wherefore ſaith Cicero, (Grata populo eſt tabella quæ frontes aperit hominum, mentes tegit, datq; eam libertatem ut quod velint faciant) the Tablet (or Ballot of the people of Rome, who gave their votes by throwing tablets or little pieces of wood ſecretly into Urns marked for the negative or affirmative) was a welcome conſtitution, unto the people, as that which not impairing the aſſurance of their browes, encreaſed the freedom of their Judgment. I have not ſtood upon a more particular deſcription of this Ballot, becauſe that of Venice exemplify'd in the modell is of all others the moſt perfect.

An equal Common-wealth (by that which hath been ſaid) is a Government eſtabliſhed upon an equall Agrarian, ariſing into the ſuperſtructures or three orders, the Senate debating and propoſing, the people reſolving, and the Magiſtracy executing by an equal Rotation through the ſuffrage of the people given by the Ballot. For though Rotation may be without the Ballot, and the Ballot without Rotation, yet the Ballot not onely as to the enſuing Modell includeth both, but is by far the moſt equal way; for which cauſe under the name of the Ballot I ſhall hereafter underſtand both that and Rotation too. Definition of an equall Common-wealth.

Now having reaſon'd the principles of an equall Common-wealth, I ſhould come to give an inſtance of ſuch an one in experience, if I could find it; but if this work be of any value, it lyeth in that it is the firſt example of a Common-wealth that is perfectly equall. For Venice though ſhe come the neareſt, yet is a Common-wealth for preſervation; and ſuch an one, conſidering the paucity of Citizens taken in, and the number not taken in, is externally unequal: and though every Common-wealth that holdeth Provinces muſt in that regard be ſuch; yet not unto that degree. Nevertheleſſe Venice internally and for her capacity is by far the moſt equall; though ſhe hath not in my judgment arrived at the full perfection of equality; both becauſe her Lawes ſupplying the defect of an Agrarian, are not ſo clear nor effectual at the foundation, nor her ſuperſtructures by the vertue of her Ballot or Rotation exactly librated, in regard that through the paucity of her Citizens, her greater Magiſtracies are continually wheeled through a few hands. As is confeſſed by by Janotti, where he ſaith, that if a Gentleman come once to be Savio di terra ferma, it ſeldom happens that he faileth from thenceforward to be adorned with ſome one of the greater Magiſtracies, as Savi di mare, Savi di terra ferma, Savi Grandi, Counſellors, thoſe of the Decemvirate or Dictatorian Council, the Aurogatori or Cenſors which require no vacation or interval: wherefore if this in Venice, or that in Lacedemon, where the Kings were hereditary, and the Senators (though elected by the people) for life, cauſe no inequality (which is hard to be conceived) in a Common-wealth for preſervation, or ſuch an one as conſiſteth of a few Citizens; yet is it manifeſt, that it would cauſe a very great one in a Common-wealth for encreaſe, or conſiſting of the Many, which by the engroſſing the Magiſtracies in a few hands, would be obſtructed in their Rotation.

But there be that ſay, (and think it a ſtrong Objection) let a Common-wealth be as equal as you can imagine, two or three men when all is done will govern it: and there is that in it, which notwithſtanding the pretended ſufficiency of a popular State, amounteth unto a plain confeſſion of the imbecillity of that Policy, and of the prerogative of Monarchy; for as much as popular Governments in difficult caſes have had recourſe unto Dictatorian power, as in Rome.

To which I anſwer, That as truth is a Spark whereunto objections are like bellowes; ſo, in this, our Common-wealth ſhines: for the eminence acquired by ſuffrage of the people in a Common-wealth, eſpecially if it be popular and equall, can be aſcended by no other ſteps then the univerſall acknowledgment of virtue; and where men excell in Virtue, the Common-wealth is ſtupid and unjuſt, if accordingly they do not excell in Authority: wherefore this is both the advantage of Virtue, which hath her due encouragement, and the Common-wealth which hath her due ſervices. Theſe are the Philoſophers which Plato would have to be Princes; the Princes which Solomon would have to be mounted, and their Steeds are thoſe of Authority not Empire; or, if they be buckled to the Chariot of Empire, as that of the Dictatorian power, like the Chariot of the Sun it is glorious for terms and vacations or intervals. And as a Common-wealth is a Government of Lawes and not of Men; ſo is this the Principality of the Virtue, and not of the Man; if that fail or ſet in one, it ſucceeds in another, which is created his immediate Succeſſour.

(— Uno avulſo non deficit alter, Aureus, et ſimili frondeſcit virga metallo.)

And this taketh away that vanity from under the Sun, which is an errour proceeding more or leſſe from all other Rulers under heaven but an equal Common-wealth.

Theſe things conſidered, it will be convenient in this place to ſpeak a word unto ſuch as go about to inſinuate to the Nobility lity or Gentry a fear of the people; or into the people a fear of the Nobility or Gentry, as if their interests were each destructive unto other, when in truth an Army may as well consist of Souldiers without Officers, or of Officers without Souldiers, as a Common-wealth, especially such an one as is capable of greatness, of a people without a Gentry, or of a Gentry without a people. Wherefore this (though not alwaies so intended, as may appear by Machiavill, who else would be guilty) is a pernicious error unto There is something first in the making of a Common-wealth, then in the governing of her, and last of all in the leading of her Armies; which, though there be great Divines, great Lawyers, great men in all professions, seems to be peculiar unto the Genius of a Gentleman. For so it is in the universall series of Story, that if any man have founded a Common-wealth, he was first a Gentleman. Moses had his education by the daughter of Pharaoh; Theseus and Solon of noble birth, were held by the Athenians worthy to be Kings; Lycurgus was of the blood-Royal, Romulus and Numa Princes, Brutus and Publicola Patricians, the Gracchi that lost their lives for the people of Rome, and the restitution of that Common-wealth, were the sonnes of a Father adorned with two Triumphs; and of Cornelia the daughter of Scipio, who being sought in marriage by King Ptolomy, disdained to be the Queen of Egypt. And the most renowned Olphaus Megaletor; sole Legislator (as you will see) of the Common-wealth of Oceana, was derived from a noble Family: nor will it be any occasion of scruple in this case, that Leviathan affirms the Politicks to be no ancienter then his Book De Cive. Such also as have gotten any fame in the Civill Government of a Common-wealth, or by the leading of her Armies, have been Gentlemen; for so in all other respects were those plebeian Magistrates elected by the people of Rome, being of known descents, and of equall virtues, save onely that they were excluded from the name by the usurpation of the Patricians. Holland, through this defect at home, hath borrowed Princes for her Generals, and Gentlemen for her Commanders, of divers Nations: And Switz, if she have defect in this kind, rather lendeth her people unto the Colours of other Princes, then maketh that noble use of them her self; which should assert the liberty of mankind. For where there is not a Nobility to bolt out the people, they are slothfull, regardless of the world and the publick interest of liberty, as even that of Rome had been without her Gentry: wherefore let the people embrace the Gentry in peace, as the light of their eyes, and in War as the trophy of their Arms. And if Cornelia disdained to be Queen of Egypt, if a Roman Consul looked down from his Tribunal upon the greatest King; Let the Nobility love and cherish the people that afford them a Throne so much higher in a Common-wealth,

Unequall Common-wealth.

But if the equality of a Common-wealth conſiſt in the equality firſt of the Agrarian, and next of the Rotation; then the inequality of a Common-wealth muſt conſiſt in the abſence or inequality of the Agrarian, or of the Rotation, or of both.

Iſrael and Lacedemon, which Common-wealths (as the people of this in, Joſephus, claims kindred of that) have great reſemblance, were each of them equall in their Agrarian, and unequall in their Rotation, eſpecially Iſrael, where the Sanhedrin or Senate firſt elected by the people, as appeareth by the words of Moſes, took upon them thenceforth without any precept of God to ſubſtitute their Succeſſors by Ordination; which having been there of Civil uſe, as excommunication, community of goods, and other cuſtomes of the Eſſeans, who were many of them converted, came afterwards to be introduced into the Chriſtian Church. And the election of the Judge, Suffes, or Dictator was irregular, both for the occaſion, the term, and the vacation of that Magiſtracy; as you find in the Book of Judges, where it is often repeated, that in thoſe dayes there was no King in Iſrael, that is, no Judge: and in the firſt of Samuel, where Eli judged Iſrael fourty years, and Samuel all his life: In Lacedemon the election of the Senate being by ſuffrage of the People; though for life was not altogether ſo unequal, but the hereditary right of Kings, but for the Agrarian, had ruin'd her.

Athens and Rome were unequall as to their Agrarian, that of Athens being infirm, and that of Rome none at all; for if it were more anciently carried, it was never kept. Whence by the time of Tyberius Gracchus the Nobility had almoſt eaten the people quite out of their Lands, which they held in the occupation of Tenants and ſervants: Whereupon the remedy being too late, and too vehemently applyed, that Common-wealth was ruin'd.

Theſe alſo were unequal in their Rotation, but in a contrary manner: Athens, in regard that the Senate choſen at once by Lot, not by ſuffrage, and changed every year not in part, but the whole, conſiſted not of the naturall Ariſtocracy, nor ſitting long enough to underſtand, or be perfect in their office, had no ſufficient Authority to withhold the people from that perpetual turbulence in the way which was ruine in the end, in deſpight of Nicias, who did what a man could do to help it. But as Athens by the headineſſe of the people, ſo Rome fell by the ambition of the Nobility, through the want of an equall Rotation, which if the people had had into the Senate, and timely into the Magiſtracies; whereof the former was alwaies uſurped by the Patricians, and the latter for the moſt part; they had both carried and held their Agrarian, and that had rendred that Common-wealth immoveable.

But

But let a Common-wealth be equall or unequall, it muſt conſiſt, as hath been ſhewn by reaſon and all experience, of the three generall Orders, that is to ſay, of the Senate debating and propoſing, of the People reſolving, and of the Magiſtracy executing; wherefore I can never wonder enough at Leviathan, who without any reaſon or example will have it, that a Common-wealth conſiſteth of a ſingle Perſon, or of a ſingle Aſſembly; nor ſufficiently pity that thouſand Gentlemen, whoſe minds which otherwiſe would have wauer'd, he hath framed (as is affirmed by himſelf) unto a conſcientious obedience (for ſo he is pleaſed to call it) of ſuch a Government.

But to finiſh this part of the Diſcourſe, which I intend for as compleat an Epitome of ancient Prudence, and in that of the whole Art of the Politicks, as I am able to frame in ſo ſhort a time.

The two firſt Orders, that is to ſay, the Senate and the People are Legiſlative, whereunto anſwers that part of this Science which by Politicians is intituled DE LEGIBUS, or of Lawes, and the third order is executive, to which anſwers that part of the ſame Science which is ſtyled DE JUDICIIS, or of the frame, and courſe of Courts or Judicatories; A word unto each of theſe will be neceſſary.

And firſt for Lawes, they are either Eccleſiaſtical or Civil, ſuch as concern Religion or Government. De Legibus.

Lawes Eccleſiaſtical or ſuch as concern Religion, according unto the univerſal courſe of ancient Prudence, are in the power of the Magiſtrate; according unto the common practice of modern prudence, ſince the Papacy, torn out of his hands.

But, as a Government pretending unto Liberty, and ſuppreſſing the liberty of conſcience, which (becauſe Religion not according to a man's conſcience, can as to him be none at all) is the main, muſt be a contradiction; ſo, a man that pleading for the liberty of private conſcience, refuſeth liberty unto the National conſcience, muſt be abſurd.

A Common-wealth is nothing elſe but the National Conſcience. And if the conviction of a mans private conſcience, produce his private Religion: the conviction of the national conſcience, muſt produce a national Religion. Whether this be well reaſon'd, as alſo whether theſe two may ſtand together, will beſt be ſhewn by the examples of the ancient Common-wealths taken in their order.

In that of Iſrael the Government of the National Religion appertained not unto the Prieſts and Levites, otherwiſe then as they happen'd to be of the Sanhedrim or Senate, to which they had no right at all but by election. It is in this capacity therefore that the people are commanded under pain of death, to hearken unto them, and to do according to the ſentence of the Law which they ſhould teach; but in Iſrael the Law Eccleſiaſticall and Civill was the ſame, therefore the Sanhedrim having the power Deut. 17.

of one; had the power of both. But as the National Religion appertained unto the Juriſdiction of the Sanhedrim, ſo the liberty of conſcience appertained from the ſame date and by the ſame right, unto the Prophets and their diſciples; as where it is ſaid, Deut. 18. 18. I will raiſe up a Prophet —— and whoſoever will not hearken unto my words which he ſhall ſpeak in my Name, I will require it of him; The words relate unto prophetick right, which was above all the 2 Kings 1. Orders of this Common-wealth; whence Elijah not only refuſed to obey the King, but deſtroyed his meſſengers with fire: And whereas it was not lawfull by the National Religion to ſacrifice in any other place then the Temple, a Prophet was his own Temple, 1 King. 18. 19. and might ſacrifice where he would, as Elijah did in Mount Carmel. By this right John the Baptiſt and our Saviour, unto whom it more particularly related, had their diſciples, and taught the people; whence is derived our preſent right of GATHERED CONGREGATIONS: Wherefore the Chriſtian Religion grew up according unto the Orders of the Common-wealth of Iſrael, and not againſt them. Nor was Liberty of Conſcience infringed by this Government, till the civil liberty of the ſame was loſt, as under Herod, Pilate, and Tiberius, a three pil'd Tyranny.

To proceed, Athens preſerved her Religion, by the teſtimony of Paul, with great ſuperſtition: If Alcibiades that Atheiſticall fellow had not ſhew'd them a pair of heeles, they had ſhaven off his head for ſhaving their Mercuries, and making their Gods look ridiculouſly upon them without beards. Nevertheleſſe, if Paul reaſoned with them, they loved news, for which he was the more welcome; and if he converted Dionyſius the Areopagite, that is, one of the Senators, there followed neither any hurt unto him, nor loſſe of honour to Dionyſius. And for Rome; if Cicero in his moſt excellent book, De natura Deorum, overthrew the National Religion of that Common-wealth, he was never the farther from being Conſul. But there is a meanneſſe and poorneſſe in modern prudence, not only unto the damage of Civil Government, but of Religion it ſelf: for to make a man in matter of Religion, which admitteth not of ſenſible demonſtration (jurare in verba Magiſtri) engage to believe no otherwiſe then is believed by my Lord Biſhop, or Goodman Presbyter, is a Pedantiſme, that hath made the ſword to be a rod in the hands of School-maſters: by which means, whereas Chriſtian Religion is the fartheſt off any from countenancing War, there never was a War of Religion but ſince Chriſtianity. For which we are beholding unto the POPE; for the Pope not giving liberty of conſcience unto Princes and Common-wealths, they cannot give that unto their Subjects which they have not: whence both Princes and Subjects either through his inſtigation, or diſputes among themſelves, have introduced that execrable cuſtom, never known in the world before, of fighting for Religion, and denying denying the Magiſtrate to have any Juriſdiction of it; whereas the Magiſtrate's loſing the power of Religion, loſeth the liberty of conſcience which in that caſe hath nothing to protect it. But if the people be otherwiſe taught, it concerns them to look about, and diſtinguiſh between the ſhreeking of the Lapwing, and the voice of the Turtle.

To come unto Civil Laws, if they ſtand one way, and the ballance another, it is the caſe of a Government which of neceſſity muſt be new modell'd; wherefore your Lawyers adviſing you upon like occaſions to fit your Government unto their Lawes, are no more to be regarded, then your Taylor if he ſhould deſire you to fit your body unto his doublet; there is alſo danger in the plauſible pretence of reforming the Law, except the Government be firſt good, in which caſe it is a good tree, and (trouble not your ſelves overmuch) bringeth not forth evill fruit; otherwiſe, if the Tree be evil, you can never reform the fruit: or if a root that is naught bring forth fruit of this kind that ſeemeth to be good; take the more heed, for it is the ranker poiſon. It was no-wiſe probable, if Auguſtus had not made excellent Lawes, that the bowels of Rome could have come to be ſo miſerably eaten out by the Tyranny of Tiberius and his Succeſſors. The beſt rule as to your Lawes in general, is, that they be few. Rome by the teſtimony of Cicero was beſt governed under thoſe of the twelve Tables; (and by that of Tacitus, Plurimæ leges, corruptiſſima reſpublica) You will be told, That where the Lawes be few, they leave much unto arbitrary power; but where they be many, they leave more; the Lawes in this caſe according to Juſtinian and the beſt Lawyers, being as litigious as the Suitors. Solon made few; Lycurgus fewer Lawes: Common-wealths have feweſt at this day of all other Governments. And to conclude this part with a word de Judiciis, or of the Conſtitution or courſe of Courts; it is a diſcourſe not otherwiſe capable of being well menaged but by particular examples, both the conſtitution and courſe of Courts being divers in different Governments, but beſt beyond compare in Venice, where they regard not ſo much the arbitrary power of their Courts, as the conſtitution of them; whereby that arbitrary power being altogether unable to retard or do hurt unto buſineſſe, produceth and muſt produce the quickeſt diſpatch, and the moſt righteous dictates of Juſtice that are perhaps in humane nature. The manner I ſhall not ſtand in this place to deſcribe, becauſe it is exemplify'd at large in the Judicature of the people of Oceana. And thus much of ancient Prudence, and the firſt branch of this Preliminary Diſcourſe.

De Judiciis.

The

The Second Part of the Preliminaries.

IN the Second Part I ſhall endeavour to ſhew the Riſe, Progreſſe, and Declination of Moderne Prudence.

The date of this kind of Policy is to be computed, as was ſhewn, from thoſe Inundations of Goths, Vandals, Hunnes, and Lombards that overwhelmed the Roman Empire. But as there is no appearance in the bulk or conſtitution of Moderne Prudence, that ſhe ſhould ever have been able to come up and Grapple with the Ancient, ſo ſomthing of neceſſity muſt have interpoſed, whereby This came to be enervated, and That to receive ſtrength and encouragement: And this was, the execrable raign of the Roman Emperours taking riſe from (that fælix ſcelus) the Arms of Cæſar, in which ſtorm the ſhip of the Roman Common-wealth was forced to disburthen her ſelf of that precious fraight, which never ſince could emerge or raiſe the head but in the Gulph of Venice.

The tranſition of Ancient into Modern Prudence.

It is ſaid in Scripture, Thy evil is of thy ſelf, O Iſrael! to which anſwers that of the Moraliſts, Nemo nocetur niſi ex ſe, as alſo the whole matter of the Politicks; at preſent this Example of the Romans, who, through a negligence committed in their Agrarian Lawes, let-in the ſink of Luxury, and forfeited the ineſtimable treaſure of Liberty for themſelves and poſterity.

The Agrarian Lawes of the Romans. Sigonius de Ant. Ro.

Their Agrarian Laws were ſuch, whereby their Lands ought to have been divided among the people, either without mention of a Colony, in which caſe they were not obliged to change their abode; or with mention and upon condition of a Colony, in which caſe they were to change their abode, and leaving the City to plant themſelves upon the Lands ſo aſſigned. The Lands aſſigned, or that ought to have been aſſigned in either of theſe wayes, were of three kinds. Such as were taken from the enemy and diſtributed unto the people; or ſuch as were taken from the enemy, and under colour of being reſerved unto the publick uſe, were by ſtealth poſſeſſed by the Nobility; or ſuch as were bought with the publick Money to be diſtributed. Of the Lawes offer'd in theſe caſes, thoſe which divided the Lands taken from the Enemy, or purchaſed with the publick money, never occaſioned any diſpute; but ſuch as drove at diſpoſſeſſing the Nobility of their Uſurpations, and dividing the common purchaſe of the ſword among the people, were never touched but they cauſed Earthquakes, nor could ever be obtained by the people; or being obtained, be obſerved by the Nobility, who not onely preſerved their prey, but growing vaſtly vaſtly rich upon it, bought the people by degrees quite out of thoſe ſhares that had been conferred upon them. This the Gracchi coming too late to perceive, found the Ballance of the Common-wealth to be loſt; but putting the people (when they had leaſt force) by forcible means unto the recovery of it, did ill, ſeeing it neither could, nor did tend unto any more then to ſhew them by worſe effects, that what the Wiſdome of their Leaders had diſcovered was true; for (quite contrary unto what hath happened in Oceana, where, the ballance falling into the people, they have overthrown the Nobility) the Nobility of Rome under the conduct of Sylla, overthrew the people and the Common-wealth; ſeeing Scylla firſt introduced that new ballance, which was the Foundation of the ſucceeding Monarchy, in the plantation of Military Colonies; inſtituted by his diſtribution of the conquered Lands not now of Enemies, but of Citizens unto fourty ſeven Legions of his Souldiers; ſo that how he came to be DICTATOR PERPETUUS, or other Magiſtrates to ſucceed him in like power, is no Miracle.

Military Colonies.

Theſe Military Colonies, in which manner ſucceeding Emperours continued (as Auguſtus by the diſtribution of the Veterans, whereby he had overcome Brutus and Caſſius) to plant their Souldiery, conſiſted of ſuch as I conceive were they that are called Milites beneficiarii; in regard that the Tenure of their Lands was by way of Benefices, that is for life, and upon condition of duty or ſervice in the War upon their own charge. Theſe Benefices Alexander Severus granted unto the Heirs of the Incumbents, but upon the ſame conditions: And ſuch was the Dominion by which the Roman Emperours gave their Ballance. But to the Beneficiaries, as was no leſſe than neceſſary, for the ſafety of the Prince, a matter of eight thouſand, by the Example of Auguſtus, were added, which departed not from his ſides, but were his perpetuall guard, called Pretorian Bands; though theſe, according to the incurable flaw already obſerved in this kind of Government, became the moſt frequent Butchers of their Lords that are to be found in Story. Thus far the Roman Monarchy is ſo much the ſame with that at this day in Turky conſiſting of a Camp, and an Horſe-quarter; a Camp in regard of her Spahies and Janizaries, the perpetuall Guard of the Prince, except they alſo chance to be Liquoriſh after his blood; and an Horſe-quarter in regard of the diſtribution of his whole Land unto Tenants for life upon condition of continuall ſervice, or as often as they ſhall be commanded at their own charge by Timars, being a word which they ſay ſignifies Benefices, that it ſhall ſave me a labour of opening the Government.

The Ballance of the Roman Empire.

But the Fame of Mahomet and his Prudence is eſpecially founded in this, That whereas the Roman Monarchy (except that of Israel) was the most imperfect, the Turkish is the most perfect that ever was. Which happened in that the Roman (as the Israelitish of the Sanhedrim and the Congregation) had a mixture of the Senate and the people; and the Turkish is pure; and that this was pure, and the other mixed, happened not through the wisdome of the Legislators, but the different Genius of the Nations; the people of the Eastern parts, except the Israelites, (which is to be attributed to their Agrarian) having been such as scarce ever knew any other condition than that of Slavery. And these of the Western having ever had such a Relish of liberty, as through what despair soever could never be brought to stand still, while the Yoke was putting on their Necks, but by being fed with some hopes of reserving unto themselves some part of their Freedome.

Wherefore Julius Cæsar (saith Suetonius, comitia cum populo sortitus est) contented himself, in naming half the Magistrates, to leave the rest unto the Suffrage of the people. And Mœcenas, Dion. though he would not have Augustus to give the people their liberty, would not have him take it away; (for saith he, Neq; id existimare debes autorem me tibi esse, ut tyrannidem in S.P.Q.R. in servitutem redactum teneas: quod neq; dicere meum, neq; facere tuum est) whence this Empire being neither Hawk nor Buzzard, made a flight accordingly; and having the avarice of the Souldiery on this hand to satisfie upon the people; and the Senate and the people on the other to be defended from the Souldiery; the Prince being perpetually tossed, seldom dy'd any Prince, cap. 19. other death than by one Horn of this Dilemma, as is noted more at large by Machiavill. But the Pretorian Bands, those Bestiall executioners of their Captains Tyranny upon others, and of their own upon him; having continued from the time of Augustus; were by Constantine the Great (incensed against them for taking part with his Adversary Maxentius) removed from their strong Garrison which they held in Rome, and distributed ~~them~~ into divers Provinces. The Benefices of the Souldiers that were hitherto held for life, and upon duty, were by this Prince made Hereditary, so that the whole Foundation whereupon this Empire was first built, being now removed, sheweth plainly, that the Emperours must long before this have found out some other way of support; and this was by Stipendiating the Gothes, a people that deriving their Roots from the Northern parts of Germany, or out of Sweden, had (through their Victories obtained against Domitian) long since spread their branches unto so near Neighbourhood with the Roman Territories, that they began to Overshade them; for the Emperours making use of them in their Arms (as the French do at this day of the Switz) gave them that, under the notion of stipend, which they received as Tribute, coming (if there were any default in the payment) so often to distrein for it, that in the time of Honorius they sacked Rome, and possessed themselves of Italy. And such was the transition of Ancient into Modern prudence; or that breach which being followed in every part of the Roman Empire with inundations of Vandals, Huns, Lombards, Franks, Saxons, have overwhelmed ancient Languages, Learning, Prudence, Manners, Cities, changing the Names of Rivers, Countries, Seas, Mountains and Men; Camillus, Cæsar and Pompey, being come to Edmund, Richard, and Geoffrey. Machiavil.

To open the ground-work or ballance of these new Polititians. Feudum, saith Calvine the Lawyer, is a Gothick word of divers significations; for it is taken either for war, or for a possession of conquered Lands, distributed by the Victor unto such of his Captains and Souldiers as had merited in his Wars, upon condition to acknowledge him to be their perpetuall Lord, and themselves to be his Subjects. The Gothick Ballance.

Of these there were three kinds or orders: The first, of Nobility, distinguished by the Titles of Dukes, Marquesses, Earls, and these being gratify'd with Cities, Castles, and Villages, of the Conquered Italians, their Feuds participated of Royall dignity, and were called Regalia, by which they had right to coyn Mony, create Magistrates, take Tole, Customs, Confiscations, and the like. Institution of Feudatory Principalities.

Feuds of the second order were such as with the consent of the King were bestowed by these Feudatory Princes upon men of inferiour Quality called their Barons, on condition that next unto the King they should defend the Dignities and Fortunes of their Lords in Arms.

The lowest order of Feuds were such as being confer'd by those of the second Order upon private men, whether Noble, or not Noble, obliged them in the like duty unto their Superiors, these were called Vavasors: And this is the Gothick Ballance, by which all the Kingdoms this day in Christendome were at first erected; for which cause if I had time, I should open in this place the Empire of Germany, and the Kingdomes of France, Spain, and Poland; but so much as hath been said being sufficient for the discovery of the principles of Modern Prudence in general; I shall divide the remainder of my Discourse, which is more particular, into three parts. + Vavasors

The second, the Dissolution of the same.

And the third, the Generation of the present Commonwealth.

The Constitution of the late Monarchy of Oceana, is to be considered in relation unto the different Nations, by whom it hath been successively subdu'd and govern'd. The first of these were the Romans, the second the Teutons, the third the Scandians, and the fourth the Neustrians.

The Government of the Romans, who held it as a Province, I shall omit, because I am to speak of their Provincial Government in another place; onely it is to be remembred in this, that if we have given over running up and down naked and with dappled hides, learn't to write and read, to be instructed with good Arts, for all these we are beholding to the Romans either immediately, or mediately the Teutons; for that the Teutons had the Arts from no other hand, is plain enough by their language, which hath yet no word to signifie either writing or reading, but what is derived from the Latine. Furthermore, by the help of these arts so learn't, we have been capable of that Religion which we have long since received; wherefore it seemeth unto me, that we ought not to detract from the Memory of the Romans, by whose means we are as it were of Beasts become Men, and by whose means we might yet of obscure and Ignorant men (if we thought not too well of our selves) become a wise and a great People.

For the proof of the ensuing discourse out of Records and Antiquities. See Selden's Titles of Honour, from page 593. to pag. 837.

The Romans having govern'd Oceana, Provincially, the Teutons were the first that introduced the form of the late Monarchy: to these succeeded the Scandians, of whom (because their Raign was short, as also because they made little alteration in the Government as to the Form) I shall take no notice. But the Teutons going to work upon the Gothick Ballance, divided the whole Nation into three sorts of Feuds; that of Ealdorman, that of Kings-Thane, and that of Middle-Thane.

The Teuton Monarchy.

When the Kingdom was first divided into Precincts, will be as hard to shew, as when it began first to be governed; it being impossible that there should be any Government without some Division. The Division that was in use with the Teutons, was by Counties, and every County had either his Ealdorman, or high Reeve. The title of Ealdorman came in time to Eorl, or Erle, and that of high Reeve to high Sheriff.

Earles.

Earl of the Shire or County denoted the Kings Thane, or Tenant by Grand Serjeantry or Knights Service in chief or in Capite, his possessions were sometimes the whole Territory, from whence he had his Denomination, that is, the whole County, sometimes more then one County, and sometimes lesse, the remaining part being in the Crown. He had also sometimes a third, or some other Customary part of the profits of certain Cities, Boroughs, or other places within his Earldom. For an Example of the possessions of Earls in ancient times, Ethelred had unto him and his Heirs the whole Kingdom of Mercia, containing three or four Counties; and there were others that had little lesse.

Kings Thane

Kings Thane was also an honorary Title, unto which he was qualify'd qualify'd that had five Hides of Land held immediately of the King by ſervice of perſonal attendance; inſomuch that if a Churle or Country Man had thriven unto this proportion, having a Church, a Kitchin, a Bell-houſe, (that is, an Hall with a Bell in it to call his Family to Dinner) a Borough-gate with a ſeat (that is, a Porch) of his own; and any diſtinct office in the Kings Court, then was he the Kings Thane. But the proportion of an Hide-Land, otherwiſe called Caruca, or a Plough-land, is difficult to be underſtood, becauſe it was not certain, nevertheleſſe it is generally conceived to be ſo much as may be managed with one Plough, and would yield the Maintenance of the ſame, with the appurtenances in all kinds.

The Middle-Thane was feudal, but not honorary; he was alſo call'd a Vavaſor, and his Lands a Vavaſory, which held of ſome Meſne Lord, and not immediately of the King. Middle-Thane.

Poſſeſſions and their tenures being of this Nature, ſhew the Ballance of the Teuton Monarchy; wherein the riches of Earles was ſo vaſt, that to ariſe from the Ballance of their Dominion unto their power, they were not onely called Reguli or little Kings, but were ſuch indeed; their juriſdiction being of two ſorts, either that which was exerciſed by them in the Court of their Counties, or in the high Court of the Kingdom.

In the Territory denominating an Earl, if it were all his own, the Courts held, and the profits of that Juriſdiction were to his own uſe and benefit. But if he had but ſome part of his County, then his Juriſdiction and Courts (ſaving perhaps in thoſe poſſeſſions that were his own) were held by him to the Kings uſe and benefit; that is, he commonly ſupply'd the Office which the Sheriffs regularly executed in Counties that had no Earls; and whence they came to be called Vice-comites. The Court of the County that had an Earl, was held by the Earl and the Biſhop of the Dioceſſe, after the manner of the Sheriffs Turns unto this Day; by which means both the Eccleſiaſticall and Temporal Lawes were given in charge together unto the Country: the cauſes of Vavaſors or Vavaſories appertained to the Cognizance of this Court, where Wills were proved, Judgment and Execution given; caſes criminall and civill determined. Shiremoot.

The Kings Thanes had like juriſdiction in their Thain-Lands as Lords in their Manours, where they alſo kept Courts. Halymoot.

Beſides theſe in particular, both the Earls and Kings-Thanes, together with the Biſhops, Abbots, and Vavaſors, or Middle-Thanes had in the High Court or Parliament of the Kingdome a more publick juriſdiction; conſiſting, firſt, of Deliberative power for adviſing upon, and aſſenting unto new Lawes. Secondly, of giving Counſel in matters of State; and thirdly, of Judicature upon Suits, and Complaints. I ſhall not omit to en- Weidenagamoots.

lighten the obscurity of these times, in which there is little to be found of a Methodical constitution of this High Court; by the addition of an Argument, which I conceive to bear a strong testimony unto it self, though taken out of a late Writing that conceals the Authour. "It is well known (saith he) that in "every quarter of the Realm a great many Boroughs do yet "send Burgesses unto the Parliament, which nevertheless be "so anciently and so long since decayed and gone to naught, "that they cannot be shew'd to have been of any reputation "since the Conquest, much lesse to have obtained any such "priviledge by the grant of any succeeding King; wherefore "these must have had this right by more ancient usuage, and "before the Conquest; they being unable now to shew "whence they derived it.

This Argument (though there be more) I shall pitch upon, as sufficient to prove; First, that the lower sort of the people had right unto Session in Parliament during the time of the Teutons. Secondly, that they were qualify'd unto the same by election in their Boroughs; and (if Knights of the Shire (as no doubt they are) be as ancient) in the Countries: Thirdly, if it be a good Argument to say, that the Commons during the raign of the Teutons were elected into Parliament, because they are so now, and no man can shew when this custom began; I see not which way it should be an ill one to say, that the Commons during the reign of the Teutons constituted also a distinct house, because they do so now; unlesse any man can shew that they did ever sit in the same House with the Lords. Wherefore to conclude this part, I conceive for these, and other reasons to be mentioned hereafter, that the Parliament of the Teutons consisted of the King, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and the Commons of the Nation, notwithstanding the style of divers Acts of Parliament, which runs as that of Magna Charta in the Kings name only, seeing the same was nevertheless enacted by the King, Peers, and Commons of the Land, as is testified in those words by a subsequent Act.

Monarchy of the Neustrians.

The Monarchy of the Teutons had stood in this posture about two hundred and twenty years; when Turbo Duke of Neustria making his claim to the Crown of one of their Kings that dyed Childelesse, followed it with successful Arms; and being possessed of the Kingdom, used it as conquered; distributing the Earldomes, Thane-Lands, Bishopricks and Prelacies of the whole Realm amongst his Neustrians. From this time the Earl came to be called Comes, Consul, & Dux; (though Consul & Dux grew afterward out of use) The Kings Thanes came to be called Barons, and their Lands Baronies; the Middle-Thane holding still of a mean Lord, retained the name of Vavasor.

Their Earls.

The Earl or Comes continued to have the third part of the pleas

pleas of the County paid unto him by the Sheriff or Vice-comes; now a diſtinct Officer in every County depending upon the King; ſaving that ſuch Earls as had their Counties to their own uſe, were now Counts-Palatine, and had under the King Regal Juriſdiction; inſomuch that they conſtituted their own Sheriffs, granted Pardons, and iſſued Writs in their own names; nor did Kings Writ of ordinary Juſtice run in their Dominions, till a late Statute whereby much of this priviledge was taken away. 27 H. 8.

Their Barons.

For Barons, they came from henceforth to be in different times of three kinds. Barons by their eſtates and Tenures, Barons by writ, and Barons created by Letters Pattents. From Turbo the firſt to Adoxus the ſeventh King from the Conqueſt, Barons had their Denomination from their Poſſeſſions and Tenures: and theſe were either Spiritual or Temporal; for not onely the Thane Lands, but the poſſeſſions of Biſhops, as alſo of ſome twenty ſix Abbots, and two Priors were now erected into Baronies, whence the Lords Spiritual that had Suffrage in the Teuton Parliament, as Spiritual Lords came to have it in the Neuſtrian Parliament as Barons: and were made ſubject (which they had not formerly been) unto Knights ſervice in chief. Barony coming henceforth to ſignifie all honorary poſſeſſions, as well of Earls as Barons and Baronage, to denote all kinds of Lords as well Spiritual as Temporal, having right to ſit in Parliament, the Baronies in this ſenſe were ſometimes more, and ſometimes fewer, but commonly about 200, or 250, containing in them a matter of ſixty thouſand feuda militum, or Knights fees, whereof ſome twenty eight thouſand were in the Clergy. It is ill luck that no man can tell what the land of a Knights fee (reckoned in ſome Writs at 40 l. a year, and in others at 10.) was certainly worth; for by ſuch an help we might have exactly demonſtrated the Ballance of this Government: But ſayes Cook, it contained twelve plough lands, and that was thought to be the moſt certain account: but this again is extreamly uncertain, for one Plough out of ſome Land that was fruitfull might work more than ten out of ſome other that was barren: Nevertheleſſe, ſeeing it appeareth by Bracton, that of Earldoms and Baronies it was wont to be ſaid, that the whole Kingdome was compoſed: as alſo, that theſe conſiſting of 60000 Knights fees, furniſht 60000 men for the Kings ſervice, being the whole Militia of this Monarchy, it cannot be imagined, that the Vavaſories, or Freeholds in the people amounted to any conſiderable proportion. Wherefore the Ballance and Foundation of this Government was in the 60000 Knights fees, and theſe being poſſeſt by the 250 Lords, it was a Government of the Few, or of the Nobility; wherein the people might alſo aſſemble, but could have no more than a meer name. And the Clergy holding ing a third to the whole Nation as is plaine by the Parliament Rolle; it is an abſurdity (ſeeing the Clergy of France came firſt through their riches to be a ſtate of that Kingdome) to acknowledge the people to have beene a ſtate of this Realme, and not to allow it unto the Clergy, who were ſo much more weighty in the Ballance, which is that of all other whence a ſtate or order in a Government is denominated: wherefore this Monarchy conſiſted of the King, and of the three (Ordines Regni, or) Eſtates, the Lords ſpirituall and temporall, and the Commons: It conſiſted of theſe I ſay as to the ballance, though during the raigne of ſome of theſe Kings, not as to the adminiſtration.

4 Rich. 2. Num. 13.

Adminiſtration of the Neuſtrian Monarchy during the raigne of the firſt kings

For, the ambition of Turbo, and ſome of thoſe that more immediately ſucceeded him to be abſolute Princes, ſtrove againſt the nature of their Foundation, and, in as much as he had divided almoſt the whole Realme among his Neuſtrians, with ſome incouragement for a while. But the Neuſtrians while they were but forraigne Plants, having no ſecurity againſt the Natives, but in growing up by their Princes ſides, were no ſooner well rooted in their vaſt Dominions, than they came up according to the infallible conſequence of the Ballance Domeſticke, and contracting the Nationall intereſt of the Baronage grew as fierce in the Vindication of the Auncient rights and liberties of the ſame, as if they had beene alwaies Natives: Whence, the Kings being as obſtinate on the one ſide for their abſolute power, as theſe on the other for their immunities, grew certaine Wars which tooke their Denomination from the Barons.

This fire about the middle of the raigne of Adoxus began to break out; And whereas the predeceſſors of this King, had diverſe times beene forced to ſummon Councills; reſembling thoſe of the Teutons, unto which the Lords only that were Barons by Dominion and Tenure had hitherto repaired; Adoxus ſeeing the effects of ſuch Dominion, began firſt (not to call ſuch as were Barons by Writs, for that was according to the practice of antient times, but) to call ſuch by Writs as were otherwiſe no Barons, by which meanes ſtriving to avoid the conſequence of the Ballance, in coming unwillingly to ſet the Government ſtreight, he was the firſt that ſet it awry. For the Barons in his raigne, and his ſucceſſours, having vindicated their antient Authority, reſtored the Parliament with all the rights and Priviledges of the ſame, ſaving that from thenceforth the Kings had found out a way whereby to help themſelves againſt the mighty; creatures of their own, and ſuch as had no other ſupport but by their favour. By which meanes this Government being indeed the Maſter-piece of Moderne Prudence hath beene cry'd up to the Skyes, as the only invention, whereby at once to maintaine the ſoveraignty of a Prince, and the liberty of the people: whereas indeed it hath beene no other than a wreſtling match, wherein the Nobility, as they have been ſtronger have thrown the King; or the King (if he have been ſtronger) hath thrown the Nobility: or the King where he hath had a Nobility, and could bring them to his party, hath thrown the people, as in France and Spain: or the people where they have had no Nobility, or could get them to be of his party, have thrown the King, as in Holland, and of later times in Oceana. But they came not to this ſtrength but by ſuch approaches and degrees, as remain to be further opened. For whereas the Barons by Writs (as the ſixty four Abbots, and thirty ſix Priors that were ſo called) were but pro tempore Dicotome being the twelfth King from the Conqueſt, began to make Barons by Letters Patents: with the Addition of honorary Penſions for the Maintenance of their Dignities to them, and their Heirs; ſo that they were hands in the Kings Purſe, and had no ſhoulders for his Throne. Of theſe when the houſe of Peers came once to be full, as will be ſeen hereafter, there was nothing more empty. But for the preſent, the Throne having other ſupports, they did not hurt that ſo much as they did the King: For the old Barons taking Dicotome's prodigality to ſuch creatures ſo ill, that they depoſed him; got the trick of it, and never gave over ſetting up, and pulling down of their Kings according to their various intereſts, and that faction of the White and Red into which they had been thenceforth divided, till Panurgus the eighteenth King from the Conqueſt was more by their favour than his right advanced unto the Crown. This King through his naturall ſubtilty reflecting at once upon the greatneſſe of their power, and the inconſtancy of their favour, began to find another flaw in this kind of Government, which is alſo noted by Machiavill; namely, that a Throne ſupported by a Nobility, is not ſo hard to be aſcended, as kept warm. Wherefore his ſecret jealouſie leſt the Diſſention of the Nobility, as it brought him in, might throw him out, travelled in wayes undiſcover'd by them, unto ends as little foreſeen by himſelf: while to eſtabliſh his own ſafety, he by mixing water with their Wine, firſt began to open thoſe Sluces that have ſince overwhelmed not the King onely, but the Throne: For whereas a Nobility ſtriketh not at the Throne without which they cannot ſubſiſt, but at ſome King that they do not like; Popular power ſtriketh through the King at the Throne, as that which is incompatible with it. Now that Panurgus in abating the power of the Nobility, was the cauſe whence it came to fall into the hands of the people, appears by thoſe ſeverall Statutes that were made in his raign; as that for Population; thoſe againſt Retainers; and that for Alienations.

Barons by Letters Patents.

Diſſolution of the late Monarchy of Oceana.

By the Stature of Population, All houſes of husbandry that were uſed with twenty Acres of ground and upwards, were to be maintained, and kept up for ever with a competent proportion of Land laid to them, and in no wise, as appears by a subsequent Statute to be severed. By which means the houses being kept up, did of necessity inforce dwellers; and the proportion of Land to be tilled being kept up, did of necessity inforce the dweller not to be a beggar or Cottager, but a man of some substance that might keep friends and servants, and set the Plough on going: this did mightily concern (saith the Historian of that Prince) the might and manhood of the Kingdom, and in effect amortize a great part of the Lands unto the hold and possession of the Yeomanry, or middle people, who living not in a servile or indigent fashion, were much unlinked from dependance upon their Lords, and living in a free and plentifull manner, became a more excellent Infantry; but such an one upon which the Lords had so little power, that from henceforth they may be computed to have been disarmed.

And as they lost their Infantry after this manner, so their Cavalry and Commanders were cut off by the Statute of Retainers; for whereas it was the Custome of the Nobility to have younger Brothers of good houses, metall'd fellows, and such as were knowing in the feats of Arms about them; they who were longer followed with so dangerous a train, escaped not such punishments, as made them take up.

Henceforth the Country-lives, and great tables of the Nobility, which no longer nourished veins that would bleed for them, were fruitlesse and loathsome till they changed the Air, and of Princes became Courtiers, where their Revenues, never to have been exhausted by Beef and Mutton, were found narrow, whence followed wracking of Rents, and at length sale of Lands; the riddance through the Statute of Alienations being rendred far more quick and facile, than formerly it had been through the new invention of intails.

To this it happened, that Coranus the Successour of that King dissolving the Abbeys, brought with the declining estate of the Nobility so vast a prey unto the Industry of the people, that the Ballance of the Common-wealth was too apparently in the Popular party, to be unseen by the wise Councel of Queen Parthenia, who converting her reign through the perpetuall Love-tricks that passed between her and her people into a kind of Romanze; wholly neglected the Nobility. And by these degrees came the House of Commons to raise that head, which since hath been so high and formidable unto their Princes; that they have looked pale upon those assemblies. Nor was there any thing now wanting unto the destruction of the Throne, but that the people not apt to see their own strength, should be put to feel it; when a Prince, as stiffe in disputes as the nerve of Monarchy was grown slack, received that unhappy encouragement

ment from his Clergy, which became his utter Ruine, while trusting more unto their Logick, than the rough Philosophy of his Parliament, it came unto an irreparable breach; for the house of Peers which alone had stood in this Gap, now sinking down between the King and the Commons, shewed that Crassus was dead, and Isthmus broken. But a Monarchy divested of her Nobility, hath no refuge under Heaven, but an Army. Wherefore the dissolution of this Government caused the War, not the War the dissolution of this Government.

Of the Kings successe with his Arms it is not necessary to give any further account, than that they proved as ineffectuall as his Nobility; But without a Nobility or an Army (as hath been shew'd) there can be no Monarchy. Wherefore what is there in Nature, that can arise out of these ashes; but a Popular Government, or a new Monarchy to be erected by the victorious Army?

To erect a Monarchy be it never so new, unlesse like Leviathan you can hang it (as the Country fellow speaks) by Geometry; (for what else is it to say, that every other man must give up his will unto the will of this one man without any other Foundation?) it must stand upon old principles, that is, upon Nobility or an Army planted upon a due Ballance of Dominion. Aut viam inveniam aut faciam, was an Adage of Cæsars; and there is no standing for a Monarchy unlesse she find this Ballance or make it. If she find it, her work's done unto her hand; for, where there is inequality of Estates, there must be inequality of Power; and where there is inequality of Power, there can be no Common-wealth. To make it, her sword must extirpate out of Dominion all other roots of power, and plant her Army upon that ground: an Army may be planted Nationally or Provincially. To plant it Nationally, it must be in one of the four wayes mentioned, that is, either Monarchically in part, as the Roman Beneficiarii; or Monarchically in the whole as the Turkish Timariot; Aristocratically, that is, by Earls and Barons, as the Neustrians were planted by Turbo: or Democratically, that is, by equall lots, as the Israelitish Army in the Land of Canaan by Joshuah; in every one of these wayes there must not only be confiscations, but confiscations unto such a proportion as may answer to the work intended.

Confiscation of a people that never fought against you, but whose Arms you have born, and in which you have been victorious, and this upon premeditation, and in cool blood, I should have thought to be against any example in humane Nature, but for those alledged by Machiavill of Agathocles, and Oliverotto da Ferma: The former whereof being Captain General of the Syracusans, upon a day assembled the Senate and the people, as if he had something to communicate with them, when at a sign given he cut the Senators in pieces to a man, and all the richeſt of the people, by which means he came to be King. The proceedings of Oliveretto in making himſelf Prince of Fermo, was ſomewhat different in circumſtances, but of the ſame Nature. Nevertheleſſe Catiline, who had a ſpirit equall to any of theſe in his intended miſchief, could never bring the like to paſſe in Rome. The head of a ſmall Common-wealth, ſuch an one as was that of Syracuſa or Fermo, is eaſily brought unto the Block; but that a populous Nation ſuch as Rome, had not ſuch an one, was the grief of Nero. If Sylla or Cæſar attained to be Princes, it was by Civill War, and ſuch civil War as yielded rich ſpoils; there being a vaſt Nobility to be confiſcated; which alſo was the caſe in Oceana, when it yielded earth by Earldoms and Baronies to the Neuſtrian, for the plantation of his new Potentates. Where a Conquerour finds the riches of a Land in the hands of the Few, the forfeitures are eaſie, and amount to vaſt advantage; but where the people have equall ſhares, the confiſcation of many comes to little; and is not only dangerous, but fruitleſſe.

The Romans in one of their defeats of the Volſci found among the captives certain Tuſculans, who upon examination confeſt, that the Arms they bore, were by command of their State: whereupon information being given to the Senate by the Generall Camillus, he was forthwith commanded to march againſt Tuſculum; which doing accordingly, he found the Tuſculane fields full of Husbandmen, that ſtirred not otherwiſe from the Plough, than to furniſh his Army with all kind of accommodations and Victualls; drawing near to the City, he ſaw the Gates wide open, the Magiſtrates coming out in their Gowns to ſalute and bid him welcome: entring, the Shops were all at work, and open: the ſtreets ſounded with the noiſe of School-boyes at their books, there was no face of War. Whereupon Camillus cauſing the Senate to aſſemble, told them, That though the Art was underſtood, yet had they at length found out the true Arms whereby the Romans were moſt undoubtedly to be conquered, for which cauſe he would not anticipate the Senate, unto which he deſired them forthwith to ſend, which they did accordingly; and their Dictator with the reſt of their Ambaſſadours being found by the Roman Senators as they went into the houſe ſtanding ſadly at the Door, were ſent for in as friends, and not as Enemies. Where the Dictator having ſaid, If we have offended, the fault was not ſo great as is our penitence, and your virtue. The Senate gave them peace forthwith, and ſoon after made the Tuſculanes Citizens of Rome.

But putting the caſe, of which the World is not able to ſhew an Example, that the forfeiture of a populous Nation, not conquer'd, but friends, and in cool blood, might be taken;

Your

Your Army muſt be planted in one of the wayes mentioned: To plant it in the way of abſolute Monarchy that is upon feuds for life, ſuch as the Timars, a Country as large and fruitfull as that of Greece, would afford you but ſixteen thouſand Timariots; for that is the moſt the Turk (being the beſt husband that ever was of this kind) ~~that~~ makes of it at this day: and if Oceana, which is leſſe in fruitfulneſſe by one half, and in extent by three parts, ſhould have no greater a force, whoever breaketh her in one battle, may be ſure ſhe ſhall never riſe; for ſuch (as was noted by Machiavill) is the Nature of the Turkiſh Monarchy, if you break her in two battles, you have deſtroyed her whole Militia; and the reſt being all ſlaves, you hold her without any further reſiſtance: Wherefore the erection of an abſolute Monarchy in Oceana, or in any other Country that is no larger, without making it a certain prey unto the firſt invader, is altogether impoſſible.

To plant by halves as the Roman Emperours did their Beneficiaries, or military Colonies, it muſt be either for life; and this an Army of Oceaners in their own Country, (eſpecially having ſtates of inheritance) will never bear, becauſe ſuch an Army ſo planted is as well confiſcated as the people, nor had the Mamalines been contented with ſuch uſage in Ægypt, but that they were Forraigners, and daring not to mix with the Natives, it was of abſolute neceſſity to their Being. mamaluc

Or planting them upon inheritance, whether Ariſtocratically as the Neuſtrians, or Democratically, as the Iſraelites, they grow up by certaine conſequence into the Nationall intereſt, and this if they be planted popularly comes unto a Common-wealth; if by way of Nobility unto a mixed Monarchy, which of all other will be found to be the only kind of Monarchy, whereof this Nation or any other that is of no greater extent hath beene or can be capable: for if the Iſraelites (through their Democraticall Ballance being fixed by their Agrarian ſtood firme,) be yet found to have elected Kings, it was becauſe their Territory lying open they were perpetually invaded, and being perpetually invaded turned themſelves to any thing, which through the want of experience they thought might be a remedy; whence their miſtake in election of their Kings, (under whom they gain'd nothing, but to the contrary loſt all they had acquired by their Common-wealth, both Eſtates and Liberties;) is not only apparent, but without parallell. And if there have beene (as was ſhewne) a Kingdom of the Goths in Spain, and of the Vandalls in Aſia, conſiſting of a ſingle perſon, and a Parliament, (taking a Parliament to be a Councill of the people only, without a Nobility) it is expreſſely ſaid of thoſe Councills, that they depoſed their Kings as often as them pleaſed: nor can there be other conſequence of ſuch a Government, ſeeing where there is a Though.

Councill of the people, they do never receive Lawes, but give them; and a Councill giving Lawes unto a ſingle perſon, he hath no meanes in the World, whereby to be any more than a ſubordinate Magiſtrate, but force: in which caſe, he is not a ſingle perſon and a Parliament, but a ſingle perſon and an Army, which Army again muſt be planted as hath been ſhewn, or can be of no long Continuance.

It is true, that the Provincial Ballance being in Nature quite contrary unto the National, you are no wayes to plant a Provinciall Army upon Dominion. But then you muſt have a native Territory in ſtrength, Situation, or Government able to overballance the forreign, or you can never hold it. That an Army ſhould in any other caſe be long ſupported by a meer Tax, is a meer Phanſie as void of all reaſon and Experience, as if a man ſhould think to maintain ſuch an one by robbing of Orchards: for a meer Tax is but pulling of Plumbtrees, the roots whereof are in other mens grounds, who ſuffering perpetuall violence, come to hate the Author of it: And it is a Maxime, that no Prince that is hated by his people can be ſafe. Arms planted upon Dominion extirpate enemies, and make friends; but maintained by a meer Tax, have enemies that have roots, and friends that have none.

To conclude, Oceana, or any other Nation of no greater extent muſt have a competent Nobility, or is altogether incapable of Monarchy: for where there is equality of eſtates, there muſt be equality of power; and where there is equality of power, there can be no Monarchy.

The generation of the Common-wealth.

To come then to the generation of the Common-wealth; it hath been ſhewn how through the wayes and means uſed by Pavugus to abaſe the Nobility, and ſo to mend that flaw which we have aſſerted to be incurable in this kind of Conſtitution, he ſuffered the Ballance to fall into the power of the people, and ſo broke the Government: but the Ballance being in the people, the Common-wealth (though they do not ſee it) is already in the Nature of them: (Cornua nota prius Vitulo, quàm frontibus extant) there wanteth nothing elſe but time, (which is ſlow and dangerous) or art, (which would be more quick and ſecure) for the bringing thoſe native Arms (wherewithall they are found already) to reſiſt they know not how every thing that oppoſeth them, unto ſuch maturity as may fix them upon their own ſtrength and Bottom.

what Prudence is.

But whereas this Art is Prudence; and that part of Prudence, which regards the preſent work, is nothing elſe but the skill of raiſing ſuch Superſtructures of Government, as are natural to the known Foundations: they never mind the Foundation, but through certain animoſities, (wherewith by ſtriving one againſt another they are infected) or through freaks by which not regarding garding the courſe of things, nor how they conduce unto their purpoſe, they are given to building in the Air, come to be divided and ſubdivided into endleſſe parties and factions, both Civill, and Eccleſiaſtical: which briefly to open, I ſhall firſt ſpeak of the people in generall, and then of their diviſions.

A people (ſaith Machiavill) that is corrupt, is not capable of a Common-wealth; but in ſhewing what a corrupt people is, he hath either involved himſelf or me; nor can I otherwiſe come out of the Labyrinth, than by ſaying, that the Ballance altering a people as to the foregoing Government, muſt of neceſſity be corrupt; but corruption in this ſenſe ſignifieth no more then that the corruption of one Government (as in natural bodies) is the generation of another: wherefore if the Ballance alter from Monarchy, the corruption of the people in this caſe is that which maketh them capable of a Common-wealth: But whereas I am not ignorant, that the corruption which he meaneth is in Manners, this alſo is from the Ballance. For the Ballance ſwaying from Monarchical into Popular, abateth the Luxury of the Nobility, and inriching the people, bringeth the Government from a more private unto a more publick intereſt, which coming nearer, as hath been ſhewn, unto Juſtice and right Reaſon, the people upon a like alteration is ſo far from ſuch corruption of Manners, as ſhould render them uncapable of a Common-wealth, that of neceſſity they muſt thereby contract ſuch reformation of manners as will bear no other kind of Government. On the other ſide, where the Ballance changeth from Popular to Oligarchical, or Monarchical; the publick intereſt with the reaſon and juſtice included in the ſame, becometh more private, Luxury is introduced in the place of Temperance and Servitude in that of Freedome; which cauſeth ſuch a corruption of manners both in the Nobility and the people, as by the Example of Rome in the time of the Triumvirs, is more at large diſcovered by the Author to have been altogether incapable of a Common-wealth.

But the Ballance of Oceana changing quite contrary to that of Rome, the manners of the people were not thereby corrupted, but on the contrary fitted for a Common-wealth. For differences of opinion in a people (not rightly informed of their Ballance,) or diviſion into parties, while there is not any common ligament of power ſufficient to reconcile or hold them, is no ſufficient proof of corruption in a people: Nevertheleſſe, ſeeing this muſt needs be matter of Scandall and danger, it will not be amiſſe in ſhewing what were the parties, to ſhew what were their errours.

The parties into which this Nation was divided, were Temporal or Spiritual; and the Temporal parties were eſpecially two, the one the Royaliſts, the other Common-wealths-men; each of which aſſerted their different Cauſes, either out of Prudence or Ignorance; out of intereſt or Conſcience.

For

For Prudence, either that of the Antients is inferiour unto the Modern, (which we have hitherto been leting face to face, that any one may judge) or that of the Royaliſts muſt be inferiour unto that prudence of the Common-wealths-man: and for intereſt, taking the Common-wealths-man to have really intended the publick (for otherwiſe he is an hypocrite, and the worſt of men) that of the Royaliſt muſt of neceſſity have been more private; wherefore the whole diſpute will come upon matter of Conſcience; and this, whether it be urged by the right of Kings, the obligation of former Lawes, or of the Oath of Allegiance, is abſolved by the Ballance.

The Royaliſt

For if the right of Kings were as immediately derived from the breath of God, as the life of man; yet this excludeth not death and diſſolution. But, that the diſſolution of the late Monarchy was as natural as the death of a man, hath been already ſhewn: wherefore it remains with the Royaliſts to diſcover by what reaſon or experience it is poſſible for a Monarchy to ſtand upon a popular Ballance; or, the Ballance being popular as well the Oath of Allegiance, as all other Monarchical Lawes, imply an impoſſibility, and are therefore void.

To the Common-wealths-man I have no more to ſay, but that if he exclude any party, he is not truly ſuch; nor ſhall ever found a Common-wealth upon the natural principle of the ſame, which is Juſtice: and the Royaliſt for having oppoſed a Common-wealth in Oceana (where the Lawes were ſo ambiguous, that they might be eternally diſputed, and never reconciled) can neither be juſtly, for that cauſe, excluded from his full and equall ſhare in the Government; nor prudently, for this, that a Common-wealth conſiſting of a party will be in perpetuall labour of her own deſtruction: whence it was, that the Romans having conquered the Albans incorporated them with equall right into the Common-wealth: and if the Royalliſts be fleſh of your fleſh, and nearer of blood then were the Albans to the Romans, you are alſo Chriſtians: nevertheleſſe there is no reaſon that a Common-wealth ſhould any more favour a party remaining in fixed oppoſition againſt her, then Brutus did his ſons. But if ſhe fix them upon that oppoſition, it is her fault, not theirs, and this is done by excluding them. Men that have equall poſſeſſions, and the ſame ſecurity of their eſtates and of their liberties that you have, have the ſame cauſe with you to defend; but if you will be trampling, they fight for liberty, though for Monarchy; and you for Tyranny, though under the name of a Common-wealth; the nature of orders in a Common-wealth rightly inſtituted being void of all Jealouſie, becauſe let the parties which ſhe imbraceth be what they will, her orders are ſuch, as they neither would reſiſt if they could, nor could if they would, as hath in part been already

shewn, and will appear more at large by the ensuing Model.

The parties that are Spiritual are of more kinds then I need mention; some for a National Religion, and others for liberty of Conscience, with such animosity on both sides, as if these two did not consist, of which I have already sufficiently spoken; to shew, that the one cannot well consist without the other. But they of all the rest are the most dangerous, who holding that the Saints must govern, go about to reduce the Commonwealth unto a party, as well for the reasons already shewn, as that their pretences are against Scripture, where the Saints are commanded to submit unto the higher powers, and be subject unto the Ordinance of man. And, that men pretending under the notion of Saints or Religion, unto Civil Power, have hitherto never failed to dishonour that profession; the world is full of Examples, whereof I shall confine my self at the present unto two, the one of old, the other of new Rome. Religious parties.

In old Rome the Patricians or Nobility, pretending to be the Godly party, were questioned by the People for ingrossing all the Magistracies of that Common-wealth, had nothing to say why they did so, but (Quod nemo plebeium auspicia haberet) that Magistracy required a kind of holiness which was not in the people. (Plebs ad id maximâ indignatione exarsit, quod auspicari tanquam inviso Diis immortalibus negarentur posse) at which the people were filled with such indignation, as had come to cutting of throats, if the Nobility had not forthwith laid by the insolency of that plea: which nevertheless when they had done, the people for a long time after continued to elect none other than Patrician Magistrates. Saints. Livy, 4. 8.

The Example of new Rome in the rise and practice of the Hierarchy, (too well known to require any further illustration) is far more immodest.

This hath been the course of Nature: and when it hath pleased, or shall please God to introduce any thing that is above the course of Nature, he will as he hath alwayes done, confirm it by miracle; for so in his Prophesie of the reign of Christ upon earth, he expressly promiseth; seeing that the soules of them that were beheaded for Jesus, shall be seen to live and raign with him, which will be an object of sense; the rather, because the rest of the dead are not to live again untill the Thousand years be finished. And it is not lawfull for men to perswade us that a thing is, though there be no such object of our sense, which God hath told us shall not be, untill it be an object of our sense.

The Saintship of a people as to Government consisteth in the election of Magistrates fearing God, and hating covetousnesse, and not in their confining themselves, or being confined unto men of this, or that party or profession. It consisteth in making ing the most prudent and religious choyce that they can, but not in trusting unto men, but, next God, in their orders. Give us good men and they will make us good Lawes, is the Maxime of a Demagogue, and (through the alteration which is commonly perceivable in men, when they have power to work their own wills) exceeding fallible. But give us good orders, and they will make us good men, is the Maxime of a Legislator, and the most infallible in the Politicks.

But these divisions, (however there be some good men, that looke sadly on them) are triviall things; first (as to the civill concernment) because the Government whereof this Nation is capable,* once seene taken in all interests. And secondly, (as to the spirituall) because as preference of Religion hath always beene turbulent in broken Governments, so where the Government hath beene sound and steddy, Religion hath never shew'd her selfe with any other face than that of her naturall sweetnesse, and tranquillity: nor is there any reason why she should. Wherefore the errours of the people are occasioned by their Governours. If they be doubtfull of the way, or wander from it, it is because their guides misled them; and the guides of the people are never so well qualified for leading by any venture of their own, as by that of the Government.

The Government of Oceana, (as it stood at the time whereof we discourse consisting of one single Councill of the people, to the exclusion of the King, and of the Lords,) was called a Parliament: how be it the Parliaments of the Tewtons and of the Neustrians consisted as hath beene shew'd of the King, Lords and Commons; wherefore this under an old name was a new thing. A Parliament consisting of a single assembly elected by the people and invested with the whole power of the Government, without any Covenants, Conditions, or orders whatsoever. So new a thing that neither auncient nor moderne Prudence can shew any avow'd example of the like: And there is scarce any thing that seemeth unto me so strange as that (whereas there is nothing more familiar with these Counsellors than to bring the Scripture to the House) there should not be a man of them, that so much as offerd to bring the house unto the Scripture, wherein as hath beene shewne is contained that Originall, whereof all the rest of the Common-wealths seeme to be copies. Certainly if Leviathan (who is surer of nothing than that a popular Common-wealth consisteth, but of one Councill) transcribed his doctrine out of this Assembly, for him to except against Aristotle and Cicero for writing out of their own Common-wealths, was not so fair play; or if the Parliament transcribed out of him, it had beene an honour better due unto Moses. But where one of them should have an Example, but from the other, I cannot imagine, there being nothing of this kind that I can find in story but the Oligarchy of Athens, the thirty Tyrants of the ſame, and the Roman Decemvirs.

For the Oligarchy, Thucidides tells us that it was a Senate or Councill of foure hundred, pretending to a Ballancing Councill of the people conſiſting of five thouſand but not producing them, wherein you have the definition of an Oligarchy, which is a ſingle Councill both debating and reſolving, dividing and chooſing; and what that muſt come to, was ſhewne by the Example of the Girles, and is apparent throughout all experience; wherefore the thirty ſet up by the Lacedemonians, (when they had conquered Athens) are called Tyrants by all Authors; Leviathan only excepted, who will have them againſt all the World to have been an Ariſtocracy; but for what reaſon I cannot imagine, theſe alſo as voyd of any Ballance having been void of that which is eſſentiall to every Common-wealth, whether Ariſtocraticall or Popular; except he be pleaſed with them in that, by the Teſtimony of Xenophon, they killed more men in eight Moneths, then the Lacedemonians had done in ten yeares: oppreſſing the people (to uſe Sir. Wa: Raleighs words) with all baſe and intolerable ſlavery. Lib. 8.

The uſurped Government of the Decemvirs in Rome was of the ſame kind. Wherefore in the feare of God let Chriſtian Legiſlators, (ſetting the patterne, given in the Mount on the one ſide, and theſe execrable Examples on the other) know the right hand from the left; and ſo much the rather becauſe thoſe things, which do not conduce to the good of the Governed, are fallacious, if they appeare to be good for the Governours, God in chaſtizing a people is accuſtomed to burne his Rod. The Empire of theſe Oligarchies was not ſo violent as ſhort, nor did they fall upon the people but in their own immediate ruine. A Councill without a Ballance is not a Common-wealth, but an Oligarchy; & every Oligarchy, except ſhe be put to the defence of her wickedneſs, or power, againſt ſome outward danger, is factious. Wherfore the errours of the people being from their Governours (which Maxim in the Politicks bearing a ſufficient teſtimony unto it ſelfe, is alſo proved by Machiavill) if the people of Oceana have beene factious, the cauſe is apparent; But what remedy?

In anſwer to this queſtion, I come now to the Army: of which the moſt victorious Captaine and incomparable patriot Olphaus Megaletor was now Generall: Who being a much greater maſter of that art, whereof I have made a rough draught in theſe Preliminaries, had ſo ſad reflections upon the waies and proceedings of the Parliament, as caſt him upon books, and all other meanes of diverſion, among which he happened upon this place of Machiavill. "Thrice happy is that people which chances to "have a man able to give them ſuch a Government as once, as with- The Generall.

"out alteration may ſecure them of their liberties: Seeing it is cer-
"taine, that Lacedemon in obſerving the Lawes of Lycurgus, conti"nued about eight hundred yeares without any dangerous tumult or
"corruption. My Lord Generall (as it is ſaid of Themiſtocles, that he could not ſleepe for the glory obteined by Miltiades at the battle of Maratho) took ſo new, and deepe impreſſion at theſe words of the much greater glory of Lycurgus, that being on this ſide aſſaulted with the emulation of his illuſtrious object, on the other with the miſery of the Nation, which ſeemed, (as it were ruined by his Victory) to caſt her ſelfe at his feete, he was almoſt wholly deprived of his naturall reſt, untill the debate he had within himſelfe, came to a firme reſolution, that the greateſt advantages of a Common-wealth are, first that the Legiſlator ſhould be one man: and ſecondly that the Government ſhould be made altogether, or at once. For the firſt it is certaine ſaith Machiavill, that a Common-wealth is ſeldome or never well turned or conſtituted, except it have been the work of one man: for which cauſe a wiſe Legiſlator, and one whoſe mind is firmely ſet, not upon private but the publick intereſt, not upon his poſterity but upon his Country, may juſtly endeavour to get the ſoveraigne power into his own hands; nor ſhall any man that is maſter of reaſon blame ſuch extraordinary meanes as in that caſe ſhall be neceſſary, the end proving no other, than the conſtitution of a well ordered Common-wealth. The reaſon of this is demonſtrable; for the ordinary meanes not failing, the Common-wealth hath no need of a Legiſlator; but the ordinary meanes failing, there is no recourſe to be had but to ſuch as are extraordinary. And, whereas a Book or a Building hath not been known to attaine to perfection, if it have not had a ſole Author, or Architect: a Common-wealth, as to the Fabrick of it, is of the like nature. And thus it may be made at once; in which, there be great advantages: for a Common-wealth made at once, taketh her Security at the ſame time ſhe lendeth her Money; truſteth not her ſelfe to the faith of men, but lanceth immediately forth into the Empire of Lawes: and being ſet ſtreight bringeth the manners of her Citizens unto her rule: whence followed that uprightneſſe which was in Lacedemon. But manners that are rooted in men, bow the tenderneſſe of a Common-wealth coming up by twigs unto their bent; whence followed the obliquity that was in Rome, and thoſe perpetuall repaires by the Conſuls Axes and Tribunes Hammers, which could never finiſh that Common-wealth but in deſtruction.

Def. B. 1. c 9.

That a Legiſlator is to be one.

That a Common-wealth is to be made at once.

My Lord Generall being clear in theſe points, and the neceſſity of ſome other courſe than would be thought upon by the Parliament, appointed a Randezvous of the Army, where he ſpoke his ſenſe agreeable to theſe Preliminaries with ſuch ſucceſſe, ceſſe unto the Souldiery, that the Parliament was ſoon after depoſed; and himſelf (in the great Hall of the Pantheon or Palace of Juſtice, ſcituated in Emporium the Capital City) created by the univerſall ſuffrage of the Army; Lord Archon, or ſole Legiſlator of Oceana; upon which Theater you have, to conclude this piece, a Perſon introduced, whoſe Fame ſhall never draw his Curtain.

The Lord Archon being created, fifty ſelect perſons to aſſiſt him (by labouring in the Mines of ancient Prudence, and bringing her hidden Treaſures unto new light) were added, with the ſtyle alſo of Legiſlators, and ſate as a Council whereof he was the ſole Director and Preſident.

The Council of Legislators.

OF this Piece, being the greater half of the whole Work, I shall be able at this time to give no farther Account, then very briefly to shew at what it aymes.

My Lord Archon in opening the Councill of Legislators, made it appear how unsafe a thing it is to follow Phansie in the Fabrick of a Common-wealth; and how necessary that the Archives of ancient prudence should be ransackt, before any Counsellour should presume to offer any other matter in order to the Work in hand, or towards the consideration to be had by the Councill upon a Modell of Government. Wherefore he caused an Urn to be brought, and every one of the Counsellours to draw a Lot: by the Lots as they were drawn.

	of Athens,		Navarchus de Pavalo.
	of Lacedemon,		Laco de Scytale.
	of Carthage,		Mago de Syrtibus.
	of the Achæans,
	Ætolians, & Lycians,		Aratus de Isthmo.
	of the Switz,		Alpester de Fulmine.
	of Holland, & the United Provinces,		Glaucus de Ulna.
	of Rome,		Dolabella de Enyo.
	of Venice,		Lynceus de Stella.

These containing in them all those excellencies whereof a Common-wealth is capable; so that to have added more, had been to no purpose; upon time given unto the Counsellours by their own studies, and those of their friends to prepare themselves, were opened in the Order, and by the persons mentioned at the Council of Legislators; and afterwards by order of the same were repeated at the Council of the Prytans unto the people; for in drawing of the Lots, there were a matter of a Dozen of them inscribed with the letter P, which the Counsellours that drew became Prytans.

The

The Prytans were a Committee or Councill ſitting in the great Hall of Pantheon, to whom it was lawfull for any man to offer any thing in order to the Fabrick of the Common-wealth; for which cauſe, that they might not be oppreſſed by the throng, there was a Rail about the Table where they ſate, and on each ſide of the ſame a Pulpit; that on the right hand for any man that would propoſe any thing; and that on the left for any other that would oppoſe him; and all parties (being indemnify'd by Proclamation of the Archon) were invited to diſpute their own intereſts, or propoſe whatever they thought fit (in order to the future Government) to the Council of the Prytans, who (having a guard of a matter of two or three hundred men, leſt the heat of the diſpute might break the peace) had the right of Moderators, and were to report from time to time ſuch Propoſitions or Occurrences as they thought fit, to the Council of Legiſlators ſitting more privately in the Pallace called Alma.

This was that which made the people (who were neither ſafely to be admitted unto, nor conveniently to be excluded from the framing of their Common-wealth) verily believe when it came forth, that it was no other than that, whereof they themſelves had been the makers.

Moreover, this Council ſate divers Months after the publiſhing, and during the promulgation of the Modell unto the people, by which means there is ſcarce any thing was ſaid or written for or againſt the ſaid Modell, but you ſhall have it with the next impreſſion of this Work by way of Oration addreſſed unto, and moderated by the Prytans.

By this means the Council of Legiſlators had their neceſſary ſolitude and due aym in their greater Work, as being acquainted from time to time with the pulſe of the people, and yet without any manner of interruption or diſturbance.

Wherefore every Common-wealth in her place having been opened by her due Method; that is, firſt, by the people; ſecondly, by the Senate; and thirdly, by the Magiſtracy; The Council upon mature debate took ſuch reſults or orders, out of each one, and out of each part of each one of them, as upon opening the ſame they thought fit; which being put from time to time in writing by the Clerk or Secretary, there remained no more in the concluſion, than putting the Orders ſo taken together, to view and examine them with a diligent Eye, to the end that it might be clearly diſcovered whether they did enterfere, or could any wiſe come to interfere or joſtle one the other; for as ſuch orders joſtling, or coming to joſtle one another, are the certain diſſolution of the Common-wealth; ſo taken upon upon the proof of like experience, and neither jostling, nor shewing which way they can possibly come to jostle one another, make a perfect, and (for ought that in humane prudence can be foreseen) an immortal Common-wealth.

And such was the Art whereby my Lord Archon (taking Counsel of the Common-wealth of Israel as of Moses; and of the rest of the Common-wealths, as of Jethro) framed the Modell of the Common-wealth of Oceana.

THE MODELL OF The Common-Wealth OF Oceana.

WHereas my Lord Archon, being, from Moſes and Lycurgus, the firſt Legiſlator that hitherto is found in Story to have introduced or Erected an Entire Common-wealth at once, happened, like them alſo, to be more intent upon putting the ſame into Execution or Action, then into Writing; by which means the Modell came to be promulgated or publiſhed with more Brevity and leſſe illuſtration then is neceſſary for their underſtanding who have not been acquainted with the whole proceedings of the Council of Legiſlators, & of the Prytans, where it was aſſerted and cleared from all objections and doubts: Unto the end that I may ſupply what was wanting in the promulgated Epitome, unto a more full and perfect Narrative of the whole, I ſhall rather take the Common-wealth practically, and as ſhe hath now given Account of her ſelf in ſome years Revolutions, (as Dicæarchus is ſaid to have done that of Lacedemon, firſt tranſcrib'd by his hand ſome three or four hundred years after the Inſtitution) yet not omitting to adde for proof, unto every order ſuch Debates and Speeches of the Legiſlators in their Councill, or at leaſt ſuch parts of them as may beſt diſcover the reaſon of the Government, nor ſuch wayes and means as were uſed in the Inſtitution or Riſe of the Building, not to be ſo well Conceived, without ſome knowledge given of the Engines wherewithall the mighty Weight was moved. But through the intire omiſſion of the Councel of Legiſlators or Workmen that ſquared Every ſtone unto this Structure in the quarries of Ancient Prudence, the proof of the firſt part of this Diſcourſe will be lame, except I inſert as well for illuſtration, as to avoid frequent Repetition, three remarkable Teſtimonies in this place. Suidas.

The

Exo. 18. 24. Numb. 1. 16. Math. The first is taken out of the Common-wealth of Israel; So Moses hearkened unto the voice of (Jethro) his Father in Law, and did all that he had said. And Moses chose able men out of all Israel, and made them heads over the people, (Tribunes as it is in the vulgar Latine; or Phylarches, that is) Princes of the Tribes, sitting (Sellis Curulibus, saith Grotius) upon twelve Thrones, and judging the twelve Tribes of Israel; and next unto these he chose Rulers of Thousands, Rulers of Hundreds, Rulers of Fifties, and Rulers of Tens, which were the steps or rise of this Common-wealth, from her foundation or root, unto her proper Elevation, or accomplishment in the Sanhedrim, and the Congregation, already opened in the Preliminaries.

Crag. de Rep. Lac. Lib. 1. Cap. 6. The Second is taken out of Lacedemon, as Lycurgus (for the greater impression of his Institutions upon the minds of his Citizens) pretended to have received the Modell of that Common-wealth from the Oracle of Apollo at Delphos, the words whereof are thus recorded by Plutarch in the Life of that famous Legislator, [When thou shalt have divided the People into Tribes, (which were six) and Oba's, (which were five in every Tribe) thou shalt Constitute the Senate, consisting with the two Kings of thirty Counsellours, who according as occasion requireth, shall cause the Congregation to be Assembled between the Bridge and the River Gnavon, where the Senate shall propose unto the People, and dismisse them without suffering them to debate. The Obæ were linages into which every Tribe was divided, and in each Tribe there was one other Division containing all those of the same that were of military Age; which being called the Mora, was subdivided into Troops and Companies that were held in perpetuall discipline under the Command of a Magistrate called the Polemarche.

Halicar. The Third is taken out of the Common-wealth of Rome, or those parts of it which are comprized in the first and second book of Livy, where the people according to the Institution by Romulus, are first divided into Thirty Curia's or Parishes, whereof he Elected (by three out of each Curia) the Senate, which from his Reign unto that of Servius Tullius proposed unto the Parishes or Parochial Congregations, and these being called the Comitia Curiata, had the Election of the Kings, (Quirites, Regem create; ita patribus visum est. Again, Tullium Hostilium Regem Populus Jussit, Patres authores facti) the Confirmation of their Lawes (Ut ab Romulo traditum, suffragium viratim eadem vi, eodemq; jure omnibus Datum est); and the last appeal in matters of Judicature, as appears in the Case of Horatius that killed his Sister; Till in the Raign of Servius (non enim ut ab Romulo traditum traditum cæteri ſervaverunt reges) the people being grown ſomewhat, ~~either~~ the power of the Curiata was for the greater part tranſlated unto the Centuriata Comitia inſtituted by this King, which diſtributed the people according to the Cenſe or valuation of their Eſtates ~~unto~~ ſix Claſſes, every one containing about fourty Centuries, divided into Youth and Elders; the Youth for field-ſervice, the Elders for the defence of their Territory, all armed and under continual Diſcipline, in which they aſſembled both upon Military and Civill occaſions. But when the Senate propoſed unto the People, the horſe onely whereof there were twelve Centuries, conſiſting of the Richeſt ſort over and above thoſe of the foot enumerated, were called with the firſt Claſſis of the foot unto the ſuffrage; or if theſe accorded not, then the ſecond Claſſis was called to them, but ſeldom or never any of the reſt. Wherefore the people after the expulſion of the Kings, growing impatient of this inequality, reſted not till they had reduced the Suffrage as it had been in the Comitia Curiata to the whole People again; But in another way, that is to ſay, by the Comitia Tributa, which thereupon were inſtituted, being a Council where the People in Exigencies made Lawes without the Senate; which Lawes were called Plebiſcita. This Councill is that in regard whereof Cicero and other great Wits ſo frequently inveigh againſt the People, and ſometimes even Livy, as at the Inſtitution: (Hunc Annum inſignem maximè Comitia Tributa efficiunt; res major victoriâ ſuſcepti certaminis quam uſu, plus enim dignitatis Comitiis ipſis detractum eſt, patribus ex Concilio ſubmovendis, quam Virium aut plebi additum aut demptum patribus) To ſay truth, it was a kind of Anarchy, whereof the people could not be excuſable, if there had not, through the Courſes taken by the Senate, been otherwiſe a neceſſity that they muſt have ſeen the Common-wealth run into Oligarchy.

The Manner how the Comitia Curiata, Centuriata, or Tributa were called, (during the time of the Common-wealth to the Suffrage, was by lot: the Curia, Century or Tribe whereon the firſt lot fell, being ſtyled Principium, or the prerogative; and the other Curiæ, Centuries, or Tribes, whereon the ſecond, third, fourth Lots, &c. fell, the Jure vocatæ; from henceforth not the firſt Claſſis, as in the times of Servius; but the Prerogative, whether Curia, Century or Tribe, came firſt to the Suffrage, whoſe Vote was called omen Prærogativum, and ſeldom failed to be leading unto the reſt of the Tribes: The Jure vocatæ in the order of their Lots came next: the Manner of giving ſuffrage was, by caſting woodden Tablets marked for the affirmative, or the Negative, into certain Urns ſtanding upon a Scaffold as they marched over it in files; which for the Reſemblance it bore, was called the Bridge; the Candidate or Competitor who had moſt Suffrages in a Curia, Century or Tribe, was ſaid to have that Curia Century or Tribe; and he who had moſt of the Curiæ Centuries or Tribes, carried the Magiſtracy.

Theſe three places being premiſed as ſuch upon which there will be frequent Reflexion, I come unto the Narrative, divided into two parts, the firſt containing the Inſtitution, the ſecond the Conſtitution of the Common-wealth; in each whereof I ſhall diſtinguiſh the Orders, as thoſe which contain the whole Model, from the reſt of the Diſcourſe, which tendeth onely unto the Explanation or proof of them.

Inſtitution of the Common-wealth.

In the Inſtitution or building of a Common-wealth, the firſt Work (as that of builders) can be no other then fitting and diſtributing the Materials.

Diviſions of the People.

The materials of a Common-wealth are the people; And the People of Oceana were diſtributed by caſting them into certain Diviſions, regarding their Quality, their Ages, their Wealth, and the Places of their reſidence or habitation, which was done by the enſuing Orders.

1. Order. Into Freemen, and Servants.

The firſt Diſtributing the people into Freemen or Citizens, and Servants, while ſuch; for if they attain unto Liberty, that is, to live of themſelves, they are Freemen or Citizens.

This Order needeth no proof, in regard of the nature of ſervitude, which is inconſiſtent with Freedom or Participation of Government in a Common-wealth.

2. Order. Into Youth and Elders.

The ſecond Order diſtributeth Citizens into Youth and Elders (ſuch as are from 18. years of Age to 30, being accounted Youth; and ſuch as are of 30. and upwards Elders) and eſtabliſheth that the Youth ſhall be the marching Armies, and the Elders the ſtanding Garriſons of this Nation.

A Common-wealth whoſe Arms are in the hands of her ſervants, had need be ſcituated (as is elegantly ſaid of Venice by Contarini Lontana, dalla fede degli huomini) out of the reach of ſuch Clutches; witneſſe the danger run by that of Carthage in the Rebellion of Spendius and Matho. But though a City (if one ſwallow make a Summer) may thus chance to be ſafe, yet ſhall ſhe never be great; for if Carthage or Venice acquired any fame in their Arms, it is known to have happened through the meer virtue of their Captains, and not of their Orders: wherefore Iſrael, Lacedemon, and Rome intailed their Arms upon the prime of their Citizens, divided (at leaſt in Lacedemon mon and Rome) into Youth and Elders; the Youth for the Field, and the Elders for defence of the Territory.

The third Order diſtributeth the Citizens into Horſe and Foot by the Cenſe or valuation of their Eſtates; they who have above one hundred pounds a year in Lands, Goods, or Moneys, being obliged to be of the Horſe; and they who have under, to be of the Foot. But if a man have prodigally waſted and ſpent his Patrimony, he is neither capable of Magiſtracy, Office, nor Suffrage in the Common-wealth.

3. Ord. Into Horſe and Foot.

Citizens are not onely to defend the Common-wealth, but according to their Abilities, as the Romans, under Servius Tullius (regard had unto their Eſtates) were ſome inrolled in the Horſe Centuries, and other of the Foot, with Arms enjoyned accordingly; nor could it be otherwiſe in the reſt of the Common-wealths; though out of Remains that are ſo much darker it be not ſo clearly proveable. And the neceſſary prerogative to be given by a Common-wealth unto Eſtates in ſome meaſure is in the nature of induſtry, and the uſe of it to the Publick, (Populus Romanus, (ſaith Julius Exuperantius) per Claſſes Diviſus erat, et pro Patrimonii facultate cenſebantur; ex iis, omnes quibus res erat, ad militiam Ducebantur: diligenter enim pro victoria laborabant qui ex libertate bona patriam defendebant: Illi autem quibus nullæ opes erant, Caput ſuum, quod ſolum poſſidebant, cenſebantur et belli tempore in mœnibus reſidebant; facilè enim poterant exiſtere proditores, quia egeſtas haud facilè habetur ſine Damno. Hos igitur Marius, quibus non fuerat Reſp. committenda, duxit ad bellum: and his ſucceſſe was accordingly): There is a mean in things; as exorbitant riches overthrow the ballance of a Common-wealth, ſo Extream poverty cannot hold it, nor is by any means to be truſted with it. The clauſe in the Order concerning the Prodigall is Athenian, and a very Laudable one; for he that could not live upon his patrimony, if he come to touch the publick money, makes a Common-wealth Bank-rupt.

The Fourth Order diſtributeth the People according unto the places of their habitation, into Pariſhes, Hundreds and Tribes.

4. Ord. into Pariſhes, Hundreds, and Tribes.

For except the People be methodically diſtributed, they cannot be methodically Collected: but the being of a Common-wealth conſiſteth in the methodicall collection of the people; wherefore you have the Iſraelitiſh Diviſions into Rulers of Thouſands, of Hundreds, of Fifties, and of Tens; and of the whole Common-wealth, into Tribes. The Laconick into Oba's, Mora's and Tribes; the Roman into Tribes, Centuries, and Claſſes; and ſomething there muſt of neceſſity be in every Government of like nature; as that in the late Monarchy, by Counties: But this being the onely Inſtitution in Oceana, (except that of the Agrarian) which required any charge, or included any difficulty, engageth me unto a more particular deſcription of the manner how it was performed, as followeth.

The uſe and method of the Surveyors.

One thouſand Surveyors Commiſſionated and inſtructed by the Lord Archon and the Councill, being divided into two equal numbers, each under the inſpection of two Surveyors general were diſtributed into the Northern and Southern parts of the Territory, divided by the River Hemiſua, the whole whereof containeth about Ten thouſand Pariſhes, ſome ten of thoſe being aſſigned unto each Surveyor; For as to this matter there needed no great exactneſſe, it tending onely, by ſhewing whither every one was to repair, and where about to begin; unto the more orderly carrying on of the work: The nature of their Inſtructions otherwiſe regarding rather the number of the Inhabitants, then of the Pariſhes. The Surveyors therefore being every one furniſhed with a proportion convenient of Urns, Balls and Ballotting Boxes, (in the uſe whereof they had been formerly exerciſed) and now arriving each at his reſpective Pariſhes, began with the People by teaching them their firſt leſſon, which was the Ballot; and albeit they found them in the beginning ſomewhat Froward as at toyes, with which, while they were in Expectation of greater matters from a Councill of Legiſlators, they conceived themſelves to be abuſed, they came within a while to think them pretty ſport, and at length ſuch as might very ſoberly be uſed in good Earneſt; whereupon the Surveyors began the Inſtitution included in

5. Ord. Inſtitution of the Pariſhes of the Ballot and of the Deputies.

The Fifth Order requiring, That upon the firſt Munday next enſuing the laſt of December, the bigger Bell in every Pariſh throughout the Nation, be rung at eight of the Clock in the morning, and continue Ringing for the ſpace of one Hour; and that all the Elders of the Pariſh reſpectively repair unto the Church before the Bell have done ringing; where dividing themſelves into two equall Numbers, or as near Equall as may be, they ſhall take their places according to their Dignities, if they be of divers qualities, and according to their ſeniority, if they be of the ſame, the one half on the one ſide, and the other half on the other, in the body of the Church; which done, they ſhall make oath unto the Overſeers of the Pariſh for the time being, (inſtead of theſe the Surveyors was to officiate at the Inſtitution or ſuch Aſſembly) by holding up their hands, to make a fair Election according unto the Lawes of the Ballot, as they be hereafter Explained; of ſuch perſons amounting unto a Fifth part of their whole number to be their Deputies, and to exercise their power in manner hereafter explained, as they ſhall think in their Conſciences to be fittest for that truſt, and will acquit themſelves of it to the beſt advantage of the Common-wealth. And, oath being thus made, they ſhall proceed unto Election, if the Elders of the Pariſh amount unto one Thouſand by the Ballot of the Tribe (as it is in due place Explained): And if the Elders of the Pariſh amount unto Fifty or upwards, but within the Number of one Thouſand, by the Ballot of the Hundred (as it is in the due place explained); But if the Elders amount not unto Fifty, then they ſhall proceed unto the Ballot of the Pariſh as it is in this place, and after this manner explained. The two Overſeers for the time being, ſhall ſeat themſelves at the upper end of the middle Alley, with a Table before them, their faces being towards the Congregation: And the Conſtable for the time being ſhall ſet an Urn before the Table, into which he ſhall put ſo many Balls as there be Elders preſent, whereof there ſhall be one that is gilded, the reſt being white; and when the Conſtable hath ſhaken the Urn ſufficiently to mix the Balls, the Overſeers ſhall call the Elders unto the Urn, who from each ſide of the Church, ſhall come up the middle Alley in two Ales, every man paſſing by the Urn, and drawing one Ball, which if it be ſilver, he ſhall caſt into a Bowl ſtanding at the foot of the Urn, and return by the outward Alley on his ſide unto his place. But he who draweth the gold-Ball is the Propoſer, and ſhall be ſeated between the Overſeers, where he ſhall begin in what order he pleaſeth, and name ſuch as (upon his oath already taken) he conceiveth fittest to be choſen, one by one unto the Elders; and the party named ſhall withdraw while the Congregation is in Ballotting of his name by the double Box or Boxes appointed and marked on the outward part, to ſhew which ſide is Affirmative, and which Negative, being carried by a Boy or Boyes appointed by the Overſeers, unto every one of the Elders, who ſhall hold up a pellet made of linnen rags, between his finger and his thumb, and put it after ſuch a manner into the box, as though no man can ſee into which ſide he putteth it; yet any man may ſee that he puts in but one pellet, or ſuffrage; and the ſuffrage of the Congregation being thus given, ſhall be returned with the Box or Boxes unto the Overſeers, who opening the ſame ſhall pour the affirmative Balls into a white Bowl ſtanding upon the Table on the right hand, to be numbred by the first Overseer; and the Negative into a Green Bowl standing on the left hand, to be numbred by the second Overseer: and the suffrages being numbred, he who hath the major part in the Affirmative, is one of the Deputies of the Parish, and when so many Deputies are chosen as amounts unto a full fifth part of the whole number of the Elders, the Ballot for that time shall cease. The Deputies being chosen are to be listed by the Overseers in order as they were Chosen, save only that such as are Horse are to be listed in the first place with the rest proportionably to the number of the Congregation, after this Manner:

Anno Dom.

The List of the first Mover.

A. A. ord. eq.	1. Dep.	of the Parish of — in the Hundred of — and the Tribe of — which Parish at the present Election containeth 20 Elders, whereof one of the Horse or Equestrian Order.
B. B.	2. Dep.
C C.	3. Dep.
D. D.	4. Dep.
E. E.	5. Dep.

The first and second in the List are Overseers by Consequence: the third is the Constable, and the fourth and fifth are Church-Wardens; the persons so chosen are Deputies of the Parish for the space of one year from their Election, and no longer, nor may they be Elected two years together. This List, being the Primum Mobile, or first mover of the Common-wealth, is to be Registred in a Book, diligently kept and preserved by the Overseers, who are Responsible in their places for these and other Duties to be hereafter mentioned, unto the Censors of the Tribe, and the Congregation is to observe the present Order, as they will Answer the contrary unto the Phylarch, or Prerogative Troop of the Tribe; which, in case of failure in the whole or any part of it, have power to Fine them or any of them, at discretion, but under an Appeal unto the Parliament.

For proof of this Order, in Reason: it is with all Polititians past dispute, that paternal power is in the right of nature; and this is no other then the derivation of power from Fathers of Families, as the naturall Root of a Common-wealth; and for Experience, if it be otherwise in that of Holland, I know no no other Example of like kind. In Israel, the Soveraign power came clearly from the natural root, the Elders of the whole people, and Rome was born Comitiis Curiatis in her Parochial Congregations, out of which Romulus first raised her Senate, then all the rest of the Orders of that Common-wealth, which rose so high: For the depth of a Common-wealth is the just height of it. Jos. 24. 1.

Ipsa hæret Scopulis et tantum vertice ad auras Æthereas, quantum Radice ad Tartara, tendit.

She raises up her head unto the Skies,
Neer as her Root unto the center lies.

And if the Common-wealth of Rome were born of thirty Parishes, this of Oceana was born of Ten thousand. But whereas mention in the Birth of this is made of an Equestrian Order, it may startle such as know that the division of the people of Rome at the Institution of that Common-wealth into Orders, was the occasion of her ruine. The distinction of the Patrician as an hereditary order from the very Institution, engrossing all the Magistracies, was indeed the destruction of Rome; but to a Knight or one of the Equestrian Order, saith Horace:

Si quadringentis sex, septem millia desunt
Plebs eris.

By which it should seem that this order was no otherwise hereditary then a man's Estate, nor gave it any Claim to Magistracy; wherefore you shall never find that it disquieted the Common-wealth; nor doth the name denote any more in Oceana, then the Duty of such a mans Estate unto the Publique.

But the Surveyors both in this place and in others, for as much as they could not observe all the circumstances of this Order, especially that of the time of Election, did for the first as well as they could; and the Elections being made and Registred, took each of them Copies of those Lists which were within their allotments; which done, they produced,

The Sixth Order, directing, in case a Parson or Vicar of a Parish come to be removed by death, or by the Censors, that the Congregation of the Parish Assemble and depute one or two Elders by the Ballot, who upon the charge of the Parish shall repair unto one of the Universities of this Nation with a Certificate signed by the Overseers, and addressed unto the Vice-Chancellor; which Certificate giving ving notice of the death or Removall of the Parson or Vicar, of the value of the Parsonage or Vicaridge, and of the desire of the Congregation to receive a Probationer from that University; the Vice-Chancellor upon the Receipt thereof shall call a Convocation, and having made choyce of a fit person, shall return him in due time unto the Parish, where the person so returned shall receive the full fruits of the Benefice or Vicaridge, and do the duty of the Parson or Vicar, for the space of one year, as Probationer; and the space of one year being expired, the Congregation of the Elders shall put their Probationer to the Ballot; and if he attain not unto two parts in three of the Suffrage affirmative, he shall take his leave of the Parish, and they shall send in like manner for another Probationer: but if their Probationer attain unto two parts in three of the Suffrage affirmative, he is the Pastor of that Parish. And the Pastour of the Parish shall pray with the Congregation, preach the Word, and administer the Sacraments unto the same, according unto the Directory to be hereafter appointed by the Parliament. Nevertheless such as are of gather'd Congregations, or from time to time shall joyn with any of them, are in no wise obliged to this way of Electing their Teachers, or to give their Votes in this Case, but wholly left unto the liberty of their Conscience, and unto that way of worship which they shall chuse, being not Popish, Jewish, nor Idolatrous: and to the end that they may be the better protected by the State in the Free Exercise of the same, they are desired to make choyce in such manner as they best like, of certain Magistrates in every one of their Congregations, which we could wish might be Four in each of them, to be Auditors in Cases of differences, or distaste, if any through variety of opinions, that may be grievous, or injurious unto them, should fall out. And such Auditors or Magistrates shall have power to examine the matter and inform themselves, to the end that if they think it of sufficient weight, they may acquaint the Phylarch, or introduce it into the Councill of Religion; where all such Causes as such Magistrates shall introduce, shall from time to time be heard and determined according unto such Lawes as are or shall hereafter be provided by the Parliament for the just defence of the Liberty of Conscience.

This Order consisteth of three parts, the first restoring the power of Ordination unto the people, which that it originally appertaineth unto them, is clear (though not in English, yet in Scripture,) where the Apostles ordained Elders by the holding up of hands in every Congregation, that is, by the suffrage

of the people which was alſo given in ſome of thoſe Cities by the Ballot; and though it may be ſhewn that the Apoſtles ordained ſome by the Laying on of hands, it will not be ſhewen that they did ſo in every congregation.

Excommunication as not clearly proveable out of Scripture being omitted. The ſecond part of the order implyes and eſtabliſheth a nationall Religion; for there be degrees of knowledge in Divine things, true Religion is not to be attained unto without ſearching the Scriptures; the Scripture cannot be ſearched by us unleſſe we have them to ſearch; and if we have nothing elſe or (which is all one) underſtand nothing elſe but a tranſlation we may be (as in the place alleadged, we have been) beguiled or miſled by the tranſlation, while we ſhould be ſearching the true ſence of the Scripture, which cannot be attained unto in a naturall way (and a Common-wealth is not to preſume upon that which is ſupernaturall) but by the knowledge of the originall, and of Antiquity acquired by our own ſtudies, or thoſe of ſome other, for even Faith cometh by hearing. Wherefore a Common-wealth not making proviſion of men from time to time, knowing in the originall languages wherein the Scriptures were written and verſed in thoſe Antiquities whereunto they ſo frequently relate, that the true ſenſe of them dependeth in a great part upon that knowledge, can never be ſecure that ſhe ſhall not loſe the Scripture, and by conſequence her Religion, which to preſerve ſhe muſt inſtitute ſome method of this knowledge, and ſome uſe of ſuch as have acquired it, which amounteth unto a Nationall Religion.

The Common-wealth having thus performed her duty towards God, as a rational Creature by the beſt Application of her reaſon unto Scripture, for the preſervation of Religion in the purity of the ſame, yet pretendeth not unto infallibility, but comes in the third part of the order, eſtabliſhing Liberty of Conſcience according to the inſtructions given unto her Councell of Religion, to raiſe up her hands to Heaven, for further light, in which proceeding ſhe followeth that (as was ſhewen in the preliminaries) of Iſrael who though her Nationall Religion were evermore a part of her Civil Law gave unto her Prophets the upper hand of all her Orders.

But the Surveyours having now done with the Pariſhes, tooke their Leaves ſo, A pariſh is the firſt diviſion of Landoccaſioned by the firſt Collection of the people of Oceana, whoſe function proper unto that place is compriſed in the ſix foregoing Orders. Definition of a Pariſh.

The next ſtep in the progreſſe of the ſurveyours was to a meeting of the neereſt of them, as their work lay, by twenties where conferring their liſts and computing the Deputies contained therein, as the number of them in Pariſhes, being neer- Inſtitution of the Hundred eſt neighbours, amounted unto one hundred, or as eaven as might conveniently be brought with that account, they caſt them and thoſe Pariſhes into the precinct which (be the Deputies ever ſince more or fewer) is ſtill called the hundred and unto every one of theſe Precincts they appointed a certaine place being the moſt convenient Towne within the ſame for the Annuall Randezvouz: which done, each Surveyour returning unto his hundred and ſummoning the Deputies contained in his liſts unto the Randezvouz, they appeared and received,

7. Ord. The Seventh Order, requiring, That upon the firſt Munday next enſuing the laſt of January, the Deputies of every Pariſh Annually aſſemble in Arms at the Randevouz of the Hundred, and there Elect out of their number one Juſtice of the Peace, one Jury-man, one Captain one Enſign of their Troop or Century, each of theſe out of the Horſe; and one Jury-man, one Crowner, one High Conſtable out of the Foot; the Election to be made by the Ballot in this manner the Jury-men for the time being are to be Overſeers of the Ballot, (inſtead of theſe, the Surveyors are to officiate at the firſt Aſſembly) and to look unto the performance of the ſame according to what was directed in the Ballot of the Pariſhes, ſave that the High Conſtable ſetting forth the Urn, ſhall have five ſeverall ſuites of gold-Balls, and one Doſen of every ſuite whereof the firſt ſhall be marked with the letter A. the ſecond with the letter B. the third with C. the fourth with D. and the fifth with E. And of each of theſe ſuits he ſhall caſt one Ball into his hat, or into a little Urn, and ſhaking the Balls together preſent them unto the firſt Overſeer, who ſhall draw one, and the ſuit which is ſo drawn by the Overſeer ſhall be of uſe for that day, and none other: for Example, if the Overſeer drew an A. the High Conſtable ſhall put ſeven gold-Balls marked with the letter A. into the Urn, with ſo many ſilver ones as ſhall bring them eaven with the number of the Deputies, who being ſworn as before, at the Ballot of the Pariſh to make a fair Election, ſhall be called unto the Urn; and every man coming in manner as was there ſhewed, ſhall Draw one Ball, which if it be ſilver, he ſhall caſt it into a Bowl ſtanding at the foot of the Urn, and return unto his place; but the firſt that draweth a gold Ball (ſhewing it unto the Overſeers who if it have not the letter of the preſent Ballot, hath power to apprehend and puniſh him), is the firſt Elector: the ſecond the ſecond Elector, and ſo to the ſeventh, which Order they are to obſerve in their function. The Electors as they are drawn ſhall be placed upon the Bench by the Over-

Overlers, till the whole number be Compleat, and then be Conducted with the List of the Officers to be chosen, into a place apart, where being private, the first Elector shall name a person unto the first office in the List; and if the person so named being Ballotted by the rest of the Electors, attain not unto the better half of the Suffrages in the affirmative, the first Elector shall continue nominating others, untill one of them so nominated by him attain unto the plurality of the Suffrages in the affirmative, and be written first Competitor to the first office. This done, the second Elector shall observe in his turn the like order; and so the rest of the Electors naming Competitors each unto his respective office in the List, till one Competitor be chosen unto every office: and when one Competitor is chosen unto every office, the first Elector shall begin again to name a second competitor unto the first office, and the rest successively shall name unto the rest of the Offices till two Competitors be chosen unto every office, the like shall be repeated till three Competitors be chosen to every office: And when three Competitors be chosen to every office, the List shall be returned unto the Overlers, or such as the Overlers, in case they or either of them happened, be Electors, have substituted in his or their place or places: and the Overlers or Substitutes having caused the List to be read unto the Congregation, shall put the Competitors in order as they are written, unto the Ballot of the Congregation; and the rest of the proceedings being carried on in the manner directed in the Fifth Order, that Competitor of the three written unto each office, who hath most of the Suffrages above half in the affirmative, is the Officer. The List being after this manner Compleated, shall be entred into a Register, to be kept at the Randevous of the Hundred, under inspection of the Magistrates of the same, after this manner:

} of the Hundred of — in the Tribe of — which Hundred consisteth at this Election of 105 Deputies.

The List being entred, the High Constable shall take three Copies of the same, whereof he shall forthwith Return one unto the Lord high Sheriffe of the Tribe; a second unto the Lord Custos Rotulorum, and a third unto the Censors (or these through the want of such Magistrates at the first muster, may be returned unto the Orator, to be appointed for that Tribe.) To the observation of all and every part of this Order, the Officers and Deputies of the Hundred are all and every of them obliged, as they will Answer it to the Phylarch, who hath power in case of failure in the whole or any part, to Fine all or any of them so failing at discretion, or according unto such Laws as shall hereafter be provided in that Case, but under an Appeal unto the Parliament.

There is little in this order worthy of any further account, then that it answers unto the rulers of hundreds in Israel, to the Mora or Military part of the Tribe in Lacedemon, and to the Century in Rome. The Jury-men, being two in a hundred, and so forty in a Tribe, give the Latitude allowed by the Law for exceptions. And whereas the gold-balls at this Ballot begin to be marked with Letters, whereof one is to be drawn immediately before it begin: This is to the end that the letter being unknown, men may be frustrated of Tricks, or foul play, whereas otherwise a man might bring a gold ball with him and make as if he had drawn it out of the Urn. The Surveyors when they had taken Copies of these lists, had accomplished their worke in the Hundreds.

Definition of the Hundred

So, An Hundred is the second division of Land occasioned by the second Collection of the people, whose Civill and Military functions proper unto unto this plate are comprised in the foregoing order. Having stated the hundreds, they met once againe by twenties, where there was nothing more easy then to cast every twenty hundreds, as they lay most conveniently together into one Tribe, so the whole Territory of Oceana, consisting of about ten thousand Parishes, came to be cast into one thousand hundreds, and into fifty tribes. In every Tribe at the place appointed for the Annuall Randevouze of the same, were then, or soone after, put in hand, those buildings which are now called Pavilions, each of them standing with one open side, upon fair Columnes like the porch of some ancient Temple, and looking into a field, capable of the muster of some foure-thousand men: before each Pavilion, stand three pillars sustaining urnes for the Ballot, that on the right hand equall in height to the brow of an Horse-man, being called the Horse urn, that on the left hand, with Bridges on either side to bring it Equall in height with the brow of a foot man, being called the Foot-urn; and the middle urne, with a bridge on the side towards the Foot-urn, the other side, as left for the horse, being without one. and here ended the whole worke of the Surveyors who returned unto the Lord Archon with this.

No great matter of charge for the building of a Commonwealth, in regard that it hath cost (which was pleaded by the Surveyors)

Surveyors) as much to rigg a few ships, nevertheless that proveth not them to be honest, nor their accompt to be just; but they had their money for once, though their reckoning be plainly guilty of a Crime, to cost him his neck that Commits it another time, it being impossible for a Common-wealth, without an exact provision, that she be not abused in this kind; to subsist, if it were not in regard of the charge (though that may goe deepe) yet in regard of the debauchery and corruption, whereunto, by negligence in her accounts, she infallibly exposeth her Citizens, and thereby slaketh the publique Faith, which is the Nerve and ligament of Government. But the Surveyors being dispatched, the Lord Archon was very curious in giving names unto his Tribes, which having caused to be written in scroles cast unto an urne, and presented unto the Councellours, each of them drew one, and was accordingly sent unto the Tribe in his Lot, as Orators of the same, a magistracy no otherwise instituted, then for once and Protempore, to the end that the Councill upon so great an occasion might both Congratulate with the Tribes, and assist at the first muster in some things of necessity to be differently carried from the established administration and future course of the Common-wealth.

The Orators being arrived, every one as soone as might be, at the Randevouze of his Tribe, gave notice to the hundreds, and summoned the muster, which appeared for the most part upon good horses, and already indifferently well Armed; as to instance in one for all, the Tribe of Nubia where Hermes de Caducea, Lord Orator of the same, after a short salutation and an hearty welcome, applyed himself unto his businesse, which began with

8. Ord. The Eighth Order; requiring, That the Lord High Sheriffe as Commander in Chief, and the Lord Custos Rotulorum as Muster-master of the Tribe, (or the Orator for the first Muster) upon Reception of the Lists of their Hundreds, returned unto them by the High Constables of the same, forthwith cause them to be cast up, dividing the Horse from the Foot, and listing the Horse by their names in Troops, each Troop containing about a hundred in number, to be inscribed first, second or third Troop, &c. according to the Order Agreed upon by the said Magistrates: which done, they shall list the Foot in like manner, and inscribe the Companies in like order. These Lists upon the Eve of the Muster shall be delivered unto certain Trumpetors and Drummers, whereof there shall be Fifteen of each sort (as well for the present as other uses to be hereafter mentioned) dispen-

plated by the Tribe: and the Trumpeters and Drummers shall be in the Field before the Pavilion, upon the day of the muster, so soon as it is light, where they shall stand every one with his List in his hand, at a due distance, placed according unto the order of the List; the Trumpeters with the Lists of the Horse on the right hand, and the Drummers with the lists of the Foot on the left hand: where having sounded a while, each of them shall begin to call, and continue calling the names of the Deputies, as they come into the Field, till both the Horse and Foot be gathered by that means into their due order. The Horse and Foot being in order, the Lord Lieutenant of the Tribe shall cast so many Gold Balls marked with the figures 1. 2. 3. 4. &c. as there be Troops of Horse in the Field, together with so many Silver Balls as there be Companies, marked in the same manner, into a little Urn, whereunto he shall call the Captains; and the Captains drawing the Gold Balls shall command the Horse; and those that draw the Silver the Foot, each in the order of his Lot. The like shall be done by the Conductor at the same time for the Enligns, at another Urn; and they that draw the Gold Balls shall be Cornets, the rest Enligns.

This order may Trash the reader, but tends unto a wonderfull speed of the Muster, to which it would be a great matter, to lose a day in ranging and martialling, whereas by vertue of this the Tribe is no sooner in the feild then in Battalia, nor sooner in Battalia then called unto the Urns or the Ballot by vertue of

The Ninth Order; whereby the Censors (or the Orator for the first Muster) upon Reception of the Lists of the Hundreds from the High Constables, according as is directed by the Seventh Order, are to make their notes for the Urns before-hand, with regard had unto the Lists of the Magistrates, to be elected by the ensuing Orders; that is to say, by the first List called the Prime Magnitude, six; and by the second called the Gallary, nine. Wherefore the Censors are to put into the middle Urn for the Election of the first List twenty four Gold Balls, with twenty six blanks or silver Balls, in all sixty; and into the side Urns sixty gold-balls divided unto each according unto the different number of the Horse and the Foot; that is to say, if the Horse and the Foot be equall, equally; and if the Horse and the Foot be unequall, unequally, by an Arithmeticall proportion: The like shall be done the second day of the Muster, for the second List, save 9. Ord.

that the Censors shall put into the middle Urn 36. Gold-Balls with 24. Blanks, in all sixty; and sixty Gold-Balls into the five Urns divided respectively unto the number of the Horse and the Foot: and the gold-Balls in the side Urns at either Ballot are by the addition of Blanks to be brought even with the number of the Ballottants at either Urn respectively. The Censors having prepared their Notes, as hath been shewn, and being come at the day into the Field, shall present a Little Urn unto the Lord High Sheriff, who is to draw twice for the Letters to be used that day, the one at the side Urns, and the other at the middle. And the Censors having fitted the Urns accordingly, shall place themselves in certain moveable Seats or Pulpits, (to be kept for that use in the Pavilion) the first Censor before the Horse Urn, the second before the Foot Urn, the Lord Lieutenant doing the office of Censor pro tempore at the middle Urn; where all and every one of them shall cause the Lawes of the Ballot to be diligently observed, taking a speciall care, that no man be suffered to come above once unto the Urn (whereof it more particularly concerns the Sub-Censors, that is to say, the Overseers of every Parish, to be carefull, they being each in this regard responsible for their respective Parishes) or to draw above one Ball, which if it be Gold, he is to present unto the Censor, who shall look upon the Letter; and if it be not that of the Day, and of the respective Urn, apprehend the party, who for this or any other like disorder, is obnoxious unto the Phylarch.

This order being observed by the Censors it is not possible for the People, if they can but draw the Balls, though they understand nothing at all of the Ballot to be out. To Philosophize further upon this Art, though there be nothing more rationall, were not worth the while, because in writing it will be perplext, and the first practise of it gives the demonstration, whence it came to passe, that the Orators after some needlesse paines in the explanation of the two foregoing Orders, betaking himself to exemplify the same, found the work done unto his hand; for the Tribe as eager upon a businesse of this nature, had retained one of the Surveyors, out of whom (before the Orators arrived) they had gotten the whole mystery by a stolen muster, at which in order unto the Ballot, they had made certaine Magistrates pro tempore, wherefore he found not onely the Pavilion, (for this time a Tent) erected with three posts supplying the place of Pillars unto the urnes, but the urnes, being prepared with a just number of Balls for the first first Ballot, to become the field, and the occasion very gallantly, with their covers made in the manner of Helmets, open at either Eare to give passage unto the Hands of the Ballottants, and flanting with noble Plumes to direct the March of the people; wherefore he proceeded to

The Tenth Order, requiring of the Deputies of the Parishes, That upon every Monday next ensuing the last of February, they make their personall appearance, Horse and Foot in Arms accordingly, at the Randevouz of the Tribe, where being in discipline, the Horse upon the right, and the Foot upon the left, before the Pavilion; and having made Oath by holding up their hands, upon the tender of it by the Lord High Sheriffe, to make Election without favour, and of such onely as they shall judge fittest for the Common-wealth; the Conductor shall take 3. Balls, the one inscribed with these words [outward files,] another with these words [inward files,] and the third with these [middle files;] which Balls he shall cast into a little Urn, and present it to the Lord high Sheriff, who drawing one, shall give the words of Command, as they are thereupon inscribed, and the Ballot shall begin accordingly: For example, if the Ball be inscribed middle-files, the Ballot shall begin by the middle; that is, the two files that are middle to the Horse, shall draw out first to the Horse Urn, and the two files that are middle to the Foot, shall draw out first to the Foot Urn, and be followed by all the rest of the Files as they are next unto them in order. The like shall be done by the inward, or by the outward Files, in case they be first called. And the Files, as every man hath drawn his Ball, if it be silver, shall begin at the Urn to Countermarch unto their places; but he that hath drawn a gold Ball at a side Urn, shall proceed unto the middle Urn; where if the Ball he draweth be silver, he also shall Countermarch; But if it be gold, he shall take his place upon a form set crosse the Pavilion, with his face toward the Lord High Sheriff, who shall be seated in the middle of the Pavilion, with certain Clerks by him, one of which shall write down the names of every Elector, that is, of every one that drew a gold Ball at the middle Urn, and in the Order, his Ball was drawn, till the Electors amount unto six in number; and the first six Electors Horse and Foot promiscuously, are the first order of Electors; the second six (still accompting them as they are drawn) the second Order; the third six, the third Order; and the fourth six, the fourth Order of Electors: every Elector having place in his order, according unto the order wherein he was drawn: But so soon as the first order of Electors is compleat, the Lord High Sheriff shall send them with a Copy of the following List, and a Clerk that understands the Ballot, forthwith unto a little Tent standing before the Pavilion, in his eye, whereunto no other person but themselves during the Election shall approach: the List shall be written in this manner:

ANNO DOMINI,

The List of the prime Magnitude or first dayes Election of Magistrates.

Institution of the Prime Magnitude.

1. The Lord High Sheriff, Commander in Chief
2. Lord Lievtenant
3. Lord Custos Rotullorum, Muster-master-Generall
4. The Conductor, being Quartermaster-Generall
5. The first Censor
6. The second Censor

} of the Tribe of Nubia, containing at this present Muster, 700 Horse, and 1500 Foot, in all 2200 Deputies.

And the Electors of the first hand or order being six, shall each of them name unto his respective Magistracy in the left, such as are not already elected in the Hundreds, till one Competitor be chosen unto every Magistracy in the List by the Ballot of the Electors of the first Order, which done, the List with the Competitors thereunto annexed shall be returned unto the Lord High Sheriff, by the Clerk attending that order, but the Electors shall keep their places, for they have already given their Suffrage, and may not enter into the Ballot of Tribe. If there arise any dispute in an order of Electors, one of the Censors or sub-Censors appointed by them, in case they be Electors, shall enter into the Tent of that Order; and that Order shall stand unto his Judgment in the decision of the Controversie. The like shall be done exactly by each other, order of Electors, being sent as they are drawn; each with another Copy of the same List, into a distinct Tent, till there be returned unto the Lord High Sheriff four Competitors unto every Magistracy in the List; that is to say,

One

One Competitor Elected unto every office in every one of the four Orders; which Competitors the Lord High Sheriff shall cause to be pronounced or read by a Cryer unto the Congregation, and the Congregation having heard the whole Lists repeated, the names shall be put by the Lord High Sheriff unto the Tribe, one by one, beginning with the first Competitor in the first Order, thence proceeding to the first Competitor in the second Order, and so to the first in the third and fourth Orders: and the Suffrages being taken in boxes by boyes as hath been already shewn) shall be poured into the Bowles standing before the Censors, who shall be seated at each end of the Table in the Pavilion, the one numbring the Affirmatives, and the other the Negative; and he, of the four Competitors to the first Magistracy, that hath most above half the Suffrages of the Tribe in the Affirmative is the first Magistrate; The like is to be done successively by the rest of the Competitors in their order. But because soon after the Boxes are sent out for the first name, there be others sent out for the second, and so for the third, &c. by which means divers names are successively at one and the same time in balloting; the Boy that carries a Box shall sing or repeat Continually the name of the Competitor for whom that Box is carrying, with that also of the Magistracy unto which he is proposed. A Magistrate of the Tribe happening to be an Elector, may substitute any one of his own Order to execute his other Function: the Magistrates of the Prime Magnitude being thus elected, shall receive the present charge of the Tribe.

If it be objected against this order, that the Magistrates to be elected by it, will be men of more inferior rank then those of the hundreds, in regard that those are chosen first; It may be remembred, that so were the Burgesses in the former Government, nevertheless the Knights of the Shire were men of greater quality: And the election at the Hundred is made by a Councel of Electors, of whom less cannot be expected then the discretion of naming persons fittest for those capacities, with an eye upon these to be elected at the Tribe. For what may be objected in the point of difficulty, it is demonstrable by the foregoing orders, that a man might bring ten thousand men (if there were occasion) with as much ease, and as suddainly to performe the ballot, as he can make five thousand men (drawing them out by double files) to march a quarter of a mile: but because at this Ballot, to go up and down the field, distributing the Linnen pellets unto every Man, with which he is to ballot or give suffrage would lose a great deale of time, therefore a Mans wife, his daughters or others make him his provision of pellets before the ballot; and he cometh into the field with a matter of a score of them in his pocket. And now I have as good as done with the sport. The next is,

11. Ord. Functions of the Magistrates of the Prime Magnitude.

The Eleventh Order, Explaining the duties and Functions of the Magistrates, contained in the List of the prime Magnitude: And those of the Hundreds, beginning with the Lord High Sheriff, who over and above his more ancient Offices and those added by the former Order is the first Magistrate of the Phylarch, or prerogative Troop: the Lord Lieutenant over and above his Duty mentioned, is Commander in Chief of the musters of the Youth, and second Magistrate of the Phylarch; the Custos Rotulorum is to return the yearly Muster-Rolles of the Tribe, as well that of the Youth as of the Elders unto the Rolls in Emporium, and is the third Magistrate of the Phylarch: the Censors by themselves, and their sub-Censors, that is, the Overseers of the Parishes, are to see that the respective Lawes of the Ballot be observed in all the popular Assemblies of the Tribe: they have power also to put such National Ministers, as in preaching shall intermeddle with the matter of Government, out of their livings; Except the party appeal unto the Phylarch, or unto the Council of Religion where in that case the Censors shall prosecute All and every one of these Magistrates, together with the Justices of Peace: and the Jury-men of the Hundreds, amounting in the whole number unto threescore and six, are the Prerogative Troop or Phylarch of the Tribe.

1. Functions of the Phylarch.

The function of the Phylarch or Prerogative Troop is five-fold; First, they are the Council of the Tribe, and as such to Govern the Musters of the same according to the foregoing Orders, having Cognizance of what hath passed in the Congregations, or Elections made in the Parishes or the Hundreds, with power to punish any undue practises or variation from their respective Rules and Orders, under an Appeal to the Parliament. A marriage legitimately is to be pronounced by the Parochiall Congregation, the Muster of the Hundred, or the Phylarch; and if a Tribe have a desire (which they are to expresse at the Muster by their Captains, every Troop by his own) to petition the Parliament, the Phylarch as the Counsell shall frame the Petition in the Pavilion, and propose it by Clauses, unto the Ballot of the whole Tribe, and the Clauses that shall be affirmed by the Bal-

lar of the Tribe, and be signed by the hands of the six Magistrates of the Prime Magnitude, shall be received and esteemed by the Parliament as the Petition of the Tribe, and no other.

Secondly, the Phylarch hath power to call unto their assistance what other Troops of the Tribe they please (be they Elders or Youth, whose discipline will be hereafter directed) and with these to receive the Judges Itinerant in their Circuits, whom the Magistrates of the Phylarch shall assist upon the Bench, and the Juries elsewhere in their proper Functions according unto the more Ancient Lawes and Customs of this Nation. 2

Thirdly, the Phylarch shall hold the Court called the Quarter-Sessions according unto the Ancient Custom, and therein shall also hear Causes in order unto the Protection of Liberty of Conscience, by such Rules as are or shall hereafter be appointed by the Parliament. 3.

Fourthly, all Commissions, issued into the Tribes by the Parliament, or by the Chancery, are to be directed unto the Phylarch, or some of that Troop, and executed by the same respectively. 4.

Fifthly, In the Case of Levies of money the Parliament shall tax the Phylarchs, the Phylarchs shall tax the Hundreds, the Hundreds the Parishes, and the Parishes shall Levy it upon themselves: the Parishes having Levied the Tax money, accordingly shall return it unto the Officers of the Hundreds, the Hundreds unto the Phylarchs, and the Phylarchs unto the Exchequer: but if a man have ten Children living, he shall pay no taxes; if he have five living, he shall pay but half Taxes; if he have been Married three years, or be above twenty five years of age, and have no Child or Children Lawfully begotten, he shall pay double taxes: and if there happen to grow any dispute upon these or such other Orders as shall or may hereunto be added hereafter, the Phylarch shall judge the Tribes, and the Parliament shall judge the Phylarchs; for the rest, if any man shall go about to introduce the right or power of debate into any Popular Council or Congregation of this Nation, the Phylarch or any Magistrate of the Hundred or of the Tribe, shall cause him forthwith to be sent in Custody unto the Council of War. 5.

Institution of the Roll called the Pillar of Nilus.

The part of the Order relating unto the Rolls in Emporium, being of singular use, is not unworthy to be somewhat better opened;

opened; In what manner the lists of the Parishes, Hundreds and Tribes are made, hath been shewen in their respective orders, whereafter the parties elected, they give account of the whole number of the Elders or Deputies in their respective assemblies or musters; the like for this part exactly, is done by the youth in their discipline (to be hereafter shewen): wherefore the lists of the Parishes Youth and Elders being summed up, give the whole number of the people able to beare Armes; and the lists of the Tribes Youth and Elders being summed up, give the whole number of the people, bearing Armes. This account being annually recorded by the Master of the Rolls is called the Pillar of Nilus, because the people being the riches of the Common-wealth, as they are found to rise or fall by the degrees of this Pillar like that River, give account of the publique Harvest.

Thus much for the description of the first daies work at the Muster, which happened, as hath been shewen, to be done as soone as said: for as in practise it is of small dificulty, so requires it not much time, seeing the great Councill of Venice consisting of a like number, begins at 12. of the Clock, and Elects nine Magistrates in one afternoon: But the Tribe being dismissed for this night, repaired unto their quarters, under the conduct of their new Magistrates. The next morning returning into the field very early, the Orator proceeded to 12. Ord. Institution of the Gallaxy.

The Twelfth Order; directing the Master of the Tribe in the second dayes Election, being that of the List called the Gallaxy; in which the Censors shall prepare the Urns according to the directions given in the Ninth Order for the second Ballot, that is to say, with 36. gold-Balls in the middle Urn, making four Orders, and nine Electors in every Order according unto the number of the Magistrates in the List of the Gallaxy, which is as followeth:

1. Knight,
2. Knight } To be chosen out of the Horse.

3. Deputy
4. Deputy } To be chosen out of the Horse.
5. Deputy

6. Deputy
7. Deputy
8. Deputy } To be chosen out of the Foot.
9. Deputy

The

The rest of the Ballot shall proceed Exactly according unto that of the first day: But for as much as the Common-wealth Demandeth as well the Fruits of a mans body as of his mind, he that hath not been married shall not be Capable of these Magistracies untill he be married; if a Deputy already chosen to be an Officer in the Parish in the Hundred or in the Tribe, be afterwards chosen of the Gallary, it shall be lawfull for him to Delegate his Office in the Parish, in the Hundred, or in the Tribe, unto any one of his own order, being not already chosen into office. The Knights and Deputies being chosen, shall be brought unto the head of the Tribe by the Lord High Sheriff, who shall administer unto them this Oath, [Ye shall well and truly observe and keep the Orders and Customs of this Common-wealth which the People have Chosen.] And if any of them shall refuse the Oath, he shall be rejected; and that Competitor which had the most voices next shall be called in his place; who if he take the Oath, shall be entred in the List; But if he also refuse the Oath, he who had most voices next shall be called, and so untill the number of nine out of those Competitors which had most voices be sworn Knights and Deputies of the Gallaxy: (This Clause, in regard of the late divisions, and to the end that no violence be offered unto any mans Conscience, to be of force but for the first three years only:) The Knights of the Gallary being elected and sworn, are to repair by the Munday next ensuing the 1st of March unto the Pantheon or Pallace of Justice scituate in the Metropolis of this Common-wealth, (except the Parliament through sickness, or some other occasion, have adjourned unto some other part of the Nation) where they are to take their Places in the Senate, and continue in full Power and Commission as Senators for the full term of three years next ensuing the date of their Election. The Deputies of the Gallary are to repair by the same day (except as before excepted) unto the Hall situated in Emporium, where they are to be listed of the Prerogative Tribe or equall Representative of the people; and to continue in full power and Commission as their Deputies for the full term of three years, next ensuing their Election. But for as much as the term of every Magistracy, or office in this Common-wealth requireth an equall vacation, a Knight, or Deputy of the Gallary having fulfilled his term of three years, shall not be re-elected unto the same or any other Tribe, till he have also fulfilled his three years vacation.

Who

Who ever ſhall rightly conſider the foregoing orders, will be as little able to find how it is poſſible, that a worſhipfull Knight ſhould declare himſelfe in Ale and Bieſe, worthy to ſerve his Country, as how my Lord High Sheriff's honour, in caſe he were protected from the Law, could play the Knave. But though the forgoing Orders ſo far as they reguard the conſtitution of the Senate and the people, requireing no more as to an ordinary election then is therein explained, that is but one third part of their Knights and Deputies, are perfect; yet muſt wee in this place, and as to the Inſtitution, of neceſſity erect a ſcaffold: For the Common-wealth to the firſt Creation of her Councills in full number, required thrice as many as are eligible by the foregoing Orders; wherefore the Gratour whoſe ayd in this place was moſt neceſſary, rightly informing the people of the reaſon, ſtaid them two daies longer at the Muſter, and tooke this courſe. One liſt containing two Knights and ſeven Deputies, he cauſed to be choſen upon the ſecond day, which liſt being called the firſt Gallaxy, qualified the parties elected of it, with power for the Terme of one yeare and no longer; another liſt containing two Knights and ſeven Deputies more, he cauſed to be choſen the third day, which liſt being called the ſecond Gallaxy, qualified the parties elected of it with power, for the terme of two yeares and no longer. And upon the fourth day he choſe the third Gallaxy according as it is directed by the Order, impowered for three yeares, which Liſts ſucceſſively falling (like the ſignes or conſtellations of one Hemiſphere, that ſetting cauſe thoſe of the other to riſe) caſt the great Orbs of this Common-wealth into an Annuall Trienial and Perpetual Revolution.

The buſineſſe of the Muſter being thus happily finiſht, Hermes de Caduceo, Lord Orator of the Tribe of Nubia, being now put into her firſt Rapture, cauſed one of the cenſors Pulpits to be planted in front of the ſquadron, and aſcending into the ſame, ſpake after this manner:

My

My Lords the Magistrates, and the People of the Tribe of NUBIA,

WE have this day solemnized the happy Nuptialls of the two greatest Princes that are upon the Earth, or in Nature; Arms and Councills: in the Mutual Embraces whereof consisteth your whole Common-wealth: whose Councills upon their perpetuall Wheelings, Marches, and Countermarches, create her Armies; and whose Armies with the golden Vollies of the Ballot, at once create and Salute her Councills. There be (such is the World now adaies) that think it ridiculous to see a Nation exercising her Civill functions in military Discipline; while they committing their Buffe unto their Servants, come themselves to hold Trenchards: For what availeth it such as are unarmed, (or, which is all one, whose Education acquainteth them not with the proper use of their Swords) to be called Citizens? What were two or three thousand of you, well affected to your Country, but naked, unto one Troop of Mercenary Souldiers? If they should come upon the Field and ſay, Gentlemen, It is thought fit that ſuch and ſuch men ſhould be choſen by you; where were your Liberty? Or, Gentlemen, Parliaments are exceeding good, but you are to have a little patience, theſe Times are not ſo fit for them; where were your Common-wealth? What cauſeth the Monarchy of the Turks but Servants in Arms? What was it that begot the glorious Common-wealth of Rome, but the Sword in the hands of her Citizens? wherefore my glad Eyes ſalute the Serenity and brightneſſe of this day with a ſhowr that ſhall not cloud it. Behold, the Army of Iſrael become a Common-wealth, and the Common-wealth of Iſrael remaining an Army, with her Rulers of Tens and of Fifties, her Rulers of Hundreds, and her Rulers of Thouſands, drawing near, (as this day throughout our happy Fields) unto the Lot by her Tribes, encreaſed above threefold, and led up by her Phylarchs, or Princes, to ſit (Sellis Curulibus) upon Fifty Thrones, judging the Fifty Tribes of Oceana. Or, Is it Athens, breaking from her Iron Sepulchre; where ſhe hath been ſo long Trampled upon by Hoſts of Janizaries? For certainly that (nec vox hominem ſonat) is the voice of Theſeus, having gathered his ſcattered Athenians into one City.

This Free-born Nation liveth not upon the Dole or Bounty of one Man, but diſtributing her Annuall Magiſtracies and Honours with her own hand, is her ſelf King People — (At which the Orator was a while interrupted with ſhouts, but at length proceeded) — Is it grave Lacedemon in her armed Tribe divided by her Obæ and her Mora, which appears to chide me that I teach the people to talk, or conceive ſuch Language as is dreſt like a woman, to be a fit Uſher of the ſoyes of Liberty into the hearts of men? Is it Rome in her Victorious Arms (for ſo ſhe held her Concio or Congregation) that Congratulateth with us, for finding out that which ſhe could not hit on, and binding up her Comitia Curiata, Centuriata, and Tributa in one inviolable League of Union? Or is it the Great

Councill of incomparable Venice, bowling forth by the self-same Ballot her immortall Common-wealth? For, neither by Reason nor by her Experience is it impossible that a Common-wealth should be immortall; seeing the people being the materials never dyes, and the form which is motion must without opposition, be endlesse: The Bowl which is thrown from your hand, if there be no rub, no impediment, shall never cease: for which cause the glorious Luminaries that are the Bowles of God, were once thrown for ever; and next these, those of Venice. But certainly, my Lords, what ever these great Examples may have shewn us, we are the first that have shewn unto the World a Common-wealth Established in her rise upon Fifty such Towers, and so Garnizoned as are the Tribes of Oceana, containing one hundred thousand Elders upon the Annuall List, and yet but an out-guard; besides her marching Armies, to be equall in the discipline and in the number of her Youth.

And for as much as Soveraign powers is a necessary, but a formidable creature, not unlike the Powder, which (as you are Souldiers) is at once your safety, and your danger, being subject to take fire fire against you as for you; how well and ſecurely is She by your Gallaxy s, ſo collected as to be in full force and vigour, and yet ſo diſtributed, that it is impoſſible you ſhould be blown up by your own Magazeen. Let them who will have it, that power if ſhe be confin'd cannot be Soveraign, tell us, whether our Rivers do not enjoy a more ſecure and fruitfull raign within their proper banks, then if it were lawful for them, in raviſhing our harveſts, to ſpill themſelves? whether ſoules not confin'd unto their peculiar bodies do govern them any more, then thoſe of Witches in their Trances? Whether Power not confin'd unto the bounds of Reaſon and Virtue, have any other bounds then thoſe of Vice and Paſſion? or if Vice and Paſſion be boundleſſe, and Reaſon and Virtue have certain Limits, on which of theſe Thrones holy men ſhould anoint their Soveraign? But to blow away this duſt, The Soveraign power of a Common-wealth is no more bounded, that is to ſay, Streightened, then that of a Monarch, but is Ballanced. The Eagle mounteth not unto her proper pitch, if ſhe be bounded; nor, if ſhe be not ballanced. And leſt a Monarch ſhould think that he can reach farther with his Scepter, the

Receive the Soveraign Power; you have received her; hold her faſt, embrace her for ever in your ſhining Arms: The virtue of the Loadſtone is not impaired or Limited, but receiveth ſtrength and nouriſhment by being bound in Iron. And ſo giving your Lordſhips much joy, I take my leave of this Tribe.

The Orator deſcending, had the period of his ſpeech made with a vaſt applauſe, and exultation by the whole Tribe, attending him, for that night unto his quarter, as the Phylarch, with ſome commanded Troops, did the next day unto the Frontires of the Tribe, where Leave was taken on both ſides with more Teares then Grief.

Definition of the Tribe. So, A Tribe is the third diviſion of Land occaſioned by the third Collection of the People, whoſe functions proper unto that place are contained in the five foregoing Orders.

The Inſtitution of the Common-wealth was ſuch as needed thoſe props and Scaffolds, which may have troubled the Reader, but I ſhall here take them away and come unto the Conſtitution which ſtands by it ſelfe and yeelds a clearer proſpect.

Conſtitution of the Common-wealth. The Motions by what hath been already ſhewn, are Spherical, and ſphericall motions have their proper Center, for which cauſe, (ere I proceed further) it will be neceſſary for the better underſtanding of the whole, that I diſcover the Center whereupon the motions of this Common-wealth are formed.

The Centre or Baſis of every Government, is no other then the Fundamentall Lawes of the ſame.

Fundamentall Lawes are ſuch as ſtate what it is that a man may call his own, that is to ſay, Proprietie; and what the meanes be whereby a man may enjoy his own, that is to ſay Protection; the firſt is alſo called Dominion, and ſecond Empire or Soveraigne power, whereof this (as hath been ſhewn) is the naturall product of the former, for ſuch as is the Ballance of the Dominion in a Nation, ſuch is the nature of her Empire.

Wherefore the Fundamentall Lawes of Oceana, or the Center of this Common-wealth are the Agrarian, and the Ballot. The Agrarian by the Ballance of dominion preſerving equalitie in the Roote, and the Ballot by an equall rotation conveying it into the branch, or exerciſe of Soveraigne power: as to begin with the former appeareth, by

Agrarian

The Thirteenth Order, Conſtituting the Agrarian Lawes of Oceana, Marpeſia and Panopea, whereby it is ordained, Firſt, for all ſuch Lands as are lying and being within the proper Territories of Oceana, that every man who is at preſent poſſeſſed, or ſhall hereafter be poſſeſſed of an Eſtate in Land exceeding the Revenue of five thouſand pounds a year, and having more then one Son, ſhall leave his Lands either equally divided among them; in caſe the Lands amount unto above 2000 l. a year unto each; or ſo near equally in caſe they come under, that the greater part or portion of the ſame remaining unto the eldeſt, exceed not the value of two thouſand pounds Revenue. And no man not in preſent poſſeſſion of Lands above the value of two thouſand pounds by the year, ſhall receive, enjoy, (except by Lawful Inheritance) acquire or purchaſe unto himſelf, Lands within the ſaid Territories amounting with thoſe already in his poſſeſſion, above the ſaid Revenue. And if a man have a daughter, or daughters, except ſhe be an Heir, or they be Heirs, he ſhall not leave or give unto any one of them in Marriage or otherwiſe for her portion above the value of one thouſand five hundred pounds in Lands Goods and Moneys: Nor ſhall any Friend, Kinſman, or Kinſwoman adde unto her or their Portion or Portions that are ſo provided for, to make any one of them greater: Nor ſhall any man demand, or have more in marriage, with any woman. Nevertheleſſe an Heir ſhall enjoy her Lawfull Inheritance, and a Widow whatſoever the bounty or affection of her husband ſhall bequeath unto her, to be divided in the firſt Generation, wherein it is divisible according as hath been ſhewn. 13. Ord.

Secondly, for Lands lying and being within the Territories of Marpeſia, the Agrarian ſhall hold in all parts as it is eſtabliſhed in Oceana, ſave onely in the Standard, or Proportion of Eſtates in Land, which ſhall be ſet for Marpeſia at five hundred pounds.

And thirdly, for Panopea, the Agrarian ſhall hold in all parts, as in Oceana. And whoſoever poſſeſſing above the proportion allowed by theſe Lawes, ſhall be lawfully convicted of the ſame, ſhall forfeit the overplus unto the uſe of the State.

O Agrarian

Agrarian Lawes of all others have ever been the greatest Bugbears, and so in the Institution were these, at which time it was ridiculous to see, how strange a fear appeared in every body of that which, being good for all, could hurt no body. But instead of the proof of this Order, I shall out of those many debates that happened ere it could be past, insert two Speeches that were made at the Councill of Legislators, the first by the Right Honourable Philautus de Garbo, a young man, being Heir apparent unto a very Noble Family, and one of the Counsellours, who expressed himself as followeth:

May it please your Highnesse,

My Lord Archon,

Oceana,

IF I did not (to my Capacity) know from how profound a Counsellor I dissent; it would certainly be no hard task to make it as light as the day; First, that an Agrarian is altogether unnecessary: Secondly, that it is dangerous unto a Common-wealth: Thirdly, that it is insufficient to keep out Monarchy: Fourthly, that it destroyes Families: Fifthly, that it destroyes Industry: And last of all, that, though it were indeed of any good use, it will be a matter of such difficulty to introduce in this Nation, and so to settle that it may be lasting, as is altogether invincible.

1. First, that an Agrarian is unnecessary unto unto a Common-wealth, what clearer teſtimony can there be, than, that the Common-wealths which are our Contemporaries (Venice, whereunto your Highneſſe giveth the upper hand of all Antiquity, being one) have no ſuch thing? And there can be no reaſon why they have it not, ſeeing it is in the Soveraign Power at any time to eſtabliſh ſuch an Order, but that they need it not; wherefore no wonder if Ariſtotle who pretends to be a good Common-wealths-man, have long ſince derided Phaleas, to whom it was attributed by the Greeks, for his invention.

Secondly, That an Agrarian is dangerous unto a Common-wealth, is affirmed upon no ſleight Authority, ſeeing Machiavill is poſitive, that it was the Diſſention which happened about the Agrarian that cauſed the Deſtruction of Rome; Nor do I think that it did much better in Lacedemon, as I ſhall ſhew anon. 2.

Thirdly, That it is inſufficient to keep out Monarchy, cannot without impiety be denyed, the holy Scriptures bearing Witneſſe, that the Common-wealth of Iſrael notwithſtanding her Agrarian, ſubmitted her neck unto the Arbitrary Yoke of her Princes. 3.

4. Wherefore to come unto my Fourth Aſſertion, That it is deſtructive unto Families; this alſo is ſo apparent, that it needeth pity rather then proof. Why alas do you bind a Nobility, which no Generation ſhall deny to have been the firſt that freely ſacrificed her blood unto the ancient Liberties of this People, upan unholy Altar? Why are the People taught, That their Liberty, which except our noble Anceſtors had been born, muſt have long ſince been buried, cannot now be born except we be buried?. A Common-wealth ſhould have the innocence of the Dove: Let us leave this purchaſe of her birth unto the Serpent, which eateth her ſelf out of the womb of her Mother.

5. But it may be ſaid perhaps, that we are falne from our firſt Love, become proud and idle. It is certain (My Lords) that the hand of GOD is not upon us for nothing, but take heed how you admit of ſuch aſſaults and ſallyes upon mens Eſtates, as may ſlacken the Nerve of labour, and give others alſo reaſon to believe that their ſweat is vain; Or whatſoever be pretended, your Agrarian (which is my Fourth Aſſertion) muſt indeed deſtroy Induſtry: For, that ſo it did did in Lacedemon, is most apparent, as also that it could do no otherwise, where every man having his 40. Quarters of Barley, with Wine proportionable, supplyed him out of his own Lot by his Labourer or Helott; and being confin'd in that unto the scantling above which he might not live, there was not any such thing as a Trade, or other Art, save that of War, in excercise; Wherefore a Spartane, if he were not in Arms, must sit and play with his fingers, whence ensued perpetuall War; And, the Estate of the Citizen being as little capable of encrease, as that of the Common-wealth, her inevitable Ruine. Now what better ends you can propose unto your selves in like wayes, I do not so well see, as that there may be worse; For Lacedemon yet, was free from civill War; but if you imploy your Citizens no better then she did, I cannot promise you that you shall fare so well, because both they are still desirous of War that hope it may be profitable unto them; And the strongest security you can give of Peace, is to make it gainfull; otherwise men will rather choose that whereby they may break your Lawes, then that whereby your Lawes may break them; which I do not speak so much much in relation unto the Nobility, or such as would be holding, as to the people or them that would be getting; the passion in these being of so much the more strength, as a mans felicity is weaker in the Fruition of things, then in the Prosecution and encrease of them.

Truly (my Lords) it is my fear, that by taking off more hands, and the best from Industry, you will farther indammage it, then can be repaired by laying on a few, and the worst: while the Nobility must be forced to send their Sons unto the Plough; and, as if this were not enough, to Marry their Daughters also unto Farmers.

6. But I do not see (to come unto the last Point) how it is possible that this thing should be brought about, to your good I mean, though it may unto the Destruction of many: For that the Agrarian of Israel, or that of Lacedemon might stand, is no such miracle; the Lands without any Consideration of the former Proprietor, being surveyed and cast into equall Lots, which could neither be bought, nor sold, nor multiplyed; so that they knew whereabout to have a man: but in this Nation no such Division can be introduced, the Lands being already in the the hands of Proprietors, and ſuch whoſe Eſtates lye very rarely together, but mixed one with another; being alſo of Tenures in nature ſo different; that as there is no experience that an Agrarian was ever introduced in ſuch a caſe, ſo there is no appearance how, or reaſon why, it ſhould: but that which is againſt Reaſon and Experience is impoſſible.

The Caſe of my Lord Philautus was the moſt concern'd in the whole Nation; for he had four younger Brothers, his Father being yet Living unto whom he was Heir of ten thouſand pounds a year: Wherefore being a man both of good parts and eſteem, his words wrought both upon Mens Reaſon, and Paſſions, and had born a ſtroke at the head of the buſineſſe, if my Lord Archon had not interpoſed the Buckler, in this Oration.

My Lords, the Legiſlators of Oceana,

MY Lord Philautus hath made a thing which is eaſie, to ſeem hard; if he ought the thanks unto his Eloquence, it would be worthy of leſſe Praiſe, then that he oweth it unto his merit, and the Love he hath moſt deſervedly purchaſed of all men: nor is it rationally to be feared, that he who is ſo much before-hand in his Private, ſhould be in Arrear in his Publique capacity. Wherefore my Lord's tenderneſſe throughout his Speech ariſing ſing from no other principle then his ſolicitude, leſt the Agrarian ſhould be hurtfull unto his Country; It is no leſſe then my duty to give the beſt ſatisfaction I am able unto ſo good a Patriot, taking every one of his doubts in the Order propoſed: And,

1. Firſt, Whereas my Lord, upon Obſervation of the Modern Common-wealths, is of opinion, that an Agrarian is not neceſsary; It muſt be confeſſed, that at the firſt ſight of them there is ſome appearance favouring his Aſſertion: but upon Accidents of no preſidents unto us. For the Common-wealths of Switz and Holland, I mean of thoſe Leagues, being ſituated in Countries not alluring the Inhabitants unto wantonneſs, but obliging them unto univerſal Induſtry, have an implicite Agrarian in the nature of them: and being not obnoxious unto a growing Nobility, which as long as their former Monarchies had ſpread the wing over them, could either not at all be hatched, or was ſoon broken; are of no Example unto us, whoſe experience in this point hath been unto the Contrary. But what if even in theſe Governments there be indeed an explicite Agrarian? For when the Law Commands an equall, or near equall distribution of a mans Estate in Land among his Children, as in those Countries, a Nobility cannot grow, and so there needeth no Agrarian, or is one. And for the growth of the Nobility in Venice, (if so it be, for Machiavill observes in that Republick, as a cause of it, a great mediocrity of Estates) it is not a point that she is to fear, but might study, seeing She consisteth of nothing else but Nobility; by which, what ever their Estates suck from the People, especially if it come equally, is digested into the better blood of that Common-wealth, which is all, or the greatest benefit they can have by accumulation; for how unequall soever you will have them to be in their Incoms, they have Officers of the Pomp, to bring them equall in expences, or at least in the ostentation or shew of them: And so unlesse the advantage of an Estate consist more in the measure then in the use of it, the Authority of Venice, but enforceth our Agrarian; nor shall a man evade or elude the prudence of it, by the authority of any other Common-wealth; For if a Common-wealth have been introduced at once as those of Israel and Lacedemon, you are certain to find her underlayd with this as the main foundation; nor if she have owght more unto Fortune then Prudence, hath she raised her head without musing upon this matter, as appeareth by that of Athens, which through her Defect in this point, saith Aristotle, introduced her Ostraciſme, as most of the Democraties of Greece. [Ob hanc itaq; causam civitates quæ Democratice administrantur Ostraciſmum instituunt:] But not to restrain a Fundamental of such latitude unto any one kind of Government. Do we not yet see, that if there be a sole Landlord, of a vast Territory, he is the Turk? That if a few Land-Lords overballance a Populous Countrey, they have store of Servants? That if a People be in equall ballance, they can have no Lords? That no Government can otherwise be erected, then upon some one of these Foundations? That no one of these Foundations, (each being else apt to change into some other) can give any security unto the Government, unlesse it be fixed? That through the want of this fixation, potent Monarchies, and Commonwealths have falne upon the heads of the People, and accompanied their own sad Ruines with vast effusions of innocent Blood?

Ariſt. Pol. 1. 3. c. 9.

Blood? Let the Fame, as was the merit of the ancient Nobility of this Nation, be equall unto, or above what hath been already ſaid, or can be ſpoken, yet have we ſeen not only their Glory, but that of a Throne the moſt indulgent to, and leaſt invaſive for ſo many Ages upon the Liberty of a People that the World hath known, through the meer want of fixing her foot by a proportionable Agrarian upon her proper Foundation, to have falne with ſuch horrour, as hath been a Spectacle of aſtoniſhment unto the whole earth. And were it well argued from one Calamity, that we ought not to prevent another? Nor is Ariſtotle ſo good a Common-wealths-man for deriding the invention of Phaleas, as in recollecting himſelf, where he ſaith, That Democraties when a Leſſer part of their Citizens overtop the reſt in Wealth, degenerate into Oligarchies, and Principalities: And, which comes nearer unto the preſent purpoſe, that the greater part of the Nobility of Tarantum coming accidentally to be ruin'd, the Government of the Few came by conſequence to be changed into that of the Many. Pol. l. 5. c. 3.

Theſe things conſidered, I cannot ſee how how an Agrarian as to the fixation or ſecurity of a Government can be leſſe then neceſsary. And if a Cure be neceſsary, it excuſeth not the Patient, his diſeaſe being otherwiſe deſperate, that it is dangerous; which was the Caſe of Rome, not ſo ſtated by Machiavill, where he ſaith, That the ſtrife about the Agrarian cauſed the Deſtruction of that Common-wealth. As if when a Senator was not rich (as Craſſus held) except he could pay an Army, that Common-wealth could have done other then Ruine; whether in ſtrife about the Agrarian, or without it: (Nuper divitiæ avaritiam & abundantes voluptates deſiderium per luxum atq; libidinem pereundi perdendiq; omnia invexere:) If the greateſt Security of a Common-wealth conſiſt in being provided with the proper Antidote againſt this Poiſon, her greateſt Danger muſt be from the abſence of an Agrarian; which is the whole truth of the Roman example: For the Laconick, I ſhall reſerve the farther explication of it, as my Lord alſo did to another Place: and firſt ſee whether an Agrarian proportioned unto a Popular Government, be ſufficient to keep out Monarchy: My Lord is for the negative, and fortified by the People of Israel electing a King. To which I say, That the Action of the People therein expressed is a full Answer unto the Objection of that example; For the Monarchy neither grew upon them, nor could by reason of the Agrarian possibly have invaded them, if they had not pull'd it upon themselves by the election of a King; which being an Accident, the like whereof is not to be found in any other People so planted, nor in this, till as it is manifest, they were given up by GOD unto infatuation, (for saith he to Samuel, They have not rejected Thee, but they have rejected Me, that I should not Reign over them) hath something in it which is apparent, by what went before, to have been besides the Course of Nature, and by what followed: For the King having no other foundation then the Calamities of the People, so often beaten by their Enemies, that despairing of themselves, they were contented with any Change; If he had Peace as in the dayes of Solomon, left but a slippery Throne unto his Successor, as appeared by Rehoboam. And the Agrarian, notwithstanding the Monarchy thus introduced, so faithfully pre- ſerved the Root of that Common-wealth, that it ſhot oftner forth, and by intervals continued longer then any other Government, as may be computed from the Inſtitution of the ſame by Joſhua, 1465. years before Chriſt, unto the totall Diſſolution of it, which happened in the Raign of the Emperour Adrian 135. years after the Incarnation. A People planted upon an equall Agrarian, and holding to it, if they part with their liberty, muſt do it upon good will, and make but a bad title of their bounty. As to inſtance yet farther in that which is propoſed by the preſent Order to this Nation, the Standard whereof is at 2000 l. a year. The whole Territory of Oceana being divided by this proportion, amounteth unto 5000. Lots. So the Lands of Oceana being thus diſtributed, and bound unto this diſtribution, can never fall unto fewer then Five thouſand Proprietors. But Five thouſand Proprietors ſo ſeaſed will not agree to break the Agrarian; for that were to agree to rob one another; Nor to bring in a King, becauſe they muſt maintain him, and can have no benefit by him; Nor to exclude the People, becauſe they can have as little by that, and muſt ſpoyl their Militia. So the Commonwealth continuing upon the ballance proposed, though it should come into Five thousand hands can never alter; And that it should ever come into Five thousand hands, is as improbable as anything in the World that is not altogether impossible.

My Lords, other Considerations are more private: As that this Order destroyes Families; which is as if one should lay the ruines of some ancient Castle unto the Herbs which do usually grow out of them; the destruction of those Families being that indeed which naturally produced this Order. For we do not now argue for that which we would have, but for that which we are already possessed of; as would appear, if a note were but taken of all such as have at this day above Two thousand pounds a year in Oceana. If my Lord should grant (and I will put it with the most) that they who are Proprietors in Land, exceeding the proportion, exceed not Three hundred; with what brow can the Interest of so few be ballanced with that of the whole Nation? Or rather, what Interest have they to put in such a ballance? They would live as they have been accustomed to do: Who hinders them? They would enjoy their Eſtates, Who touches them? They would diſpoſe of what they have according unto the Intereſt of their Families; It is that which we deſire. A man hath one Son, let him be called; Would he enjoy his Fathers Eſtate? It is his, and his Sons, and his Sons Sons after him. A man hath five Sons, let them be called, Would they enjoy their Fathers Eſtate? It is divided among them; for we have four Votes for one in the ſame Family, and therefore this muſt be the Intereſt of the Family; or the Family knoweth not her own Intereſt. If a man ſhall diſpute otherwiſe, he muſt draw his Arguments from Cuſtom, and from Greatneſſe, which was the intereſt of the Monarchy, not of the Family: and we are now a Common-wealth. If the Monarchy could not bear with ſuch diviſions becauſe they tended to a Common-wealth; neither can a Common-wealth connive at ſuch accumulations, becauſe they tend to a Monarchy. If the Monarchy might make bold with ſo many for the good of one; We may make bold with one for the good of ſo many, nay, for the good of all. My Lords, it cometh into my head, that upon occaſion of the variety of Parties enumerated in our late Civill Wars, was

ſaid by a Friend of mine coming home from his Travels, about the latter end of theſe Troubles; That he admired how it came to paſſe, that Younger Brothers, eſpecially being ſo many more in number then their Elder, did not make one againſt a Tyranny, the like whereof hath not been exerciſed in any other Nation. And truly, when I conſider that our Country-men are none of the worſt natur'd, I muſt confeſſe I marveil much how it comes to paſſe, that we ſhould uſe our Children, as we do our Puppies; take one, lay it in the lap, feed it with every good bit, and drown five! Nay worſe; for as much as the Puppies are once drown'd, whereas the Children are left perpetually drowning. Really, my Lords, it is a ſtinty Cuſtome! and all this for his cruell Ambition, that would raiſe himſelf a Pillar, a golden Pillar for his Monument, though he have Children, his own reviving Fleſh, and a kind of immortality. And this is that Intereſt of a Family, for which we are to think ill of a Government that will not endure it. But quiet your ſelves. The Land through which the River Nilus wanders in one ſtream, is barren, but where he parts into Seven, he multiplies his his fertile ſhores, by diſtributing, yet keeping and improving ſuch a Propriety and Nutrition, as is a prudent Agrarian unto a well ordered Commonwealth.

Nor (to come unto the fifth Aſſertion) is a Political body rendred any fitter for Induſtry, by having one Gowty, and another withered Leg, than a naturall: It tendeth not unto the improvement of Merchandize that there be ſome who have no need of their Trading, and others that are not able to follow it. If confinement diſcourage Induſtry, an Eſtate in money is not confined; and leſt Induſtry ſhould want whereupon to work, Land is not engroſſed, nor entailed upon any man, but remains at her Devotion. I wonder whence the computation can ariſe, that this ſhould diſcourage Induſtry? Two thouſand pounds a year a man may enjoy in Oceana, as much in Panopea, Five hundred in Marpeſia: there be other Plantations; and the Common-wealth will have more: Who knoweth how far the Arms of our Agrarian may extend themſelves? and whether he that might have left a Pillar, may not leave a Temple of many Pillars unto his more pious Memory? Where there in some measure in riches, a man may be rich, but if you will have them to be infinite, there will be no end of serving himself, and wanting what he hath: and what pains does such an one take to be poor! Furthermore if a man shall think, that there may be an Industry lesse grosse, or more noble, and so cast his thoughts upon the Common-wealth, he will have Leisure for her, and she Riches and Honours for him, his sweat shall smell like Alexander's. My Lord Philautus is a young Man, who enjoying his Ten thousand pounds a year, may keep a noble House in the old way, and have homely Guests: and having but Two, by the means proposed, may take the upper hand of his great Ancestors; with reverence unto whom, I may say, there hath not been one of them would have disputed his place with a Roman Consul. My Lord do not break my heart; the Nobility shall go unto no other Ploughs then those from which we call our Consuls. But saith he, it having been so with Lacedemon, that neither the City nor the Citizens was capable of increase, a blow was given by that Agrarian, which Ruined both. And what are we concerned with that Agrarian, or that blow, while our Citizens and our City (and that by our Agrarian.) are both capable of encreaſe? The Spartane if he made a Conqueſt had not Citizens to hold it, the Oceaner will have enow: the Spartane could have no Trade, the Oceaner may have all. The Agrarian in Laconia, that it might bind on Knapſacks, forbidding all other Arts but that of War, could not make an Army of above 30000. Citizens. The Agrarian in Oceana without interruption of Traffique, provides us in the fifth part of the Youth an annuall ſource or freſh ſpring of 100000. beſides our Provinciall Auxiliaries; out of which to draw marching Armies; And as many Elders, not feeble, but men moſt of them in the flowr of their Age, and in Arms for the defence of our Territories. The Agrarian in Laconia, baniſht money; this, multiplyes it. That, allowed a matter of twenty or thirty Acres to a man; this, two or three thouſand: There is no Compariſon between them. And yet I differ ſo much from my Lord, or his opinion, that the Agrarian was the Ruine of Lacedemon; that I hold it no leſſe then demonſtrable to have been her main ſupport; For if baniſh-baniſhing all other diverſions it could not make an Army of above 30000; then letting in all other diverſions, it muſt have broken that Army: Wherefore Lyſander bringing in the golden ſpoyles of Athens, irrecoverably ruin'd that Common-wealth; and is a warning to us, that in giving encouragement unto Induſtry, we alſo remember, that Covetouſneſſe is the root of all Evill. And our Agrarian can never be the cauſe of thoſe Seditions threatened by my Lord, but is the proper cure of them, as Lucan noteth well in the State of Rome, before the Civil Wars, which happened through the want of ſuch an Antidote;

Hinc uſura vorax, rapidumq; in tempore Fœnus,
Hinc concuſſa fides, et multis utile bellum.

Why then are we miſtaken, as if we intended not equall advantages in our Common-wealth unto either Sex, becauſe we would not have womens fortunes conſiſt in that metall, which expoſeth them unto Cut-purſes? If a man cut my purſe, I may have him by the heels, or by the neck for it; Whereas a man may cut a

Womans purſe and have her for his pains in fetters. How bruitiſh, and much more then bruitiſh, is that Common-wealth, which preferreth the Earth before the fruits of her Womb? If the people be her treaſure, the ſtaffe by which ſhe is ſuſtained and comforted, with what Juſtice can ſhe ſuffer them, by whom ſhe is moſt inriched, to be for that cauſe the moſt impoveriſhed? and yet we ſee the gifts of God, and the bounties of Heaven in fruitful Families, through this wretched cuſtome of marrying for money, become their inſupportable grief and poverty: nor falleth this ſo heavy upon the lower ſort, being better able to ſhift for themſelves, as upon the Nobility or Gentry: For what availeth it in this caſe, from whence their veins have derived their blood; while they ſhall ſee the Tallow of a Chandler, ſooner converted into that beauty which is required in a Bride? I appeal, whether my Lord Phillautus or my ſelf be the Advocate of Nobility; againſt which in the Caſe propoſed by me, there would be nothing to hold the ballance. And why is a woman, if ſhe may have but fifteen hundred pounds, undone! If ſhe be unmarried, what Nobleman allowes his Daughter in that caſe a greater Revenue, nue, then ſo much mony may command? And if ſhe marry, no Nobleman can give his Daughter a greater portion then ſhe hath. Who is hurt in this caſe? nay, who is not benefitted? If the Agrarian give us the ſweat of our brows without diminution; if it prepare our table, if it make our Cup to over flow; and above all this, in providing for our Children, anoint our heads with that oyl which taketh away the greateſt of worldly cares, what man, that is not beſotted with a Covetouſneſſe as vain as endleſſe, can imagine ſuch a Conſtitution to be his Poverty, ſeeing where no woman can be conſiderable for her portion, no portion will be conſiderable with a woman; and ſo their Children will not only find better preferments without their brocage, but more freedom of their own affections. We are wonderfull ſevere in Laws, That they ſhall not marry without our conſent; as if it were care and tenderneſſe over them: But is it not, leſt we ſhould not have the other thouſand pound with this Son, or the other hundred pound a year more in Joynture for that Daughter? Theſe when we are croſſin them are the ſins for which we water our couch with tears, but not of Penitence; ſeeing whereas it is a miſ-

chief beyond any that we can do unto our enemies, we perſiſt to make nothing of breaking the affection of our Children. But there is in this Agrarian an homage unto pure and ſpotleſſe Love, the conſequence whereof I will not give for all your Romances. An Alderman maketh not his Daughter a Counteſſe till he have given her 20000 l. nor a Romance a conſiderable Miſtriſſe till ſhe be a Princeſſe; theſe are characters of baſtard Love. But if our Agrarian exclude Ambition and Covetouſneſs, we ſhall at length have the care of our own breed, in which we have been curious as to that of our Dogs and our Horſes. The marriage bed will be truly Legitimate, and the Race of the Common-wealth not ſpurious.

But (impar magnanimis auſis imparq; dolori) I am hurl'd from all my hopes by my Lords laſt Aſſertion of Impoſſibility, that the Root from whence we imagine theſe fruits ſhould be planted or thrive in this ſoyl. And why? becauſe of the mixture of Eſtates, and variety of Tenures. Nevertheleſs there is yet extant in the Exchequer an old Survey of the Whole Nation; Wherefore ſuch a thing is not impoſſible: Now if a new Survey were taken at the present Rates, and the Law made, that no man should hold hereafter above so much Land as is valued therein at 2000 l. a year; it would amount unto a good and sufficient Agrarian. It is true, that there would remain some difficulty in the different kind of Rents; And that it is a matter requiring not only more leisure then we have; but an Authority which may be better able to bow men unto a more generall Consent, then is to be wrought out of them by such as are in our capacity: Wherefore, as to the Manner, it is necessary that we refer it unto the Parliament; but as to the Matter, they can no otherwise fix their Government upon the right Ballance.

I shall conclude with a few words, to some parts of the Order, which my Lord hath omitted. As first to the Consequences of the Agrarian to be settled in Marpesia, which irrepairably breaks the Aristocracy of that Nation; being of such a nature, as standing, it is not possible that you should Govern. For while the People of that Country are little better then the Cattle of the Nobility, you must not wonder if according as these can make their Markets with Forreign Princes, you find these to be driven upon your Grounds: And if you be so tender now you have it in your Power, as not to hold an hand upon them that may prevent the Slaughter that must otherwise ensue in like Cases, the bloud will lye at your door. But in holding such an hand upon them, you may settle the Agrarian; and in settling the Agrarian, you give that People not only Liberty, but Lands; which makes your Protection necessary to their Security; and their Contribution due unto your Protection, as to their own Safety.

For the Agrarian of Panopea, it allowing such Proportions of so good Land, men that conceive themselves streightned by this in Oceana, will begin there to let themselves forth, where every Citizen will in time have his Villa. And there is no question, but the improvement of that Country by this means, must be far greater then it hath been in the best of former times.

I have no more to say, but that in those those ancient and heroicall Ages, when men thought that to be necessary which was virtuous; the Nobility of Athens having the People so much engaged in their Debt, that there remained no other question among these, than, which of those should be King; no sooner heard Solon speak than they quitted their Debts, and restored the Common-wealth: Which ever after held a Solemn and Annuall Feast called the Sisacthia, or Recision in memory of that Action. Nor is this example the Phœnix; For at the Institution by Lycurgus, the Nobility having Estates (as ours here) in the Lands of Laconia, upon no other valuable Consideration, than the Common-wealth proposed by him, threw them up to be parcel'd by his Agrarian. But now when no man is desired to throw up a farthing of his money, or a shovell full of his Earth, and that all we can do, is but to make a Virtue of necessity: We are disputing whether we should have Peace, or War; For Peace, you cannot have without some Government, nor any Government without the proper Ballance: Wherefore if you will not fix this which you have, the rest is blood, for without blood you can bring in no other.

By theſe Speeches made at the Inſtitution of the Agrarian, you may perceive what were the Grounds of it. The next is

14. Ord. The Fourteenth Order, conſtituting the Ballot of Venice, as it is fitted by ſeverall alterations, and appointed unto every Aſſembly, to be the conſtant and only way of giving ſuffrage in this Common-wealth.

This is the generall Order, whence thoſe branches of the Ballot, ſome whereof you have allready ſeen are derived, which with thoſe that follow were all read and debated in this place at the Inſtitution; when my Lord Epimonus de Garrula being one of the Counſellors, and having no farther patience, (though the Rules were compoſed by the Agent of this Common-wealth, reſiding for that purpoſe at Venice) then to heare the direction for the Parilhes, ſtood up, and made way for himſelfe in this manner;

May it please your Highneſſe, my Lord Archon,

UNder Correction of Mr. Peregrine Spy our very Learned Agent and Intelligencer; I have ſeen the World a little Venice, and (as Gentlemen are permitted to do) the Great Councill Ballotting. And truly, I muſt needs ſay, that it is for a dumb ſhew the goodlieſt that I ever beheld with mine Eyes. You ſhould have ſome would take it ill, as if the noble Venetians thought themſelves too good to ſpeak to Strangers; but they obſerved them not ſo narrowly: The truth is, they have nothing to ſay unto their Acquaintance; or, Men that are in Council ſure would have tongues: For, a Council, and not a word ſpoken in it, is a Contradiction —— But there is ſuch a pulder with their Marching and Counter-marchings, as though never a one of them draw a Sword, you would think they were Training; which till I found that they did it onely to entertain ſtrangers, I came from among them as wiſe as I went thither —— But in the Parliament of Oceana you had no Balls, nor Dancing, but ſober Converſation, a Man might know and be known; ſhew his parts, and improve 'em. And now if you take the advice of this ſame Fellow you will ſpoyl all with his Whimſies, —— Mr. Speaker, — Cry you mercy, my Lord Archon I mean; Set the wiſeſt Man of your Houſe in the Great Council of Venice, and you will not know him, from a Fool. Whereas nothing is more certain, then that flat and dull fellowes in the Judgment of all ſuch as uſed to keep Company with them before, upon Election into our Houſe, have immediately chitted like Barley in the ſat, where it acquires a new Spirit, and flow'd forth into Language, that I am as confident as I am here, if there were not ſuch as delight to abuſe us, is far better then Tully's: Or, let any body but tranſlate one of his Orations, and ſpeak it in the Houſe, and ſee if every body do not laugh at him. This is a great matter,

Mr. Speaker, they do not cant it with your book-Learning, your Orbs, your Centers, your prime Magnitudes, and your Nebulones, things I profeſſe that would make a ſober man run ſtark mad to hear 'em; while we, who ſhould be conſidering the Honour of our Country, and that it goes now or never upon our hand, whether it ſhall be ridiculous to all the world are going to nine-holes, or trow-Madam for our Buſineſſe, like your dumb Venetian, whom this ſame Sir Politick your Reſident that never ſaw him do any thing but make faces, would inſinuate into you, at this diſtance, to have the only knack of State: Whereas if you ſhould take the pains as I have done to look a little nearer, you would find theſe ſame wonderful things to be nothing elſe, but meer naturall Fooperies or Capricio's, as they call them in Italien, even of the meaneſt of that Nation. For, put the Caſe you be travelling in Italy, ask your Contadino, that is, the next Country-fellow you meet ſome queſtion, and preſently he ballots you an anſwer with a nod, which is Affirmative; or a ſhake with his head, which is the Negative box: Or a ſhrug with his ſhoulder, which is the Boſſolo di non ſincero.—— Good! You will admire Sandes for telling you, that Grotta di cane is a Miracle, and I ſhall be laughed at for aſſuring you, that it is nothing elſe but ſuch a damp (continued by the neighbourhood of certain Sulphur-mines) as through accidental heat doth ſometimes happen in our Coal-Pits. But ingratitude muſt not diſcourage an honeſt man from doing good. There is not, I ſay, ſuch a tongue-ty'd Generation under Heaven as your Italian; that you ſhould not wonder if he make ſigns. But our People muſt have ſomething in their Diurnalls, we muſt ever and anon be telling 'em our minds; or if we be at it when we raiſe Taxes like thoſe Gentlemen with the finger and the thumb, they will ſwear that we are Cut-purſes.—— Come, I know what I have heard 'em ſay, when ſome men had money that wrought hard enough for it: and do you conceive they will be better pleaſed when they ſhall be told, that upon like occaſions you are at Mum-chance or Stool-ball? I do not

ſpeak for my ſelf; for though I ſhall alwaies acknowledge, that I got more by one years ſitting in the Houſe, then by my three years Travels; it was not of that kind. But I hate that this ſame Spy for pretending to have plaid at Billiards with the moſt Serene Common-Wealth of Venice, ſhould make ſuch fools of us here; when I know that he muſt have had his intelligence from ſome Corn-Cutter upon the Rialto; for a noble Venetian would be hang'd if he ſhould keep ſuch a fellow Company. —— And yet if I do not think he hath made you all dote, never truſt me, my Lord Archon is ſometimes in ſuch ſtrange Raptures. Why good my Lord let me be heard as well as your Aple Squire, ſhe hath freſh blood in her cheeks, I muſt confeſſe, but ſhe is but an old Lady; nor has he pickt her Cabinet; theſe he ſends you are none of her Receipts I can aſſure you, he bought them for a Julio at St. Mark's of a Mountebank: She hath no other waſh upon my knowledge for that ſame envy'd Complexion of hers but her Muſhes, being a little better ſented, ſaving your preſence, then a Chamber-pot. —— My Lords, I know what I ſay, But you will never have done with it, That neither the great Turk, nor any of thoſe little Turks her Neighbours have been able to ſpoyl her! Why you may as well wonder that Weſts do not ſuck Eggs in Swans Neſts. —— Do you think that it hath layn in the Devotion of her Beads; which you that have pelted ſo much at Popery, are now at length reſolv'd, ſhall Conſecrate M. Parſon, and be dropt by every one of his Congregation, while thoſe ſame whimſicall Intelligences your Surveyors (you will break my heart) give the turn unto your Primum Mobile; and ſo I think they will, for you will find, that Money is the Primum Mobile, and they will turn you thus out of ſome three or four hundred thouſand pounds. A pretty ſumme for Urns, and Balls, for Boxes and Pills, which theſe ſame quackſalvers are to Adminiſter unto the Parithes, and for what diſeaſe I marvail! Or how does it Work? Our Lames a Conſtable, an Overſeer, and a Church-warden! Mr. Speaker, I am amaz'd!

Never

Never was there Goose so stuck with Lardas my Lord Epimonus's Speech with laughter. The Archon having much ado to recover himself, in such manner as might enable him to return these thanks:

IN your whole lives (my Lords) were you never entertained with so much Ingenuity; my Lord Epimonus having at once mended all the faults of Travellers. For first, whereas they are abominable Liars, he hath not told you (except some malicious body have mis-informed him, concerning poor Spy) one syllable of falsehood. And Secondly, whereas they never fail to give the upper hand in all their Discourses unto Forraign Nations, still justling their own into the Kennell; he bears an Honour unto his Country that will not dissolve in Cephalonia, nor be corrupted with Figs, and Melons, which I can assure you is no ordinary Obligation: and therefore hold it a matter of publick concernment, that we be no occasion of quenching my Lords Affections; nor is there any such great matter between us, but might me thinks be easily reconciled: for though that which my Lord gained by sitting in the House, I stedfastly believe, as he can affirm, was gotten fairly; yet dare I not, nor do I think, that upon consideration, he will promise so much for other Gamesters, especially when they were at it so high, as he intimates not only to have been in use, but to be like enough to come about again. Wherefore (say I) let them throw with boxes; for unlesse we will be below the Politicks of an ordinary, there is no such barre unto Cogging. It is known unto his Lordship, that our Game is, Most at a throw, and that every cast of our Dice is, in our Suffrages; nor will he deny, that partiality in a Suffrage is downright Cogging. Now if the Venetian boxes be the most soveraign of all Remedies against this same Cogging: Is it not a strange thing that they should be thrown first into the fire by a fair Gamester? Men are naturally subject unto all kinds of Passion; Some you have that are not able to withstand the brow of an Enemy; And, others that make nothing of this, are lesse of proof against that of a Friend; So that if your Suffrage be bare-faced, I dare say you shall not have one fair cast in twenty. But what ever a mans fortune be at the box, he neither knoweth whom to thank, nor whom to Challenge. Wherefore (that my Lord may have a Charitable opinion of the choice Affection which I confesse to have above all other beauties, for that of incomparable Venice) there is in this way of Suffrage no leſſe then a demonſtration that it is the moſt pure; and the purity of the Suffrage in a popular Government is the health, if not the life of it; ſeeing the Soul is no otherwiſe breathed into the Soveraign Power, then by the Suffrage of the People. Wherefore no wonder if Poſtellus be of opinion, that this uſe of the Ball is the very ſame with that which was of the Bean in Athens; or, that others, by the Text concerning Eldad and Medad, derive it from the Common-wealth of Iſrael. There is another thing, though not ſo materiall unto us, that my Lord will excuſe Me, if I be not willing to yield, which is that Venice ſubſiſteth only by her Situation. It is true, that a man in time of Warre, may be more ſecure from his Enemies, by being in a Citadell; but not from his Diſeaſes; wherefore the firſt cauſe, if he live long, is his good Conſtitution, without which his Citadell were to little purpoſe; and it is no otherwiſe with Venice.

With this ſpeech of the Archon, I conclude, the proofe of the Agrarian; and of the Ballot, being the Fundamentall Lawes of this Common-wealth: and come now from the Center to the circumferences or Orbes, whereof ſome have been already ſhewn; As how the Pariſhes annually poure themſelves into the the Hundreds, the Hundreds into the Tribes, and the Tribes into the Gallaxy's, the Annuall Gallaxy of every Tribe consisting of two Knights, and seaven Deputies, whereof the Knights constitute the Senate; the Deputies, the Prerogative Tribe commonly called the people: and the Senate and the people constitute the Soveraigne Power, or Parliament of Oceana. Wherefore to shew what the Parliament is, I must first open the Senate, and then the people, or Prerogative Tribe.

To begin with the Senate, of which (as a man is differently represented by a Picture drawer, and by an Anatomist) I shall first discover the face or aspect, and then the parts, with the use of them. Every Munday-Morning in the Summer, at seaven, and in the Winter at eight, the great Bell in the Clockhouse at the Pantheon beginneth, and continueth Ringing for the space of one houre, in which time the Magistrates of the Senate, being attended according to their quality, with a respective number of the Balotines, Doore-keepers, and Messengers, and having the Ensignes of their Magistracies borne before them, as the Sword before the Strategus, the Mace before the Orator, a Mace with the Seale before the Commissioners of the Chancery, the like with the Purse before the Commissioners of the Treasury, and a Silver wand, like those in use with the Universities, before each of the Censors being Chancellors of the same. These with the Knights, in all Three hundred, Assemble in the House or Hall of the Senate.

The House or Hall of the Senate, being scituated in the Pantheon or Pallace of Justice, is a roome consisting of a Square and a halfe: in the middle of the lower end is the doore, at the upper end hangeth a rich State overshaddowing the greater part of a large Throne, or halfe pace of two Stages, the first ascended by two steps from the floore, and the second about the middle, rising two steps higher. Upon this stand two Chaires, in that on the right hand sits the Strategus, in the other the Orator, adorned with Scarlet Robes, after the fashion that was used by the Dukes in the Aristocracy. At the right end of the upper Stage, stand three Chaires, in which the three Commissioners of the Seale are placed, and at the other end sit the three Commissioners of the Treasury, every one in a Robe, or habit like that of the Earls, of these Magistrates of this upper Stage consisteth the Signory. At either end of the lower Stage stands a little Table, to which the Secreteries of the Senate are set with their tufted sleeves in the habit of civill Lawyers. Unto the foure stepps, whereby the two Stages of the Throne are ascended, answer foure long Benches, which successively deriving from every one of the stepps continue their respective height, and extend themselves by the side Walls towards the lower end of the house, every bench being divided by numerall Characters into the Thirty ſeaven parts or places. Upon the upper benches ſit the Cenſors in the Robes of Barons; the firſt in the middle of the right hand bench, and the ſecond directly oppoſite unto him on the other ſide. Upon the reſt of the Benches ſit the Knights, who if they be called unto the Urnes diſtributing themſelves by the fingres come in equall files, either by the firſt ſeate which conſiſteth of the two upper benches on either ſide; or by the ſecond ſeate conſiſting of the two lower benches on either ſide; beginning alſo at the upper, or at the lower ends of the ſame according to the Lot whereby they are called for which end the benches are open, and aſcended at either end with eaſy ſtaires, and large paſſages. The reſt of the ballot is conformable unto that of the Tribe; the Cenſors of the houſe ſitting at the ſide Urnes, and the youngeſt Magiſtrate of the Signory, at the middle; the Urnes being placed before the Throne, and prepared according unto the number of the Magiſtrates to be at that time choſen by the rules already given unto the Cenſors of the Tribes. But before the benches of the Knights on either ſide, ſtands one being ſhorter; and at the upper end of this, ſit the two Tribunes of the Horſe; at the upper end of the other, the two Tribunes of the foot in their Armes; the reſt of the benches being covered by the Judges of the Land in their Robes; but theſe Magiſtrates have no ſuffrage, neither the Tribunes, though they derive their preſence in the Senate, from the Romans; nor the Judges, though they derive theirs, from the ancient Senate of Oceana. Every Monday, this aſſembly ſits of courſe; at other times, if there be occaſion, any Magiſtrate of the Houſe by giving order for the Bell or by his lictor, or enſigne-bearer calls a Senate; And every Magiſtrate or Knight during his ſeſſion hath the Title, Place, and Honour of a Duke, Earle, Baron or Knight reſpectively. And every one that hath borne the ſame Magiſtracy (tertio) by his third ſeſſion, hath his reſpective place, and Tittle during the terme of his Life, which is all the Honour conferr'd by this Common-wealth, except upon the Maſter of the Ceremonies, the Maſter of the Horſe, and the King of the Heraulds, who are Knights by their Places. And thus you have the Face of the Senate, in which there is ſcarce any feature that is not Roman or Venetian; nor do the Hornes of this Creſcent extend themſelves much unlike thoſe of the Sanhedrim, on either hand of the Prince, and of the Father of that Senate. But upon Beauty in which every Man hath his phanſy, we will not otherwiſe Phyloſophize then to remember that there is ſomthing more then decency in the Robe of a Judge, that would not be well ſpared from the Bench; and that the graveſt Magiſtrate unto whom you can commit the Sword of Justice, will find a quickneſſe in the ſpurrs of Honour, which if they be not laid unto virtue, will lay themſelves unto that which may rout a Common-wealth.

To come from the Face of the Senate, unto the Conſtitution and uſe of the parts: It is contained in the peculiar Orders. And the Orders which are peculiar unto the Senate, are either of Election, or Inſtruction. Conſtitution of the Senate.

Elections in the Senate are of three ſorts, Annuall, Biennial, and Extraordinary.

Annuall Elections are performed by the Schedule called the Tropick: and the Tropick, conſiſteth of two parts; the one containing the Magiſtrates; and the other the Councells, to be yearly elected. The Schedule or Tropick of the Magiſtrates, is as followeth in

The Fifteenth Order, requiring, That upon every Munday next ſuſſing the laſt of March, the Knights of the Annuall Gallaxy's taking their places in the Senate, be called the firſt Region of the ſame; and that the Houſe having diſmiſſed the third Region, and received the firſt, proceed unto Election of the Magiſtrates contained in the firſt part of the Tropick, by the enſuing Schedule. 15. Ord. Tropick of the Magiſtrates:

The Lord Strategus.	Annuall Magiſtrates.
The Lord Orator.
The firſt Cenſor.
The ſecond Cenſor.
The third Commiſſioner of the Seal.	Triennall Magiſtrates.
The third Commiſſioner of the Treaſury.

The Annuall Magiſtrates (provided that no one Man bear above one of thoſe Honours during the term of one Seſſion) may be elected out of any Region. But the Triennial Magiſtrates may not be elected out of any other, then the third Region only, leſt the term of their Seſſion expire before that of their Honour; and (it being unlawful for any man to bear Magiſtracy any longer then he is thereunto qualified by the Election of the People) cauſe a fraction in the Rotation of this Common-wealth.

Of the Strategus.

The Stratégus is first Président of the Senate, and Generall of the Army if it be commanded to March; in which case there shall be a second Strategus elected to be first Président of the Senate, and Generall of the second Army: and if this also be Commanded to March, a third Stratégus shall be chosen; and so as long as the Commonwealth sendeth forth Armies.

Of the Orator.

The Lord Orator is second and more peculiar Président of the Senate, unto whom it appertaineth to keep the House unto Orders.

Of the Censors.

The Censors, whereof the first by consequence of his Election is Chancellor of the University of Clio, and the second of that of Calliope; are Présidents of the Council for Religion and Magistrates, unto whom it belongeth to keep the House unto the order of the Ballot. They are also Inquisitors into the wayes and meanes of acquiring Magistracy; and have power to punish indirect procéeding in the same, by removing a Knight or Magistrate out of the House, under appeale unto the Senate.

Of the Commissioners. of the Seal.

The Commissioners of the Seale being thrée, whereof the third is annually chosen out of the third Region, are Judges in Chancery.

Of the Commissioners of the Treasury.

The Commissioners of the Treasury being thrée, whereof the third is annually chosen out of the third Region, are Judges in the Exchequer; and every Magistrate of this Schedule, hath right to propose unto the Senate.

Of the Signory.

But the Strategus with the six Commissioners are the Signory of this Common-wealth having right of Session and Suffrage in every Council of the Senate, and power either joyntly or severally, to propose in all or any of them.

I have little in this Order to observe or prove, but that the Stratégus is the same honour both in name and thing that was borne, among others, by Philopœnen and Aratus in the Commonwealth of the Achæans; the like having been in use also with the Ætolians (Quem ut Achæi Strategon nominabant, saith Emmius). The Orator, called otherwise the Speaker, is with small alteration the same that had been of former use in this Nation. These two, if you will, may be compared unto the Consules in Rome, or the Suffetes in Carthage, for their Magistracy is scarce different.

The Censors derive their power of removing a Senator, from those of Rome; the Government of the Ballot, from those of Venice;

Venice; and that of animadverſion upon the Ambitus, or canvace for Magiſtracy, from both.

The Signory with the whole right and uſe of that Magiſtracy, to be hereafter more fully explained, is almoſt purely Venetian.

The ſecond part of the Tropick is directed by

The Sixteenth Order, whereby the conſtitution of the Councils, being foure, that is to ſay, the Council of State, the Council of Warre, the Council of Religion, and the Council of Trade; is rendred conformable in their Revolutions unto that of the Senate. As firſt, by the annuall election of five Knights, out of the third Region of the Senate, into the Council of State, conſiſting of fifteene Knights, five in every Region. Secondly by the annuall election of three Knights out of the third Region of the Council of State, to be propoſed by the Provoſts and elected by that Council, into the Council of Warr, conſiſting of nine Knights, three in every Region not excluded by this election from remaining members alſo, of the Council of State: the foure Tribunes of the people have right of Seſſion and Suffrage in the Councill of Warr. Thirdly by the annuall election of foure Knights out of the third Region of the Senate into the Council of Religion, conſiſting of twelve Knights, foure in every Region: of this Council, the Cenſors are Preſidents. Fourthly by the annuall election of foure Knights out of the third Region of the Senate, into the Council of Trade, conſiſting of twelve Knights, four in every Region. And each Region in every one of theſe Councils thus conſtituted, ſhall weekly and interchangeably elect one Provoſt, whoſe Magiſtracy ſhall continue for one weeke, nor ſhall he be re-elected into the ſame till every Knight of that Region in the ſame Council have once borne the ſame Magiſtracy. And the Provoſts being one in every Region, three in every Councill, and twelve in all, beſides their other Capacities, ſhall aſſemble and be a Councill or rather an Academy apart, to certaine ends and purpoſes to be hereafter farther explained with thoſe of the reſt of the Councils.

16. Ord. Conſtitution of the Councils.

Of the Council of Religion.

Of the Council of Trade.

Of the Provoſts.

Of the Councill of the Provoſts:

This Order is of no other uſe then for the frame and turne of the Councils, and yet of no ſmall one: for in motion conſiſteth Life, and the motion of a Common-wealth will never be currant, unleſſe it be circular. Men that, like my Lord Epimonus, not enduring the reſemblance of this kind of Government unto Orbes and Spheres, fall on Phyſicking and purging of it, do no more then is neceſſary; for if it be not in Rotation on both as to Perſons and Things, it will be very ſick. The People of Rome, as to Perſons, if they had not been taken up by the wheele of Magiſtracy, had overturned the Charriot of the Senate. And thoſe of Lacedemon as to Things, had not been ſo quiet when the Senate traſht their buſineſſe, by incroaching upon the reſult, if by the inſtitution of the Ephors they had not brought it about againe. So that if you allow not a Common-wealth, her Rotation, in which conſiſts her equality, you reduce her to a party, and then it is neceſſary that you be Phyſitians indeed, or rather Farriers; for you will have ſtrong Patients, and ſuch as muſt be halterd and caſt, or your ſelves may need bone-ſetters. Wherefore the Councils of this Common-wealth, both in regard of their Elections, and, as will be ſhewn, of their Affaires, are uniforme with the Senate in their Revolutions, not as Whirle-pits, to ſwallow, but to bite, and with the ſcrues of their Rotation, hold and turne a buſineſſe like the Vice of a Smith, unto the hand of the Work-man; Without Engines of which nature it is not poſſible for the Senate, much leſſe for the people, to be perfect Artificers in a Politicall capacity. But I ſhall not hold you longer from

17. Ord. Conſtitution of the Biennial Election or Orbe of Embaſſadors in ordinary.

The Seaventeenth Order, directing Biennial elections or the conſtitution of the Orbe of Embaſſadours in Ordinary, conſiſting of foure Reſidences, the Revolution whereof is performed in eight yeares, and preſerved through the election of one Ambaſſadour in two yeares by the ballot of the Senate to repaire unto the Court of France and reſide there for the terme of two yeares; and the terme of two yeares being expired, to remove from thence unto the Court of Spaine, there to continue for the ſpace of two yeares; and thence to remove unto the State of Venice; And after two yeares reſidence in that Citty, to conclude with his reſidence at Conſtantinople, for a like terme of time, and ſo to returne. A Knight of the Senate or a Deputy of the Prerogative may not be Elected Ambaſſadour in Ordinary, becauſe a Knight or Deputy ſo choſen, muſt either loſe his Seſſion, which would cauſe an unevennelle in the motion of this Common-wealth, or accumulate Magiſtracy, which agreeth not with the equality of the ſame. Nor may any man be elected into this Capacity that is above five and thirty yeares of age, leſt the Common-wealth loſe the Charge of his education, by being deprived at his returne of the fruit of it, or elſe enjoy it not long, through the defects of nature.

This Order is the perſpective of the Common-wealth whereby ſhe foreſeeth danger; or the Traffick, whereby ſhe receiveth receiveth every two yeares the returne of a States-man enriched with eight years experience, from the prime *Mart*es of Negotiation in Europe. And ſo much for the Elections in the Senate that are ordinary, ſuch as are extraordinary follow in

The Eighteenth Order, appointing all Elections upon emergent occaſions except that of the Dictator to be made by the Scrutiny, or that kind of Election, whereby a Council comes to be a fifth Order of Electors. For example, if there be occaſion of an Embaſſador Extraordinary, the Provoſts of the Council of State, or any two of them ſhall propoſe unto the ſame, till one Competitor be choſen by that Council: and the Council having choſen a Competitor ſhall bring his name into the Senate, which in the uſuall way ſhall chooſe foure more Competitors unto the ſame Magiſtracy; and put them with the Competitor of the Council, unto the Ballot of the Houſe, by which he of the five that is choſen, is ſaid to be elected by the Scruteny of the Council of War. A Judge or Serjeant at Law by the Scruteny of the Council of State. A Vice-Admiral, a Polemarch, or Field-Officer ſhall be elected after the ſame manner, by the Scruteny of the Commiſſioners of the Seale. A Baron, or conſiderable Officer of the Exchequer by the Scruteny of the Commiſſioners of the Treaſury. Men in Magiſtracy, or out of it are equally capable of election by the Scruteny; But a Magiſtrate or Officer elected by the Scruteny unto a Military imployment; if he be neither a Knight of the Senate, nor a Deputy of the Prerogative ought to have his Office confirmed by the Prerogative, becauſe the Militia in a Commonwealth, where the people are Soveraign, is not lawfull to be touched injuſſu Populi. 18. Ord. Conſtitution of Election Extraordinary, or by the Scruteny.

The Romans were ſo curious that though their Conſuls were elected Centuriatis, they might not touch the Militia, except they were confirmed Curiatis Comitiis: for a Magiſtrate not receiving his power from the People, takes it from them; and to take away their Power is to take away their Liberty. As to the Election by the Scruteny it may be eaſily perceived to be Venetian, there being no ſuch way to take in the knowledge, which in all reaſon muſt be beſt in every Council of ſuch men as are moſt fit for their turnes, and yet to keepe them from the bias of particular affection or intereſt under that pretence: For the cauſe why the great Council, in Venice ſcarce ever elects any other then the Name that is brought in by the Scruteny, is very probable to be; that they may. This election is the laſt of thoſe apperrayning unto the Senate, the Councils cils being choſen by the Orders already ſhewn; It remaineth that we come unto thoſe whereby they are inſtructed; and the Orders of Inſtruction unto the Councils are two; The firſt for the ſubject Matter, whereupon they are to proceed; and the ſecond, for the Manner of their proceeding. The ſubject matter of the Councils, is diſtributed unto them by

19. Ord. Inſtructions for the Councils as to their Subject Matter.

The Nineteenth Order, diſtributing unto every Council ſuch buſineſſes as are properly to belong unto their Cognizance, whereof ſome they ſhall receive and determine; And others they ſhall receive, prepare and introduce into the Houſe, as firſt,

For the Council of State.

The Council of State is to receive all Advertiſes, Intelligences and Letters of Negotiation; to give audience to Embaſſadors ſent unto, and to draw up Inſtructions for ſuch as ſhall be ſent by this Common-wealth; to receive propoſitions from, and hold intelligence with the Provintial Councils; to conſider upon all Laws to be Enacted, amended, or Repealed; and upon all Leavies of men, or money, Warr, or Peace, Leagues or Aſſociations to be made by this Common-wealth, ſo farre forth as is conducible unto the orderly preparation of the ſame to be introduced by them into the Senate. Provided that all ſuch affaires, as otherwiſe appertayning unto the Council of State are, for the good of the Common-wealth, to be carryed with greater Secrecy, be mannaged by the Council of Warr, with power to receive and ſend forth Agents, Spyes, Emiſſaryes, Intelligencers, Frigots; And to mannage affaires of that nature, if it be neceſſary without communication unto the Senate, till ſuch time as it may be had without detriment unto the buſineſſe. But they ſhall have no power to engage the Common-wealth in a Warr, without the conſent of the Senate and the People. It appertaineth alſo unto this Council to take Charge of the Fleet as Admiral; and of all Store-Houſes, Armouryes, Arſenalls, and Magazines appertayning unto this Common-wealth. They ſhall keep a diligent record of the Military expeditions from time to time reported by him that was Strategus or Generall, or one of the Polemarchs in that action; or at leaſt ſo farre forth as the experience of ſuch Commanders may tend unto the improvement of the Military diſcipline, which they ſhall digeſt, and introduce into the Senate: and if the Senate ſhall thereupon frame any Article, they ſhall ſee that it be obſerved in the Muſters or education of the Youth. And whereas the Council of Warr is the Centinel or Scout of this Common-wealth, if any Perſon or Persons shall goe about to introduce Debate, into any Popular assembly of the same; or otherwise to alter the present Government, or strike at the root of it, they shall apprehend, or cause to be apprehended, seized, imprisoned; and examine, arraigne, acquit, or condemne, and cause to be executed any such Person, or Persons, of their proper Power and Authority, and without appeale.

For the Council of Religion.

The Council of Religion; as the Arbiter of this Common-wealth in cases of conscience more peculiarly appertayning unto Religion, Christian Charity, and a pious Life; shall have the care of the nationall Religion, and the protection of the Liberty of Conscience, with the Cognizance of all causes relating unto either of them. And first as to the Nationall Religion; They shall cause all places or preferments of the best Revenue in either of the Universities to be conferred upon none other then such of the most learned and pious men, as have dedicated themselves unto the study of Theology. They shall also take an especiall care that by such Augmentations as be, or shall hereafter be appointed by the Senate, every Benefice in this Nation be improved at the least unto the value of One hundred pounds a year. And to the end that there be no interest at all, whereby the Divines or Teachers of the National Religion, may be corrupted, or corrupt Religion, they shall be capable of no other kind of Imployment or Preferment in this Common-Wealth. And whereas a Directory for the administration of the Nationall Religion, is to be prepared by this Council, they shall in this and other Debates of this nature proceed in manner following: A question arising in matter of Religion shall be put and stated by the Council in writing; which Writing the Censors shall send by their Beadles (being Proctors chosen to attend them) each unto the University whereof he is Chancellor; and the Vice-Chancellor of the same receiving the writing, shall call a Convocation of all the Divines of that University being above fourty years of age; And the Universities upon a Point so proposed, shall have no manner of Intelligence or Correspondence one with another, untill their Debates be ended, and they have made return of their Answers unto the Council of Religion by two or three of their own Members, that may clear their sense if any doubt should arise, unto the Council; which done, they shall return, and the Council having received such information, shall proceed according unto their own Judgments, in the Preparation of the whole matter for the Senate. That so the interest of the Learned being removed, there may be a right Application of Reason unto Scripture, which is the Foundation of the National Religion.

Secondly, this Council as to the Protection of the liberty of Conscience, shall suffer no coercive Power in the matter of Religion to be exercised in this Nation. The Teachers of the National Religion being no other then such as voluntarily undertake that calling; and their Auditors or Hearers, no other then are also voluntary. Nor shall any gathered Congregation be molested or interrupted in their way of Worship (being neither Jewish nor Idolatrous) but vigilantly, and vigorously protected and defended in the enjoyment practice and profession of the same. And if there be Officers, or Auditors appointed by any such Congregation, for the introduction of Causes into the Council of Religion, all such Causes so introduced shall be received, heard and determined by the same, (with recourse had if need be unto the Senate.)

Thirdly, every Petition addressed unto the Senate, except that of a Tribe, shall be received, examined, and debated by this Council; and such only as they upon such examination and debate had shall think fit may be introduced into the Senate.

For the Council of Trade.

The Council of Trade being the Vena Porta of this Nation shall hereafter receive Instructions more at large: For the present, their experience attaining unto a right Understanding of those Trades, and Mysteries that feed the veins of this Common-wealth, and a true distinction of them from those that suck, or exhaust the same; they shall acquaint the Senate with the Conveniencies, and Inconveniencies, to the end that encouragement may be applyed unto the one, and remedy to the other.

For the Academy of the Provosts.

The Academy of the Provosts being the affability of the Common-wealth shall assemble every day towards the evening in a fair Room, having certain withdrawing Rooms thereunto belonging. And all sorts of Company that will repair thither for Conversation, or discourse, so it be upon the matter of Government, News, or Intelligence, or to propose any thing unto the Councils, shall be freely and affably received in the Outer Chamber, and heard in the way of civil Conversation, which is to be managed without any other Awe or Ceremony, then thereunto is usually appertaining; to the end that every every man may be free; and that what is proposed by one, may be argued or discoursed upon by the rest, except the matter be of secresie, in which Case the Provosts, or some of them shall take such as refuse Audience into one of the withdrawing Rooms. And the Provosts are to give their minds, that this Academy be so governed, ordered, and preserved, as may be most attractive unto men of parts, and good affections unto the Common-wealth, for the expedition of the Consultations.

Furthermore, If any man not being able or willing to come in Person, have any advice to give which he judgeth may be for the good of the Common-wealth, he may write his mind unto the Academy or the Provosts, in a Letter signed or not signed; which Letter shall be left with the Door-keeper of the Academy: Nor shall any Person intercepting such a Letter be seized, molested, or detained, though it should prove to be a Libell: But the Letters so delivered shall be presented unto the Provosts, and in case they be so many that they cannot well be examined by the Provosts themselves, they shall distribute them as they please to be read by the Gentlemen of the Academy, who finding any thing in them material, will find matter of Discourse: Or if they happen upon a business that requires privacy, return it with a note upon it unto a Provost. And the Provosts by the Secretaries attending shall cause such notes out of Discourses or Letters to be taken as they please, to the end that they may propose as occasion serveth what any two of them shall think fit, out of their notes so taken unto their respective Councils: to the end that not only the Ear of the Common-wealth be open unto all, but that men of such Education being in her Eye, She may upon emergent Elections or occasions, be alwaies provided of her Choice of all Persons. perused

Every Council being adorned with a State for the Signory, shall be attended by two Secretaries, two Door-keepers, and two Messengers in ordinary, and have Power to Command more upon emergencies, as occasion requireth. And the Academy shall be attended with two Secretaries, two Messengers, and two Door-keepers; this with the other Councils being provided with their farther Conveniencies at the charge of the State. For the Attendance of the Councils.

But whereas it is incident unto Common-wealths upon Emergences, requiring extraordinary speed, or secresie, either through For the Dictator.

their natural delayes, or unnatural haste to incur equal danger with holding unto the slow pace of their Orders they come not in time to defend themselves from some suddain blow, or breaking them for the greater speed, they but haste unto their own Destruction: If the Senate shall at any time make Election of nine Knights extraordinary to be added unto the Council of War, as a Junta for the term of three monethe. The Council of War, with the Junta so added, is for the term of the same; Dictator of Oceana having power to levy men and money, to make War and Peace, as also to enact Lawes, which shall be good for the space of one year, (if they be not sooner repealed by the Senate and the People) and for no longer time, except they be confirmed by the Senate and the People. And the whole Administration of the Common-wealth for the term of the said three Monethe shall be in the Dictator; Provided, that the Dictator shall have no power to do any thing that tendeth not unto his proper end and institution; but all unto the Preservation of the Common-wealth as it is established; And, for the suddain restitution of the same unto the natural channel, and common course of Government. And all Acts, Orders, Decrees or Lawes of the Council of War with the Junta, being thus created, shall be signed,

Dictator Oceana.

This Order of Instructions unto the Councils, being (as in a matter of that nature is requisite) very large, I have used my best skill to abbreviate, in such manner as might shew no more of it then is necessary unto the understanding of the whole; though as to the parts, or further duties of the Councils, I have omitted many things of singular use in a Common-wealth. But it was spoken to at the Council by the Archon in this manner;

My

My Lords, the Legislators,

YOur Councils (except the Dictator only) are proper and native Springs and Sources you see, which (hanging a few sticks and strawes, that, as lesse considerable, would otherwise be more troublesome, upon the banks of their peculiar channels) derive the full stream of businesse into the Senate, so pure, and so far from the possibility of being troubled, or steined (as will undeniably appear by the Course contained in the ensuing Order) with any kind of private interest or partiality, that it shall never be possible for any Assemblie hearkening unto the advice or information of this or that worthy Member, either instructed upon his Pillow, or while he was making himself ready, or by the Petition or Ticket which he received at the Door; to have half the Security in his Faith, or advantage by his Wisdome: Such a Senate, or Council being through the incertainty of the Winds, like a Wave of the Sea; nor shall it otherwise mend the matter by flowing up into dry ditches, or referring Businesses to be better examined by Committees, then to go farther about about with it to leſſe purpoſe; if it do not ebb back again with the more muddin it. For in a Caſe referred to an occaſionall Committee, of which any Member that is deſirous may get himſelf named, and to which no body will come, but either for the ſake of his Friend, or his own Intereſt, It fareth little better as to the Information of the Senate, then if it had been referred unto the Parties. Wherefore the Athenians being diſtributed into four Tribes, out of which by equall numbers they Annually choſe Four hundred men, called the Senate of the Bean, (becauſe the ballot at their Election was performed by the uſe of Beans) divided them by Fifties, into eight parts. And every Fifty in their turn; for one eight part of the year was a Council apart called the Prytans: the Prytans in their diſtinct Council receiving all Commers, and giving ear unto every Man that had any thing to propoſe concerning the Common-wealth, had power to debate and prepare all the Buſineſſes that were to be introduced into the Senate. The Achæans had ten ſelected Magiſtrates called the Demiurgs, conſtituting a Council apart called the Synarchy, which with the Strategus prepared

all the Buſineſs that was introduced into their Senate: But neither the Senate of the Athenians, nor of the Achæans, but would have wondred if a man ſhould have told them, that they had been to receive all Comers, and Diſcourſes to the end that they might refer them afterwards unto the Prytans or the Synarchy: much leſſe unto an occaſionall Committee, expoſed unto the catch that catch may, of the parties intereſted. And yet Venice in this (as in moſt of her Orders,) excells them all by the conſtitution of her Councils, that of the Colledge, and the other of the Dieci. The courſe of the Colledge is exactly deſcribed in the enſuing Order: And for that of the Dieci it ſo little differs from what it hath beſtowed upon our Dictator, that I need not to make any particular deſcription of it. But to Dictatorian power in general, and the uſe of it, becauſe it muſt needs be of difficult digeſtion unto ſuch as, peuking ſtill at ancient Prudence, ſhew themſelves to be in the Nurſery of Mother-wit; it is no leſs then neceſſary to ſay ſomething. And firſt, in a Common-wealth that is not wrought up, nor perfected, this Power will be of very frequent, if not continual uſe;

Where-

Wherefore it is ſaid more then once upon defects of the Government in the Book of Judges, That, in thoſe dayes there was no King in Iſrael; Nor hath the Tranſlator (though for no King, he ſhould have ſaid no Judge) abuſed you ſo much; ſeeing that the Dictator, (and ſuch was the Judge of Iſrael) or the Dictatorian Power being in a ſingle Perſon, ſo little differs from Monarchy, which followed in that, that from the ſame cauſe there hath been no other effect in any Common-wealth, as in Rome was manifeſt by Scylla and Cæſar, who to make themſelves Abſolute or Soveraign, had no more to do, then to prolong their Magiſtracy; for Dictatoris imperium quaſi Numen. Nevertheleſs, ſo it is, that without this Power which is ſo dangerous, and ſubject to introduce Monarchy, a Common-wealth cannot be ſafe from falling into the like Diſſolution; For unleſs you have an Expedient in this Caſe of your own, and bound up by your providence from recoyling; Expedients in ſome Caſes you muſt not only have, but be beholding for them unto ſuch whom you muſt truſt at a pinch, when you have not leiſure to ſtand with them for Security; which will be a thou- ſand times more dangerous. And there can never be a Common-wealth otherwiſe then by the Order in debate wrought up unto that perfection; but this neceſsity muſt ſometimes happen in regard of her natural ſlowneſſe and openneſs, and the ſuddaineſs of Aſſaults that may be made upon her, as alſo the ſecreſie which in ſome caſes may be of abſolute neceſsity unto her affairs. Whence Machiavil concludes it poſitively, That a Commonwealth unprovided of ſuch a Refuge, muſt ruine; for her courſe is either broken by the blow, in one of thoſe caſes; or by her ſelf, while it ſtartles her out of her Orders. And indeed a Common-wealth is like a Grey-hound, which having once coaſted, will never after run fair, but grow ſloathful; and when ſhe comes to make a common practice of taking nearer wayes then her orders, ſhe is diſſolved; for the being of a Common-wealth conſiſts in her Orders. Wherefore at this liſt, you will be expoſed unto danger, if you have not provided before-hand for the ſafety of your reſort in like caſes: nor is it ſufficient that your reſort be ſafe, unleſs it be as ſecret, and quick; for if it be ſlow or open, your former inconveniences are not remedied. Now for our imitation in this part, there is nothing in experience like that of the Council of Ten in Venice; the benefit whereof would be too long to be shewn in the whole Piece, and therefore I shall take but a pattern out of Janotti: In the War (saith he) which the Venetians had with Florence in Casentine, the Florentines finding a necessity in their affairs far from any other inclination in themselves to ask their Peace, sent Ambassadours about it unto Venice, where they were no sooner heard, then the bargain was struck up by the Council of Ten; and every body admiring (seeing this Common-wealth stood upon the higher ground) what should be the reason of such haste; the Council upon the return of the Embassadours imparted Letters unto the Senate, whereby it appeared, that the Turk had newly launched a formidable Fleet against their State; which had it been known to the Florentines, it was well enough known they would have made no Peace: Wherefore the service of the Ten was highly applauded by the Senate, and celebrated by the Venetians. Whereby may appear, not only in part what use there is of Dictatorian Power in that Government, but that it is assumed sumed at the discretion of that Council; Whereas in this of Oceana it is no otherwise intrusted then when the Senate, in the Election of nine Knights extraordinary, giveth at once the Commission, and taketh security in a ballance added unto the Council of War, though securer before by the Tribunes of the People, then that of Venice; which yet never incurr'd Jealousie: For if the younger Nobility have been often girding at it, that happened not so much through the apprehension of danger in it unto the Common-wealth, as through the Awe of it upon themselves: Wherefore the Graver have doubtlesly shewn their Prudence in the Law: Whereby the Magistracy of these Counsellors being to last untill their Successours be created, the Council is established.

The Instructions of the Councils for their Subject matter being shewn, it remaineth that I shew the Instructions for the manner of their proceeding, as they follow in

The Twentieth Order, Containing the Method of Debate, to be observed by the Magistrates, and the Councils, successively, in order to a Decree of the Senate.

The Magistrates of the Signory as Counsellors of this Commonwealth, shall take into their Consideration all matter of State, or of Government; and having right to propose in any Council, if any one or more of them propose what Business he or they please in that Council whereunto it most properly belongeth: And that the Councils may be held unto their duty, the said Magistrates are superintendents vents, and inspectors of the same, with right to propose unto the Senate.

The Censors have equall power with their Magistrates, but in relation unto the Council of Religion only.

Any two of the three Provosts in every Council may propose to, and are the more peculiar Proposers of, the same Council; to the end that there be not only an inspection and super-intendency of Business in general, but that every work be also committed unto a peculiar hand.

Any one or more of the Magistrates, or any two of the Provosts respectively having proposed; the Council shall debate the business so proposed, to which they of the third Region that are willing shall speak first in their order; they of the second, next; and they of the third, last; and the opinions of those that proposed or spoke as they shall be thought the most considerable by the Council, shall be taken by the Secretary of the same in writing, and each of them signed with the name of the Author.

The opinions being thus prepared, any Magistrate of the Signory, Censor, or any two of the Provosts of that Council, upon this occasion may assemble the Senate.

The Senate being assembled, the Opinions (for example, if they be four) shall be read in their Order, that is, according unto the order or dignity of the Magistrates or Countenors by which they were signed. And being read, if any of the Council not mentioning them will speak, they as best acquainted with the Business, shall have precedence, and after them the Senators shall speak according unto their Regions, beginning by the third first, and so continuing through every man that will, have spoken: and when the opinions have been sufficiently debated, they shall be put altogether unto the Ballot after this manner.

Four Secretaries carrying each of them one of the opinions in one hand, with a white box in the other, and each following another, (according unto the order of the opinions) shall present his Box, naming the Author of his opinion unto every Senator; and one Secretary of Balloting with a green Box shall follow the four white ones; and one Secretary of Balloting with a red Box shall follow the green one: and every Senator shall put one Ball into some one of these six boxes. The Suffrage being gathered and opened before the Signory: If the red box or Non-liquet had above half the suffrages, the opinions shall be all cast out, for the Major part of the House is not clear in the business.

knelle. If no one of the four opinions had above half the Suffrages in the Affirmative, that which has fewest shall be cast out, and the other three shall be Balloted again. If no one of the three had above half, that which had fewest shall be cast out, and the other two shall Balloted again. If neither of the two had above half, that which has fewest shall be cast out, and the remaining opinion shall be Balloted again. And if the remaining opinion have not above half, it shall also be cast out. But the first of the opinions that arrives at most above half in the Affirmative is the Decree of the Senate. The opinions being all of them cast out by the Non-ciner, may be reviewed (if occasion permit) by the Council, and brought in again. If they be cast out by the Negative, the Cast being of Advice only, the House approveth not, and there is an end of it: the Cast being necessary and admitting delay, the Council is to think again upon the Business, and to bring in new opinions, but the Case being necessary, and not admitting delay; the Senate forthwith electing the Juncta shall create the Dictator. (Et videat Dictator ne quid Resp. detrimenti capiat.)

This in case the Debate conclude not in a Decree: but if a Decree be past, it is either in matter of State, or Government according to Law enacted already, and then it is good without going any farther: or it is in matter of Law to be enacted, repealed, or amended, and then the Decree of the Senate, especially if it be for a War, or for a Levy of Men or Money, is fatall, without the result of the Commonwealth, which is in the Prerogative Tribe, or Representative of the People.

The Senate having propos'd a Decree to be propos'd unto the People, shall appoint their Propolers: and no other may propose for the Senate unto the People but the Magistrates of the House; that is to say, the three Commissioners of the Seal, or any two of them; the three of the Treasury, or any two of them; or the two Censors.

The Senate having appointed their Propolers, shall require of the Tribunes a muster of the People at a set time and place: and the Tribunes, or any two of them having mustered the People accordingly, the Propolers shall propose the heads or Decree of the Senate by Clauses unto the People. And that which is propos'd by the Authority of the Senate, and resolved by the Commands of the People, is the Law of Oceana.

To

To this Order, implicitely containing the sum very near of the whole civil part of the Common-wealth: My Lord Archon spoke thus in Council:

My Dear Lords,

THere is a saying, That a man must cut his Coat according to his Cloth. When I consider what God hath allow'd or furnished unto our present Work, I am amazed. You would have a Popular Government; He hath weighed it unto you in the present ballance as I may say to a dragme; you have no more to do, but to fix it. For the Superstructures of such a Government, they require a good Aristocracy: You have, or have had a Nobility or a Gentry the best studied, and the best Writers, at least next that of Italy, in the whole World; nor have they been inferiour when so exercised, in the leading of Armies. But the people are the main body of a Common-wealth; shew me (a Gadibus usq; Auroram et Gangem) from the treasuries of Snow (as it is in Job) unto the burning Zone, a people whose shoulders so universally and so exactly fit the Corselet. Nevertheless it were convenient, to be well provided with Auxiliaries: There is Marpesia through her fruitfulnesse inexhaustible, of men, and men through her barrenness not only inured unto hardship, but bucked in your Arms. It may be said that Venice, save only that she taketh not in the People, is the most incomparable Situation of a Common-wealth. You are Venice taking in your People and your Auxiliaries too. My Lords, the children of Israel were makers of brick, before they were builders of a Common-wealth: But our brick is made, our morter temper'd, the Cedars of Lebanon are hew'd and squared unto our hands. Hath this been the work of man? or is it in man to withstand this work? Shall he that contendeth with the Almighty instruct him? He that reproveth God, let him answer it. For our parts, every thing is so laid, that when we come to have use of it, it is the next at hand; and unless we can conceive that God and Nature do any thing in vain, there is no more for us to do, but to diſpatch. The Piece which we have reached to us in the foregoing Orders, is the Ariſtocracy. Athens, as hath been ſhewn, was plainly loſt through the want of a good Ariſtocracy: but the ſufficiency of an Ariſtocracy goes demonſtrably upon the hand of the Nobility or Gentry: for that the Politicks can be maſter'd without ſtudy, or that the people can have leiſure to ſtudy, is a vain imagination; and what kind of Ariſtocracy, Divines and Lawyers would make, let their incurable run upon their own narrow bias; and their perpetuall invectives againſt Machiavill (though in ſome places juſtly reproveable, yet the only Politician, and incomparable Patron of the people) ſerve for inſtruction. I will ſtand no more unto the Judgment of Lawyers and Divines in this work, then unto that of ſo many other Tradeſmen; but if the Modell chance to wander abroad, I recommend it unto the Roman Speculativi, (Garbatiſſimi Signori) the moſt Compleat Gentlemen of This Age; for their cenſure; or, with my Lord Epimonus's his leave, ſend three or four hundred Copies unto the Agent at Venice, to be preſented unto the Magiſtrates there; and when they have conſidered them, to be propoſed unto the debate of the Senate, the moſt competent Judges under Heaven; who though they have great Affairs, will not refuſe to return you the Oracle of their Ballot. The Counſellours of Princes I will not truſt, they are but Journy-men. The wiſdom of theſe later times in Princes Affairs (ſaith Verulamius) is rather fine deliveries and ſhiftings off dangers when they be near, then ſolid and grounded courſes to keep them aloof. Their Counſellours do not derive their proceedings from any ſound root of Government, that may contain the demonſtration, and aſſure the ſucceſſe of them, but are expedient-mongers, givers of themſelves to help a lame dog over a ſtile; elſe how commeth it to paſſe, that the fame of Cardinal Richelieu hath been like thunder, whereof we hear the noiſe, but can make no demonſtration of the reaſon? But to return, if neither the People, nor Divines and Lawyers can be the Ariſtocracy of a Nation, there remains only the Nobility, in which ſtyle,

to avoid farther repetition, I shall understand the Gentry also; as the French do by the word Noblesse.

Now to treat of the Nobility, in such sort as may be lesse obnoxious unto mistake; it will be convenient, and responsible unto the present occasion, that I divide my discourse into four Parts,

The first treating of Nobility, and the kinds of it.

The second, of their capacity of the Senate.

The third, of the divers kinds of Senates.

The fourth, of the Senate, according unto the foregoing Orders.

Nobility may be defined divers wayes, for it is either ancient riches, or ancient virtue, or title confer'd by a Prince or a Common-wealth.

Nobility of the first kind may be subdivided into two other, such as hold an over-ballance in Dominion or Propriety unto the whole People: or such as hold not an over-ballance. In the former Case a Nobility (such was the Gothick, of which sufficient hath been spoken) is incompatible with popular Government; for unto popular Government it is essential, that power should be in the people, but the overballance of a Nobility in Dominion, draweth the power unto themselves; wherefore in this sense it is that Machiavill is to be understood, where he saith, (Questi tali sono pernitiosi in ogni Republica, & in ogni Provincia); that these are pernicious in a Common-wealth; and of France, Spain, and Italy, that they are Nations (lequali tutte insieme sono la corruttela del mondo) which for this cause are the corruption of the world: for otherwise

Nobility

Nobility may according unto his definition, which is, That they are such as live upon their own revenues in plenty, without engagement either unto the tilling of their Lands, or other work for their livelihood; hold an underballance unto the people. In which case they are not onely safe, but necessary unto the naturall mixture of a well-ordered Common-wealth. For how else can you have a Common-wealth that is not altogether Mechanick? or what comparison is there of such Common-wealths, as are of come neareſt to Mechanick; for example, Athens, Suitz, Holland, unto Lacedemon, Rome, and Venice, plumed with their Ariſtocracies. Your mechanicks, till they have firſt feather'd their neſts, like the Fowles of the Ayr, whoſe whole imployment is to ſeek their food, are ſo buſied in their private concernments, that they have neither leiſure to ſtudy the publick, nor are ſafely to be truſted with it, (quia egeſtus haud facile habetur ſine damno) becauſe a man is not faithfully imbarqued in this kind of ſhip, if he have no ſhare in the freight. But if his ſhare be ſuch as gives him leiſure by his private advantage, to reflect upon that of the Publick: what other name is there for this ſort of men (being a leur ayſe) but (as Machiavill you ſee calls them) Nobility? eſpecially when their families come to be ſuch as are noted, for their ſervices done unto the Common-wealth, and ſo take into their ancient riches ancient virtue, which is the ſecond definition of Nobility, but ſuch an one as is ſcarce poſſible in nature without the former. For as the Baggage (ſaith Verulamius) is to an Army; ſo are riches to Virtue; they cannot be ſpared nor left behind, though they be impedimenta, ſuch as not onely hinder the march, but ſometimes through the care of them loſe or diſturb the Victory. Of this later ſort is the Nobility of Oceana; the beſt of all other, becauſe they having no ſtamp whence to derive their price, can have it no otherwiſe then by their intrinſick value. The third definition of Nobility, is Title, Honour, or Diſtinction from the people, conferr'd or allow'd by the Prince, or the Common-wealth; and this may be in two wayes, either without any ſtamp or privilege as in Oceana, or with ſuch privileges as are inconsiderable; as in Athens after the battel of Platea, whence the Nobility had no right, as such, but unto religious offices, or inspection of the publick games, whereunto they were also to be elected by the people; or with priviledges, and those considerable ones, as the Nobility in Athens before the battel of Platea, and the Patritians in Rome, each of which had right, or claimed it, unto the Senate and all the Magistracies; wherein for some time they only by their stamp were current.

But to begin higher, and speak more at large of Nobility in their several capacities of the Senate; (a Jove Principium) The Phylarchs or Princes of the Tribes of Israel, were the most renowned; or, as the Latine, the most noble of the Congregation, (Numb. 1. 16.) whereof by hereditary right they had the leading, and judging. The Patriarchs or Princes of Families according as they declared their pedigrees, (Numb. 1. 18.) had the like right as to their Families; but neither in these nor the former was there any hereditary right unto the Sanhedrim; though there be little question but the wise men, and understanding and known among their Tribes which the people took or elected into those or other Magistracies, and Moses made Rulers over them, (Deut. 1. 13.) must have been of those, seeing these could not choose but be the most known among the Tribes, and were likeliest by the advantages of education to be the most wise and understanding.

Solon having found the Athenians neither Locally nor Genealogically, but by their different wayes of life, divided into four Tribes, that is, into the Souldiery, the Tradesmen, the Husbandmen, and the Goat-herds, instituted a new distribution of them, according unto the Census or valuation of their Estates into four Classes; the first, second, and third consisting of such as were Proprietors in Land, distinguished by the rate of their free-holds, with that stamp upon them, which making them capable of honour unto their riches, that is to say, of the Senate and all the Magistracies, excluded the fourth, being the body of the people, and far greater in number then the former three, from other right as to those capacities, then the election of these, who by this means became an hereditary Aristocracy or Senatorian Order of Nobility. This was that course which came afterwards to be the destruction of Rome, and had now ruin'd Athens; the Nobility, according to the inevitable nature of such an one, having laid the plot how to devest the people of the rebuke, and so to draw the whole power of the Common-wealth unto themselves; which in all likelihood they had done: if the people, coming by meer chance to be victorious in the battel of Platea, and famous for defending Greece against the Persians, had not returned with such courage, as irresistibly brake the Classes, unto which of old they had born a white teeth, brought the Nobility unto equall terms, and the Senate with the Magistracies to be common unto both; the Magistracies by Suffrage, and the Senate which was the mischief of it, as I shall shew anon in that constitution, by lot only.

The Lacedemonians went in the manner, and for the same cause with the Venetians at this day, to other than Nobility, even according to the definition given of Nobility by Machiavill; for they neither exercised any Trade, nor labour'd their Lands or Lots, which was done by their Helots, wherefore some Nobility may be far from pernicious in a Common-wealth, by Machiavill's own testimony, who is an admirer of this; though the servants thereof were more than the Citizens. To these servants I hold the answer of Lycurgus, when he had him who asked, why he did not admit the people into the Government of his Common-wealth, go home and admit his servants unto the government of his Family, to release; for neither were the Lacedemonian servants, nor farther capable of the Government, unlesse, whereas the Congregation had the rebuke, he should have given them the debate also; every one of these that attained unto sixty years of age, and the major vote of the Congregation, being equally capable of the Senate.

The Nobility of Rome and their capacity of the Senate, I have already described by that of Athens, before the battaile of Platea, save only that the Athenian was never eligible into the Senate without the suffrage of the people, till the introduction of the lot, but the Roman Nobility ever; for the Patricians were elected into the Senate by the Kings, by the Consuls, or the Censors; or if a plebeian happened to be conscribed, he and his posterity became patrician; nor, though the people had many disputes with the Nobility, did this ever come in controversy, which if there had been nothing else might in my judgment have been enough to overturne that Commonwealth.

The Venetian Nobility, but that they are richer, and not military, resemble in all other points the Lacedæmonian, as I have already shewn; these [illegible] excepts from his rule, by saying, that their Estates are not perfect fiefs real, or of any great revenue in Land: which comes into our account, and shews, that a Nobility or party of the Nobility not overballancing in Dominion, is not dangerous, but of necessary use in every Commonwealth, provided that it be rightly ordered; for if it be so ordered as was that of Rome, though they do not overballance in the beginning, as they did not, they will not be long ere they do, as is clear both in reason, and the experience of the later end. That the Nobility capable of the Senate, is there only not dangerous, where there be no other Citizens, as in this Government, and that of Lacedæmon.

The Nobility of Holland and Zeland though but few, have privileges not only distinct from the people, but so great, that in some Sovereignties they have a Negative voice; an example which I am far from commending, being such if those Governments were not Cantonized, divided and subdivided into many petty Sovereignties that ballance one another, and in which the Nobility except they had a Prince at the head of them, can never joyn to make work, would be the most dangerous gerous that ever was; but the Gothick, of which it favours. For in ancient Common-wealths you shall never find a Nobility to have had a negative but by the pole, which, the people being far more in number, came to nothing; whereas these have it, be they never so few, by their stamp or order.

Ours of Oceana, have nothing else but their education and their leisure for the publick, furnished by their ease and competent riches; and their intrinsick value, which according as it comes to hold weight in the Judgment or Suffrage of the People, is their only way unto honour and preferment: wherefore I would have your Lordships to look upon your Children as such, who if they come to shake off some part of their baggage, shall make the more quick and glorious march: for it was nothing else but the baggage foolishly plunder'd by the Nobility of Rome, that lost the victory of the whole World in the midst of her Triumph.

Having follow'd the Nobility thus close, they bring us, according unto their natural course and divers kinds, unto the divers Constitutions of the Senate.

That of Israel (as was shew'd by my right noble Lord Pheiphorus de Auge in the opening of the Common-wealth) consisted of seventy Elders, elected at the first by the people; but whereas they were for life, they ever after (though without any Divine precept for it) substituted their successours by Ordination, which ceremony was most usually performed by imposition of hands, and by this means a Common-wealth of as popular institution as can be found, became, as it is accounted by Josephus, Aristocratical. From this ordination, deriveth that which was introduced by the Apostles into the Christian Church; for which cause I think it is, that the Presbyterians would have the Government of the Church to be Aristocraticall; albeit the Apostles, to the end, as I conceive, that they might give no occasion unto such a mistake, but shew, that they intended the Government of the Church to be popular, Ordained Elders (as hath been shewn) by the hold- ing up of hands (or free Suffrage of the people) in every Congregation, or Ecclesia; for that is the word in the Original, being borrow'd from the civil Congregations of the people in Athens and Lacedemon, which were so called; and the word for holding up of hands in the Text, is also the very same, which signified the Suffrage of the people in Athens, χειροτονειν; and the Suffrage of the Athenians was given per χειροτονιαν, saith Emmius.

The Council of the Bean (as was shewn by my Lord Navarchus de Parale, in his full discourse) being the proposing Senate of Athens (for that of the Areopagites was a Judicatory) consisted of four, some say five hundred Senators, elected annually, all at once, and by a meer lot without suffrage; wherefore albeit the Senate, to correct the temerity of the lot, had power to cast out such as they should judge unworthy of that honour, this related to manners only, and was not sufficient to repair the Common-wealth, which by such means became impotent; and for as much as her Senate consisted not of the natural Aristocracy, which in a Common-wealth is the onely spur and rein of the people, was cast headlong by the rashnesse of her Demagogs or Grandees into ruine; while her Senate, like the Roman Tribunes, (qui fere semper regebantur à multitudine magis quam regebant) proposed not unto the Result only, but unto the Debate also of the people, who were therefore called unto the Pulpits, where some vomited, and others drunk poyson.

Livy.

The Senate of Lacedemon (most truly discover'd by my Lord Lucc de Scyale) consisted but of 28 for life, whereof the two Kings having but single votes, were hereditary, the rest elective by the free Suffrage of the people, but out of such as were sixty years of age; these had the whole debate of the Common-wealth in themselves, and proposed unto the result only of the people: and now the riddle which I have heretofore found troublesome to unfold, is out; that is to say, why Athens and Lacedemon consisting each of the Senate and the People, the one should be held a Democracy, and the other an

Aristocracy,

Aristocracy, or laudable Oligarchy, as it is termed by Isocrates; (for that word is not, where ever you meet it, to be branded, seeing it is used also by Aristotle, Plutarch, and others, sometimes in a good sense) The main difference was, that the people in this had the result only, and in that the debate and result too. But for my part, where the people have the election of the Senate, not bound unto a distinct order, and the result which is the Soveraign power, I hold them to have that share in the Government, (the Senate being not for life) whereof, with the safety of the Common-wealth, they are capable in nature, and such a Government for that cause to be Democracy; though I do not deny, but in Lacedemon the paucity of the Senators considered, it might be called Oligarchy, in comparison of Athens; or, if we look upon their continuance for life, though they had been more, Aristocracy.

The Senate of Rome (whose fame hath been heard to thunder in the Eloquence of my Lord Stola de Enyo) consisting of 300, was in regard of the number, lesse Oligarchical then that of Lacedemon, but more in regard of the Patrician, who having an hereditary capacity of the same were not elected unto that honour by the people, but being Conscribed by the Censors, enjoy'd it for life; wherefore these if they had had their wills, would have resolv'd as well as debated; which for the people at such variance with them, as dissolv'd the Common-wealth: whereas if the people had enjoy'd the result, as well that about the Agrarians, as all other strife, must of necessity have ceased. Dolobella d'Enyo

The Senates of Swizzs and Holland (as I have learnt of my Lords Alpester, and Glaucus) being bound up, like the sheaf of Arrowes which this gives, by leagues, lie like those in their quivers; But Arrowes when they come to be drawn, fly some this way, and some that: and I am contented that these concern us not.

That of Venice (by the faithful testimony of my most excellent lent Lord Lincum de Stella) hath obliged a world, ſufficiently punisht by its own blindneſſe or ingratitude, to repent and be wiſer: for whereas a Common-wealth in which there is no Senate, or where the Senate is corrupt, cannot ſtand: the Great Council of Venice like the Statua of Nilus, leans upon an Urn or Water-pot, which poureth forth the Senate in ſo pure and perpetual a ſtream, as being unable to inſtagnate, is for ever uncapable of corruption. The fuller deſcription of this Senate is contained in that of Oceana; and that of Oceana in the foregoing Orders. Unto every one of which, becauſe ſomething hath been already ſaid, I ſhall not ſpeak in particular. But in general, your Senate (and the other Aſſembly, or the Prerogative, as I ſhall ſhew in due place) are perpetuall, not as Lakes or Puddles, but as the Rivers of Eden; and are beds made, as you have ſeen, to receive the whole people, by a due and faithful Viciſſitude into their current. They are not, as in the later way, alternate. Alternate life in Government, is the alternate death of it.

Ut fratrem Pollux alterna morte redemit.

This was the Gothick Work, whereby the former Government was not only a ſhip, but a gulf too; could never open her ſailes, but in danger to overſet her ſelf: neither make any Voyage, nor lye ſafe in her own Harbour. The Wars of later Ages (ſaith Vegetius) ſeem to be made in the dark, in reſpect of the glory and honour, which reflected upon men from the Wars in ancient times. Their ſhipping of this ſort was for Voyages, ours dare not launch: nor lye they ſafe at home. Your Gothick Politicians ſeem unto me rather to have invented ſome new ammunition, or Gunpowder, in their King and Parliament (duo fulmina belli) then Government. For what is become of the Princes (a kind of people) in Germany? blown up. Where are the Eſtates, or the Power of the people in France? blown up. Where is that of the people in Aragon, and the reſt of the Spaniſh Kingdoms? blown up. On the other other side, where is the King of Spain's power in Holland? blown up. Where is that of the Austrian Princes in Swisz? blown up. This perpetual peevishnesse, and jealousie, under the alternate Empire of the Prince and of the People, is obnoxious unto every Spark. Nor shall any man shew a reason that will be holding in prudence, why the people of Oceana have blown up their King, but that their Kings did not first blow up them. The rest is discourse for Ladies. Wherefore your Parliaments are not henceforth to come out of the bag of Æolus, but by the Gallaxy's, to be the perpetual food of the fire of Vesta.

Your Gallaxy's which divide the House into so many Regions are three, one of which constituting the third region is annually chosen, but for the term of three years; which causeth the house having blooms, fruit half ripe, and others dropping off in full maturity, to resemble an Orange-Tree: such as is at the same time an education or spring, and an harvest too; for the people have made a very ill choice in the man, who is not easily capable of the perfect knowledge in one year of the Senatorian Orders; which knowledge allowing him for the first to have been a Novice, brings him the second year unto practice, and time enough; for at this rate you must alwaies have two hundred knowing men in the Government: and thus the vicissitude of your Senators is not perceiveable in the steddinesse and perpetuity of your Senate, which, like that of Venice, being alwaies changing, is for ever the same: and though other Polititians have not so well imitated their pattern, there is nothing more obvious in nature, seeing a man who wears the same flesh but a short time, is nevertheless the same man, and of the same Genius; and whence is this but from the constancy of nature in holding a man unto her Orders? Wherefore hold also unto your Orders; but this is a mean request, your Orders will be worth little, if they do not hold you unto them: wherefore imbarque. They are like a ship, if you be once aboard, you do not carry them, but they you; and see how Venice ſtands unto her tacklin, you will no more forſake them, then you will leap into the Sea.

But they are very many, and difficult. O my Lords, what Seaman caſts away his Carde becauſe it hath four and twenty points of Compaſſe? and yet thoſe are very near as many, and as difficult as the Orders in the whole Circumference of your Common-wealth. Conſider; how have we been toſſed with every wind of Doctrine, loſt by the glib tongues of your Demagogs and Grandees in our own Havens? A Company of Fidlers that have diſturbed your reſt for your groat, two to one, three thouſand pounds a year to another, hath been nothing; and for what? is there one of them that yet knowes what a Common-wealth is? And are you yet afraid of ſuch a Government in which theſe ſhall not dare to ſcrape, for fear of the Statute? Themiſtocles could not fiddle, but could make of a ſmall City a great Common-wealth: theſe have fiddled, and for your money, till they have brought a great Common-wealth to a ſmall City.

It grieves me, while I conſider how, and from what cauſes, imaginary difficulties will be aggravated, that the foregoing Orders are not capable of any greater clearneſſe in diſcourſe or writing: But if a man ſhould make a book, deſcribing every trick or paſſage, it would fare no otherwiſe with a game at Cards; and this is no more, if a man play upon the ſquare. There is a great difference (ſaith Verulamius) between a cunning man and a wiſe man, (between a Demagog and a Legiſlator) not onely in point of honeſty, but in point of ability. As there be that can pack the Cards, and yet cannot play well; ſo there be ſome that are good in canvaſſes and factions, that are otherwiſe weak men. Allow me but theſe Orders, and let them come with their Cards in their ſleeves, or pack if they can. Again, (ſaith he) it is one thing to underſtand perſons, and another to underſtand matters; for many are perfect in mens humours, that are not greatly capable of the reall part of buſineſſe: which is the conſtitution of one that hath ſtudied men, more then books. But there is nothing more hurtfull in a State, than that cunning men passe for wise. His words are an Oracle. As Dionysius, when he could no longer exercise his tyranny among men, turned School-master, that he might exercise it among boyes: Allow me but these Orders, and your Grandees so well skilled in the baites and palates of men, shall turn Rat-catchers.

And whereas Councils (as is discreetly observed by the same Authour in his time) are at this day, in most places but familiar meetings, (somewhat like the Academy of Provosts) where matters are rather talked on then debated; and run too swift to order an Act of Council: Give me my Orders, and see if I have not trashed your Demagogs.

It is not so much my desire to return upon haunts, as theirs that will not be satisfied; wherefore if notwithstanding what was said of dividing and chooſing in our Preliminary discourses, men will yet be returning unto the question, Why the Senate must be a Council apart; though even in Athens, where it was of no other constitution then the Popular Assembly, the distinction of it, from the other, was never held lesse then necessary: this may be added unto the former reasons, that if the Aristocracy be not for the Debate, it is for nothing; but if it be for the Debate, it must have convenience for it: and what convenience is there for debate in a crowd, where there is nothing but jostling, treading upon one another, and stirring of blood, than which in this case there is nothing more dangerous? Truly, it was not ill said of my Lord Epimonus, That Venice playes her Game as it were at billiards or nine-holes; and so may your Lordships, unlesse your ribs be so strong, that you think better of foothall; for such sport is debate in a Popular Assembly, as, notwithstanding the distinction of the Senate, was the destruction of Athens.

This Speech concluded the Debate which happened at the Institution of the Senate; the next Assembly is that of the People, or Prerogative Tribe.

The Face, or pime of the Prerogative Tribe for the Armes, the Horses, and the Discipline, but more especially for the se- The Power of the Prerogative Tribe.

last Men, is that of a very noble Regiment, or rather of two, the One of Horſe, divided into three Troops, (beſides that of the Provinces, which will be ſhewn hereafter) with their Captains, Cornets, and two Tribunes of the Horſe at the head of them. The other of Foot in three Companies (beſides that of the Provinces) with their Captains, Enſigns, and two Tribunes of the Foot at the head of them. The firſt Troop is called the Phœnix; the ſecond the Pelican; and the third the Swallow. The firſt Company the Cypreſſe; the ſecond, the Mirtle; and the third the Spray. Of theſe again, (not without a near reſemblance of the Roman Diviſion of a Tribe) the Phœnix and the Cypreſſe conſtitute the firſt Claſſis; the Pelican and the Myrtle, the ſecond; and the Swallow with the Spray the third, renewed every Spring by

21. Ord. The change, or Election of the Triennial Officers of the Prerogative.

The One and Twentieth Order, Directing, that upon every Monday next enſuing the laſt of March, the Deputies of the annuall Gallery arriving at the Pavilion in the Halo, and electing one Captain and one Cornet of the Swallow (Triennial Officers) by and out of the Cavalry at the Horſe Urn, according unto the Rules contained in the Ballot of the Puppies: And one Captain with one Enſign of the Spray (Triennial Officers) by and out of the Infantry at the Foot Urn, after the ſame way of balloting: Conſtitute and become the three Claſſis of the Prerogative Tribe.

Seven Deputies are annually returned by every Tribe, whereof three are Horſe, and four are Foot; and there be fifty Tribes, ſo the Swallow muſt conſiſt of 150 Horſe, the Spray of 200 Foot; and the reſt of the Claſſes being two, each of them in number equal; the whole Prerogative (beſides the Provinces, that is, the Knights and Deputies of Marpeſſa and Parapeta,) muſt conſiſt of 1050 Deputies, It is right. And theſe Troops and Companies may as well be called Centuries as thoſe of the Romans, for the Romans related not, in ſo naming theirs, unto the number: And whereas they were diſtributed according unto the valuation of their Eſtates, ſo are theſe, which by virtue of the laſt Order, are now accommodated with their Triennial Officers; but there be others appertaining unto this Tribe, whoſe Election being of far greater importance is Annual, as followeth in

22. Ord. The Change, or Election of the Annual Magiſtrates of the Prerogative.

The Twenty ſecond Order: Whereby the firſt Claſſis having Elected their Triennial Officers, and made Oath unto the Diſtinctions that they ſhall never introduce, claſſe, nor to their power ſuffer to be introduced into any popular Aſſembly of this Government, vernment, but to their utmoſt be ayding and aſſiſting to ſeize and deliver any Perſon or Perſons in that way offending and ſtriking at the Root of this Common-wealth unto the Councill of War; are to proceed with the other two Claſſes of the Prerogative Tribe to Election of the New Tribunes, being four Annual Magiſtrates, whereof two are to be elected out of the Cabalry at the Horſe-Urn, and two out of the Infantry at the Foot-Urn, according unto the Common ballot of the Tribes: And they may be promiſcuouſly Choſen out of any Claſſis, provided that the ſame Perſon ſhall not be capable of bearing the Tribunitian Honour twice in the term of one Gallary. The Tribunes thus choſen ſhall receive the Tribe (in reference to the power of Muſtering and Diſciplining the ſame) as Commanders in Chief: and for the reſt as Magiſtrates, whoſe proper function is preſcribed by the next Order. The Tribunes may give leave unto any number of the Prerogative not exceeding one hundred at a time, to be abſent, ſo they be not Magiſtrates, nor Officers, and return within three moneths; If a Magiſtrate or Officer have neceſſary occaſion, he may alſo be abſent for the ſpace of one month; provided, that there be not above three Cornets or Enſigns, two Captains or one Tribune to abſent at one time.

To this the Archon ſpoke at the Inſtitution, after this manner:

My Lords,

IT is affirmed by Cicero in his Oration for Flaccus, That the Common-wealths of Greece were all ſhaken or ruined by the intemperance of their Comitia, or Aſſemblies of the People. The truth is, if good heed in this point be not taken, a Common-wealth will have bad Leggs. But all the World knowes he ſhould have excepted Lacedemon, where the People (as hath been ſhewn by the Oracle) had no power at all of Debate; nor (till after Lyſander, whoſe Avarice opened a Gulph, that was not long ere it ſwallowed up his Country) came it ever to be exerciſed by them. Whence that Common-wealth ſtood longeſt and firmeſt of any other, but this, in our dayes, of Venice; which having underlaid her Self with the like Inſtitution ſtitution, owes a great, if not the greateſt part of her ſteadineſſe unto the ſame principle; the great Council, which is with her the People, by the Authority of my Lord Epimonus, never ſpeaking a word. Nor ſhall any Common-wealth where the People in their political capacity is talkative, ever ſee half the dayes of one of theſe: But being carried away by Vain-glorious Men (that, as Overbury ſayes, Piſſe more then they drink) Swim down the ſink; as did Athens, the moſt prating of theſe Dames, when that ſame ranting fellow Alcibiades fell on Demagoging for the Sicilian War. But whereas Debate by the Authority and experience of Lacedemon and Venice, is not to be committed unto the People in a well ordered Government; It may be ſaid, That the Order ſpecify'd is but a ſlight barre in a matter of like danger; For ſo much as an Oath, if there be no recourſe upon the breach of it, is a weak tye for ſuch hands as have the Sword in them. Wherefore what ſhould hinder the People of Oceana if they happen not to regard an Oath, from aſſuming Debate, and making themſelves as much an Anarchy as thoſe of Athens? To which I anſwer, Take the Common ſort in a private Capacity, and except they be injured, you ſhall find them to have (Verecundiam Patrum) a baſhfulneſſe in the preſence of the better ſort, or wiſer Men; acknowledging their abilities by attention; and accounting it no mean Honour to receive reſpect from them. But if they be injured by them, they hate them, and the more for being wiſe, or great, becauſe that makes it the greater injury. Nor refrain they in this Caſe from any kind of intemperance of ſpeech, if of Action. It is no otherwiſe with a People in their political Capacity; You ſhall never find that they have aſſum'd Debate for it ſelf, but for ſomething elſe: Wherefore in Lacedemon where there was, and in Venice where there is, nothing elſe for which they ſhould aſſume it, they have never ſhewn, ſo much as an inclination to it. Nor was there any appearance of ſuch a deſire in the People of Rome, (who from the time of Romulus had been very well well contented with the Power of Result either Comitiis Curiatis, as it was ſettled upon them by him; or Centuriatis, as it was alter'd in their regard for the worſe by Servius Tullius) till news was brought ſome fifteen years after the exile of Tarquine their late King (during which time, the Senate had governed paſſing well) that he was dead at the Court of Ariſtodemus the Tyrant of Cumæ. (Eo nuntio erecti patres, erecta Plebs. Sed Patribus nimis lætus is fuit lætitiæ: Plebi, cui ad eam diem ſummâ ope inſervitum erat, injuriæ à Primoribus fieri cœpere) Whereupon the Patricians, or Nobility began to let out the hitherto diſſembled Venom, which is inherent in the root of Oligarchy, and fell immediately upon injuring the People beyond all moderation: For whereas the People had ſerved both gallantly and contentedly in Arms, upon their own Charges, and though joynt Purchaſers by their Swords of the conquer'd Lands, had not participated in the ſame, to above two Acres a man, the reſt being ſecretly uſurped by the Patricians: they through the meanneſſe of their ſupport, and the greatneſſe of their expence, being generally indebted, no ſooner returned home with Victory to lay down their Arms, then they were ſnarcht up by their Creditors the Nobility, to cram Goales: Whereupon (but with the greateſt modeſty that was ever known in the like caſe) they firſt fell upon debate (Se foris pro libertate & imperio dimicantes, domi à civibus captos & oppreſſos eſſe: tutioremq; in bello quam in pace, inter hoſtes quam inter cives, libertatem plebis eſſe). It is true, that when they could not get the Senate (through fear, as was pretended by the Patricians) to aſſemble and take their grievances into Conſideration, they grew ſo much warmer, that it was glad to meet: Where Ap. Claudius, a fierce Spirit, was of opinion, That recourſe ſhould be had unto Conſular power, whereby ſome of the brands of Sedition being taken off, the flame might be extinguiſht: Servilius being of another temper, thought it better and ſafer to try if the People might be bow'd, than broken. But this debate was interrupted by tumultuous news of the near approach Liv. l. 2.

approach of the Volſci, a caſe in which the Senate had no recourſe but to the People, who contrary unto their former cuſtom upon like occaſions would not ſtir afoot, but fell on laughing, and ſaying, (Patres militarent patres arma caperent, ut penes eoſdem pericula belli, penes quos præmia, eſſent) Let them fight that have ſomething to fight for. The Senate that had purſes, and could not ſing ſo well before the Thief, being in great perplexity, found no poſſible way out of it, but to beſeech Servilius, one of a Genius well known to be Popular, That he would accept of the Conſulſhip, and make ſome ſuch uſe of it as might be helpful to the Patrician intereſt. Servilius accepting of the offer, and making uſe of his Intereſt with the people, perſwaded them to hope well of the good intention of the Fathers, whom it would little beſeem to be forced unto thoſe things which would loſe their Grace, and that in view of the enemy, if they came not freely; and withall publiſhed an Edict, That no man ſhould with-hold a Citizen of Rome by Impriſonment from giving his Name (for that was the way, as I ſhall have opportunity hereafter to ſhew more at large, whereby they drew out their Armies) nor ſeize, nor ſell any Mans Goods or Children that was in the Camp; Whereupon the people with a mighty Concourſe immediately took Arms, marched forth, and (which to them was as eaſie as to be put into the humour, and that as appears in this place was not hard) totally defeated the Volſci firſt, then the Sabines, (for the neighbour Nations, hoping to have had a good bargain of the Diſcord in Rome were up on all ſides) and after the Sabines, the Aurunci. Whence returning victorious in three Battels, they expected no leſſe then that the Senate would have made good their Words. When Appius Claudius the other Conſul of his innate Pride, and that he might fruſtrate the faith of his Collegue, cauſed the Souldiers (who being ſet at liberty had behaved themſelves with ſuch valour) to be reſtored at their return unto their Creditors, and their Gaoles. Great reſort upon this was made by the People unto Servilius, ſhewing him their Wounds, calling him to witneſſe witnesse how they had behaved themselves, and minding him of his promise. Poor Servilius was sorry, but so overawed with the headinesse of his Colleague, and the obstinacy of the whole faction of the Nobility, that not daring to do any thing either way, he lost both Parties; the Fathers conceiving that he was Ambitious, and the People that he was False: while the Consul Claudius continuing to countenance such as daily seized and imprisoned some of the indebted People, had still new, and dangerous Controversies with them, insomuch that the Common-wealth was torn with horrid Division, and the People (because they found it not so safe, or so effectual in Publique) minded nothing but laying their heads together in private Conventicles. For this A. Virginius, and Titus Vetusius the new Consuls were reproved by the Senate as slothfull, and upbraided with the Virtue of Ap. Claudius. Whereupon the Consuls having desired the Senate, that they might know their pleasure, shewed afterwards their readinesse to obey it, by summoning the People according unto command, and requiring Names whereby to draw forth an Army for diversion, but no man would answer. Report hereof being made unto the Senate, the younger sort of the Fathers grew so hot with the Consuls, that they desired them to abdicate the Magistracy, which they had not the courage to defend.

The Consuls, though they conceived themselves to be roughly handled, made this soft Answer: Fathers Conscript, that you may please to take notice it was foretold, some horrid Sedition is at hand: We shall onely desire, that they whose valour in this place is so great, may stand by us to see how we behave our Selves, and then be as resolute in your Commands as you Will: Your Fatherhoods may know if we be wanting in the performance.

At this, some of the hot bloods returned with the Consuls unto the Tribunal, before which the People were yet standing, and the Consuls having generally required Names, in vain, (to put it unto something) required the name of one that was in their eye particularly; on whom, when he moved not, they commanded a Lictor to lay hands; but the People thronging about the party ſummon'd, forbad the Lictor who durſt not touch him; at which the Hot-ſpurs that came with the Conſuls, enraged by the affront, deſcended from the Throne to the ayd of the Lictor; from whom in ſo doing they turned the indignation of the People upon themſelves with ſuch heat, that the Conſuls interpoſing, thought fit by remitting the Aſſembly, to appeaſe the Tumult; in which nevertheleſſe there had been nothing but noiſe. Nor was there leſſe in the Senate, being ſuddainly rally'd upon this occaſion, where they that received the Repulſe, with others, whoſe heads were as addle as their own, fell upon the buſineſſe as if it had been to be determined by Clamour, till the Conſuls, upbraiding the Senate, that it differ'd not from the Market-place, reduced the Houſe unto Orders: And the Fathers having been conſulted accordingly, there were three Opinions. P. Virginius conceived, that the Conſideration to be had upon the matter in queſtion, (or ayd of the indebted and impriſon'd people) was not to be further extended then unto ſuch as had engaged upon the promiſe made by Servilius: T. Largius, that it was no time to think it enough, if mens merits were acknowledged, while the whole People, ſunk under the weight of their debts, could not emerge without ſome commmon ayd; which to reſtrain by putting ſome into a better Condition then others, would rather more inflame the Diſcord then extinguiſh it. Ap. Claudius (ſtill upon the old haunt) would have it, That the People were rather wanton then fierce: It was not oppreſſion that neceſſitated, but their Power that invited them unto theſe Freaks; the Empire of the Conſuls ſince the Appeal unto the People (whereby a plebeian might ask his Fellowes if he were a Thief) being but a meer Scar-crow. Go to, (ſayes he) Let us create the Dictator, from whom there is no appeal, and then let me ſee more of this Work; or him that ſhall forbid my Lictor. The advice of Appius was abhorr'd by many, and to introduce a general Reciſion of Debts with Largius, was to violate violate all Faith: That of Virginius as the moſt moderate would have paſt beſt, but that there were private Intereſts (that ſame banc of the Publique) which withſtood it; So they concluded with Appius; who alſo had been Dictator, if the Conſuls and ſome of the graver ſort had not thought it altogether unſeaſonable, at a time when the Volſci and the Sabins were up again, to venture ſo far upon Alienation of the People; for which cauſe Valerius, being deſcended from the Publicola's, the moſt Popular Family, as alſo in his own perſon of a mild nature, was rather truſted with ſo rigid a Magiſtracy. Whence it happened, that the People, though they knew well enough againſt whom the Dictator was created, feared nothing from Valerius; But upon a new promiſe made to the ſame effect with that of Servilius, hoped better another time, and throwing away all Diſputes, gave their Names roundly, went out, and (to be brief) came home again as Victorious as in the former Action, the Dictator entring the City in Triumph. Nevertheleſſe when he came to preſſe the Senate, to make good his promiſe, and do ſomething for the eaſe of the People, they regarded him no more as to that point then they had done Servilius. Whereupon the Dictator, in diſdain to be made a ſtale, abdicated his Magiſtracy, and went home. Here then was a Victorious Army without a Captain, and a Senate pulling it by the beard in their Gowns. What is it (if You have read the Story, for there is not ſuch another) that muſt follow? Can any Man imagine, that ſuch only ſhould be the opportunity upon which this People could run away! Alas, poor men, the Æqui and the Volſci, and the Sabines were nothing, but the Fathers invincible! There they ſate ſome three hundred of them armed all in Robes, and thundring with their Tongues; no hopes in the earth to reduce them unto any tolerable Conditions: Wherefore, no thinking to abide long ſo near them; away marches the Army, and encamps in the Fields. This Retreat of the People is called the Secceſſion of Mount Aventine, where they lodged, very ſad at their Condition, but not letting fall so much as a word of Murmur against the Fathers. The Senate by this time were great Lords, had the whole City unto themselves; but certain Neighbours were upon the way that might come to speak with them, not asking leave of the Porter. Wherefore their minds became troubled, and an Orator was posted unto the People to make as good Conditions with them as he could; but, whatever the terms were, to bring them home, & with all speed: And here it was covenanted between the Senate, and the People, That these should have the Magistrates of their own Election, called the Tribunes; upon which they returned.

To hold you no longer, the Senate having done this upon necessity, made frequent attempts to retract it again; while the Tribunes on the other side, to defend what they had gotten, instituted their Tributa Comitia, or Councill of the People; where they came in time, and as disputes increased, to make Lawes without the Authority of the Senate, called Plebiscita: Now to conclude in the Point at which I drive; such were the steps whereby the People of Rome came to assume Debate: nor is it in Art or Nature to debarre a People of the like effect, where there is the like cause: For Romulus having in the Election of his Senate squared out a Nobility for the support of a Throne, by making that of the Patricians a distinct and hereditary Order, planted the Common-wealth upon two contrary Interests, or Roots, which shooting forth in time produced two Common-wealths, the one Oligarchical in the Nobility, and the other a meer Anarchy of the People, which thenceforth caused a perpetual feud and enmity between the Senate and the People, even to death.

There is not a more noble, or usefull question in the Politicks, then that which is started by Machiavil, Whether means were to be found whereby the Enmity that was between the Senate and the people of Rome, might have been removed. Nor is there any other in which we, or the present occasion, are so much concerned, particularly in relation unto this Author; For as much as his Judgment in the determination of the queſtion ſtanding, our Common-wealth falleth. And he that will erect a Common-wealth againſt the Judgment of Machiavill, is obliged to give ſuch reaſons for his enterprize as muſt not go on begging. Wherefore to repeat the Polititian very honeſtly, but ſomewhat more briefly: He diſputes thus;

There be two ſorts of Common-wealths, the one for Preſervation, as Lacedemon and Venice. The other for Excreaſe, as Rome. Mach. diſc. B. 1. C. 6.

Lacedemon being governed by a King and a ſmall Senate, could maintain it ſelf a long time in that Condition, becauſe the Inhabitants, being few, having put a bar upon the reception of Strangers, and living in ſtrict obſervation of the Lawes of Lycurgus, which now had gotten reputation, and taken away all occaſion of Tumults, might well continue long in Tranquillity: For the Lawes of Lycurgus introduced a greater equality in Eſtates, and a leſs equality in Honours; whence there was equall Poverty, and the Plebeians were leſſe Ambitious, becauſe the Honours, or Magiſtracies of the City could extend but unto a few; and were not communicable unto the People; nor did the Nobility by uſing them ill, ever give them a deſire to participate of the ſame: This proceeded from the Kings, whoſe Principality being placed in the midſt of the Nobility, had no greater means whereby to ſupport it ſelf, then to ſhield the People from all Injury; whence the People not fearing Empire, deſired it not. And ſo all occaſion of enmity between the Senate and the People was bar'd. But this union happened eſpecially from two cauſes, the one, that the Inhabitants of Lacedemon being few, could be govern'd by the Few. The other, that not receiving Strangers into their Common-wealth, they did not corrupt it, nor increaſe it, unto ſuch a Proportion as was not governable by the Few.

Venice hath not divided with her Plebeians, but all are called Gentlemen that be in adminiſtration of the Government; for which Government She is more beholding unto Chance, then the Wiſdome of her Law-makers; For many retiring unto thoſe Iſlands, where that City is now built from the inundations of Barbarians rians that overwhelm'd the Roman Empire, when they were encreased unto such a number, that to live together it was necessary to have Lawes: They Ordained a form of Government, whereby assembling often in Council upon Affairs, and finding their number sufficient for Government, they put a barre upon all such as repairing afterwards unto their City should become Inhabitants, excluding them from participation of Power. Whence they that were included in the Administration had right; and they that were excluded, coming afterwards, and being received upon no other Conditions to be Inhabitants, had no wrong, and therefore had no occasion; nor were they trusted with Arms, and therefore had no means to be tumultuous. Wherefore this Common-wealth might very well maintain her Self in Tranquillity.

These things considered, it is plain, that the Roman Legislators to have introduced a quiet State, must have done one of these two things; Either shut out Strangers, as the Lacedemonians; Or, as the Venetians, not allow'd the People to bear Arms. But they did neither. By which means the People having power and encrease, were in perpetual Tumult. Nor is this to be helped in a Common-wealth for Increase, seeing if Rome had cut off the occasion of her Tumults, She must have cut off the means of her Increase, and by consequence of her Greatnesse.

Wherefore let a Legislator consider with himself, whether he would make his Common-wealth for Preservation, in which Case She may be free from Tumults; or for Increase, in which case she must be infested with them.

If he make her for Preservation she may be quiet at home; but will he in danger abroad. First, because her foundation must be narrow, and therefore weak; as that of Lacedemon, which lay but upon 30000 Citizens; or that of Venice, which lyes but upon three Thousand. Secondly, such a Common-wealth must either be in Peace, or in War; If She be in Peace, the Few are soonest effeminated and corrupted, and so obnoxious also unto Faction: If in War, succeeding ill, she is an easie prey; or succeeding well, ruined by Increase: a weight which her Foundation is not able to bear. For Lacedemon when she had made her self Mistris, upon the matter, of

of Greece, through a ſlight accident, the rebellion of Thebes, occaſioned by the Conſpiracy of Pelopidas diſcovering this infirmity of her nature, the reſt of her conquer'd Cities immediately knocked off, and in the turn as it were of an hand reduced her from the fulleſt Tide, unto the loweſt Ebb of her fortune. And Venice having poſſeſſed Her ſelf of a great part of Italy by her Purſe, was no ſooner, in defence of it, put unto the tryall of her Arms, then She loſt all in one Battail.

Whence I conclude, That in the Ordination of a Common-wealth, a Legiſlator is to think upon that which is moſt honourable; and laying aſide the Models for Preſervation, to follow the example of Rome conniving at, and temporizing with the enmity between the Senate and the People, as a neceſſary ſtep unto the Roman Greatneſſe. For that any man ſhould find out a ballance that may take in the Conveniencies, and ſhut out the inconveniencies of both, I do not think it poſſible. Theſe are the words of the Author, though the Method be ſomewhat alter'd, to the end that I may the better turn them unto my hand.

My Lords, I do not know how you hearken unto this ſound, but to hear the greateſt Artiſt in the modern World, giving Sentence againſt our Common-wealth; is that, with which I am nearly concerned. Wherefore, with the honour due unto the Prince of Polititians, let us examine his ratiocination, with the liberty which he hath aſſerted to be the right of a free people. But we ſhall never come up to him, except by taking the Buſineſſe a little lower, we deſcend from effects to their cauſes. The Cauſes of Commotion in a Common-wealth are either external or internal. External are from Enemies, from Subjects, or from Servants. To diſpute then what was the Cauſe why Rome was infeſted by the Italian, or by the Servile Wars, why the Slaves took the Capitol: why the Lacedemonians were neat as frequently troubled with their Helots, as Rome with all thoſe: Or why Venice, whoſe Situation is not truſted unto the faith of Men, hath as good or better quarter with them whom She Governeth, then Rome had with the Latines; were to dispute upon external Causes: the question put by Machiavill, is of internal Causes; Whether the enmity that was between the Senate and the People of Rome might have been removed; And to determine otherwise of this question then he doth, I must lay down other Principles then he hath. To which end I affirm, that a Common-wealth internally considered is either equall, or unequall. A Commonwealth that is internally equall hath no internall cause of Commotion, and therefore can have no such effect, but from without. A Commonwealth internally unequall hath no internall cause of quiet, and therefore can have no such effect, but by diversion.

To prove my Assertions, I shall at this time make use of no other then his examples. Lacedemon was externally unquiet, because She was externally unequall, that is as to her Helots; and she was internally at rest, because she was equall in her Self, both in root and branch; In the root by her Agrarian, and in branch by the Senate, in as much as no man was thereunto qualified, but by election of the People: Which Institution of Lycurgus is mention'd by Aristotle, where he saith, That rendring his Citizens æmulous (not careless) of that Honour, he designed unto the People the Election of the Senate. Wherefore Machiavill in this, as in other places, having his eye upon the Division of Patrician and Plebeian Families as they were in Rome, hath quite mistaken the Orders of this Common-wealth, where there was no such thing. Nor did the Quiet of it derive from the Power of the Kings, who were so far from shielding the People from injury, of the Nobility, of which there was none in his sense, but the Senate, that one declared end of the Senate at the Institution, was to shield the people from the Kings, who thenceforth had but single Votes: Neither did it proceed from the sleightnesse of the Senate, or their keeping the People alo[illegible] from the Government, that they were quiet, but from the equality of their administrations, seeing the Senate (as is plain by the Oracle, their fundamental Law) had no more then the Debate, and the Reſult of the Common-wealth belonged unto the People. Wherefore when Theopomp and Polydore Kings of Lacedemon, would have kept the people aloof from the Government, by adding unto the ancient Law this Clauſe (Si prætò populus rogaſſit, Senatui Regibuſq; retractandi jus eſto), If the determination of the People be faulty, it ſhall be lawfull for the Senate to reſume the Debate; the people immediately became unquiet, and reſumed that Debate, which ended not till they had ſet up their Ephors, and cauſed that Magiſtracy to be confirmed by their Kings. (Theopompo Spartanorum regi moderationis teſtimonium reddamus. Nam cum primus inſtituiſſet ut Ephori Lacedemone crearentur, ita futuri regiæ poteſtati oppoſiti, quemadmodum Romæ Tribuni Plebis conſulari imperio ſunt objecti: atq; illi uxor dixiſſet, id egiſſe illum ut filiis minorem poteſtatem relinqueret: Relinquam, inquit, ſed diuturniorem. Optimè quidem. Ea enim demum tuta eſt potentia, quæ viribus ſuis modum imponit. Theopompus igitur legitimis regnum vinculis conſtringendo, quo longius à licentia retraxit, hoc propius ad benevolentiam civium admovit). By which it may appear, that a Common-wealth for Preſervation if ſhe come to be unequal, is as obnoxious unto enmity between the Senate and the People, as a Common-wealth for Encreaſe: and that the Tranquillity of Lacedemon derived from no other Cauſe then her Equality.

Val. Max. l.4.

For Venice, to ſay, that ſhe is quiet becauſe ſhe diſarms her Subjects, is to forget, that Lacedemon diſarmed her Helots, and yet could not in their regard be quiet; wherefore if Venice be defended from external cauſes of commotion, it is firſt, through her ſituation, in which reſpect her Subjects have no hope, (and this indeed may be attributed unto her fortune) and ſecondly, through her exquiſite Juſtice, whence they have no will to invade her: but this can be attributed to no other cauſe then her prudence: which will appear to be greater, as we look nearer; for the effects that proceed from fortune (if there be any ſuch thing) are like their cauſe, unconſtant; but there never happened unto any other Commonwealth, so undisturbed and constant a tranquillity and peace in her self, as is that of Venice; wherefore this must proceed from some other cause then Chance. And we see that as she is of all others the most quiet, so the most equal, Commonwealth. Her body consists of one Order, and her Senate is like a rolling stone (as was said) which never did, nor, while it continues upon that rotation, ever shall gather the mosse of a divided or ambitious interest; much lesse such an one as that which grasped the people of Rome in the talons of their own Eagles. And if Machiavill, averse from doing this Commonwealth right, had consider'd her Orders, (as his reader shall easily perceive he never did) he must have been so far from attributing the prudence of them unto Chance, that he would have touched up his admirable work unto that perfection, which, as to the civil part, hath no pattern in the universall World, but this of Venice.

Rome, secure by her Potent and Victorious Arms from all external causes of commotion, was either beholding for her peace at home, unto her Enemies abroad, or could never rest her head. My Lords, you that are Parents of a Commonwealth, and so freer Agents then such as are meer natural, have a care. For, as no man shall shew me a Commonwealth born streight, that ever became crooked; so, no man shall shew me a Common-wealth born crooked, that ever became streight: Rome was crooked in her birth, or rather prodigious, her twins the Patricians and Plebeian Orders came, as was shewn by the foregoing story, into the world, one body, but two heads, or rather two bellies; for, notwithstanding the Fable out of Æsop, whereby Menenius Agrippa the Orator that was sent from the Senate unto the People at Mount Aventine, shew'd the Fathers to be the belly, and the people to be the Arms and the Legs; which except that, how sloathful soever it might seem, were nourished, not these but the whole body must languish and be dissolved; it is plain, that the Fathers were a distinct belly, such an one as took the meat indeed out of the peoples mouthes; but abhorring the Agrarian, returned it not, in the due and neceſſary nutrition of a Common-wealth. Nevertheleſſe, as the people that live about the Cataracts of Nilus are ſaid not to hear the noiſe; ſo neither the Roman Writers, nor Machiavill the moſt converſant with them, ſeem among ſo many of the Tribunitian ſtorms, to hear their natural voice: for though they could not miſſe of it, ſo far as to attribute them unto the ſtrife of the People for participation in Magiſtracy; or, in which Machiavill more particularly joyns, unto that about the Agrarian; this was to take the buſineſſe ſhort, and the remedy for the diſeaſe.

A People when they are reduced unto miſery and deſpair, become their own Polititians, as certain beaſts when they are ſick become their own Phyſitians, and are carried by a natural inſtinct unto the deſire of ſuch herbs, as are their proper cure; but the people, for the greater part, are beneath the beaſts in the uſe of them: Thus the people of Rome, though in their miſery, they had recourſe by inſtinct as it were unto the two main Fundamentals of a Common-wealth, Participation of Magiſtracy, and the Agrarian; did but taſte, and ſpet at them, not (which is neceſſary in Phyſick) drink down the potion, and in that their healths. For when they had obtained participation of Magiſtracy, it was but lamely, not to a full and equall rotation in all elections; nor did they greatly regard it in ſo much as they had gotten: And when they had attained unto the Agrarian, they neglected it ſo far as to ſuffer the Law to grow obſolete; but if you do not take the due doſe of your Medicines, (as there be ſlight taſts which a man may have of Philoſophy that incline unto Atheiſme) it may chance be poyſon, there being a like taſte of the Politiques that inclines to Confuſion, as appears in the Inſtitution of the Roman Tribunes, by which Magiſtracy, and no more, the people were ſo far from attaining unto peace, that they in getting but ſo much much, got but heads for eternal feud; whereas if they had attained in perfection either unto the Agrarian, they had introduced the equality and calm of Lacedemon; or unto Rotation, they had introduced that of Venice: And so there could have been no more Enmity between the Senate and the People of Rome, then there was between those Orders in Lacedemon, or is in Venice. Wherefore Machiavill seemeth unto me, in attributing the peace of Venice more unto her luck then her prudence; of the whole stable to have saddled the wrong horse, for though Rome, (quæ non imitabile fulmen Ære, et cornipedum cursu simulârat Equorum)

in her Military part could beat it better, beyond all comparison, upon the sounding hoof; Venice for the Civil, hath plainly had the wings of Pegasus.

The whole Question then will come upon this Point, Whether the People of Rome could have obtained these Orders: And first, to say, that they could not have obtained them without altering the Common-wealth, is no argument; seeing, neither could they, without altering the Common-wealth, have obtained their Tribunes; which nevertheless were obtained: And if a man consider the posture that the people were in when they obtained their Tribunes, they might as well, and with as great ease, (for as much as the reason why the Nobility yielded unto the Tribunes, was no other, then that there was no remedy) have obtained any thing else. And for experience, it was in the like case, that the Lacedemonians set up their Ephors, and the Athenians after the battel of Platea, bowed the Senate (so hard a thing it is for a Commonwealth that was born crooked to become streight) as much the other way. Nor, if it be objected, that this must have ruin'd the Nobility, and in that deprived the Common-wealth of the Greatness which she acquired by them; is this opinion holding, but confuted by the sequell of the story, shewing plainly, plainly, that the Nobility through the defect of ſuch Orders, that is to ſay, of Rotation and the Agrarian) came to eat up the people; and bartening themſelves in Luxury, (to be as Saluſt ſpeaketh of them, Inertiſſumi nobiles, in quibus ſicut in ſtatua, præter nomen, nihil erat additamenti) to bring ſo mighty a Common-wealth, ſo huge a glory, unto ſo deplorable an end. Wherefore, means might have been found, whereby the enmity that was between the Senate and the People of Rome might have been removed. My Lords,——

If I have argued well, I have given you the comfort and aſſurance, that notwithſtanding the judgment of Machiavill, your Common-wealth is both ſafe and ſound: but if I have not argued well, then take the comfort and aſſurance which he gives you, while he is firm, That a Legiſlator is to lay aſide all other examples, and follow that of Rome only, conniving and temporizing with the enmity between the Senate and the People, as a neceſſary ſtep unto the Roman Greatneſſe. Whence it followes, that your Common-wealth at the worſt, is that which he hath given you his word is the beſt.

I have held your Lordſhips long, but upon an account of no ſmall importance, which I can now ſum up in theſe few words: Where there is a lickerriſhneſſe in a popular Aſſembly to Debate, it proceedeth not from the conſtitution of the People, but of ~~the~~ your Common-wealth: Now that the Common-wealth is of ſuch Conſtitution as is naturally free from this kind of intemperance, is that which to make good, I muſt divide the remainder of my Diſcourſe into two Parts.

The

The First, shewing the several Constitutions of the Assemblies of the People in other Common-wealths.

The Second, comparing of Our Assembly of the People with Theirs; and shewing how it excludeth the inconveniences, and embraceth the conveniencies of them all.

IN the beginning of the first Part I must take notice, that among the Popular error of our dayes it is no small one, That men imagines the ancient Governments of this kind to have consisted for the most part of one City, that is, of one Town; whereas by what we have learnt of my Lords that open'd them, it appears that there was not any considerable one of such a constitution but Carthage, till this in our dayes of Venice.

For to begin with Israel, it consisted of the twelve Tribes; locally spread or quartered throughout the whole Territory; these being called together by Trumpets, constituted the Church or Assembly of the people. The vastnesse of this weight, as also the slowneſſe, thence inavoidable, became a great cause (as hath been shewn at large by my Lord Phosphorus) of the breaking that Common-wealth; notwithstanding that the Temple, and those religious Ceremonies for which the people were at least annually obliged to repair thither; were no small ligament of the Tribes; otherwise but slightly tack'd together.

Athens consisted of four Tribes, taking in the whole People both of the City, and of the Territory; not so gather'd by Theseus into one Town, as to exclude the Country, but to the end that there might be ſome Capital of the Commonwealth: though true it be, that the Congregation conſiſting of the Inhabitants within the Walls, was ſufficient to all intents and purpoſes, without thoſe of the Country; theſe alſo being exceeding numerous, became burdenſome unto themſelves; and dangerous unto the Common-wealth: the more for their ill education, as is obſerved by Xenophon and Polybius, who compare them unto Marriners, that in a calm are perpetually diſputing and ſwaggering one with another, and never lay their hands unto the Common tackling or ſafety, till they be all indangered by ſome ſtorm: Which cauſed Thucydides, when he ſaw this people through the purchaſe of their miſery, become ſo much wiſer, as to reduce their Comitia or Aſſemblies unto five thouſand, to ſay, (as in his eighth Book) And now (at laſt in my time) the Athenians ſeem to have ordered their State aright; conſiſting of a moderate temper both of the Few (by which he means the Senate of the Bean) and of the Many, or the five thouſand; and he doth not only give you his judgment, but the beſt proof of it; for this (ſaith he) was the firſt thing, that after ſo many misfortunes paſt, made the City again to raiſe her head. The place I would deſire your Lordſhips to note, as the firſt example that I find, or think is to be found, of a popular Aſſembly by way of Repreſentative.

Lacedemon conſiſted of thirty thouſand Citizens diſperſed throughout Laconia, one of the greateſt Provinces in all Greece, and divided (as by ſome Authors is probable) into ſix Tribes; of the whole Body of theſe being gather'd, conſiſted the great Church or Aſſembly, which had the Legiſlative power; the little Church, gather'd ſometimes for matters of concernment, within the City, conſiſted of the Spartans only: theſe happened like that of Venice to be good conſtitutions of a Congregation, but from an ill cauſe the infirmity of a Common-wealth which through her Paucity was Oligarchical.

Wherefore, go which way you will, it ſhould ſeem, that without without a Repreſentative of the people, your Commonwealth conſiſting of an whole Nation, can never avoid falling either into Oligarchy or confuſion.

This was ſeen by the Romans, whoſe ruſtick Tribes extending themſelves from the river Arno, unto the Vulturnus, that is, from Feſulæ or Florence unto Capua, invented a way of Repreſentative by Lots; the Tribe upon which the firſt fell, being the prerogative, and ſome two or three more that had the reſt, the Jure-vocatæ: Theſe gave the Suffrage of the Common-wealth (binis Comitiis); the Prerogative at the firſt Aſſembly, and the Jure vocatæ at a ſecond.

Now to make the paralel, All the inconveniences that you have obſerved in theſe Aſſemblies are ſhut out, and all the conveniences taken in, to your prerogative; for firſt it is that for which Athens, ſhaking off the blame of Xenophon and Polybius, came to deſerve the praiſe of Thucydides, a Repreſentative; and ſecondly, not as I ſuſpect in that of Athens, and is paſt ſuſpition in this of Rome, by lot, but by ſuffrage, as was alſo the late Houſe of Commons, by which means in the your prerogatives, all the Tribes of Oceana are Jure Vocatæ; and if a man ſhall except againſt the paucity of the ſtanding number, it is a wheel, which in the revolution of a few years turneth every hand that is fit, or fitteth every hand that it turns, unto the publick work: Moreover, I am deceived, if upon due conſideration, it do not fetch your Tribes with greater equality and eaſe unto themſelves, and unto the Government, from the frontiers of Marpeſia; than Rome ever brought any one of hers out of her Pomœria, or the neareſt parts of her adjoyning Territories. To this you may adde, That whereas a Commonwealth, which in regard of the People is not of facility in execution, were ſure enough in this Nation to be caſt off through impatience; Your Muſters and Gallaxy's are given unto the people, as milk unto babes, whereby when they are brought up through four dayes election in an whole year, (one at the Pariſh, one at the Hundred, and two at the Tribe) unto their ſtrongeſt meat, it is of no harder digeſtion, then to give their Negative or Affirmative as they ſee cauſe. There be gallant men among us that laugh at ſuch an appeal or umpire; but I refer it, whether you be more inclining to pardon them or me, who I confeſſe have been this day laughing at a ſober man, but without meaning him any harm, and that is Petrus Cunæus, where ſpeaking of the nature of the people, he ſaith, that taking them apart, they are very ſimple, but yet in their Aſſemblies they ſee and know ſomething, and ſo runs away without troubling himſelf with what that ſomething is. Whereas the people taken apart, are but ſo many private intereſts, but if you take them together, they are the publick intereſt; the publick intereſt of a Common-wealth (as hath been ſhewn) is neareſt that of mankind, and that of mankind is right reaſon; but with the Ariſtocracy, whoſe reaſon or intereſt when they are all together, as appear'd by the Patricians, is but that of a party, it is quite contrary; for, as taken apart they are far wiſer then the people, conſidered in that manner; ſo being put together, they are ſuch fooles, that by depoſing the people, as did thoſe of Rome, they will ſaw off the branch whereupon they ſit, or rather deſtroy the root of their own greatneſſe: Wherefore Machiavill following Ariſtotle, and yet going before him, may well aſſert (Che la multitudine è piu ſavia et piu coſtunte che un Prencipe) the Prerogative of Popular Government for wiſdome. And hence it is, that the Prerogative of your Common-wealth, as for Wiſdom, ſo for Power, is in the People: which (albeit I am not ignorant, that the Roman Prerogative was ſo called a Prærogando, becauſe their Suffrage was firſt asked) gives the denomination unto your Prerogative Tribe.

The Elections whether Annual or Triennial, being ſhewn by the Twenty ſecond, that which comes in the next place to be conſidered, is

23. Ord. The Conſtitution Function and Manner of Proceeding of the Prærogative.

The Twenty third Order, ſhewing the Power, function, and manner of Proceeding of the Prerogative Tribe.

The Power or function of the Prerogative is of two parts, the one of Reſult, in which it is the Legiſlative Power, the other of Judicature, in which regard it is the higheſt Court, and the laſt appeale in this Common-wealth.

For the former part, the people by this Conſtitution, being not obliged by any Law, that is not of their own making; or Confirmation by the Reſult of the Prerogative, their equall Repreſentative: It ſhall not be lawfull for the Senate to require Obedience from the people, nor for the people to give obe obedience unto the Senate in or by any Law that hath not been promulgated or printed & publiſht for the ſpace of ſix weeks & afterwards propoſed by the Authority of the Senate unto the Prerogative Tribe, and reſolved by the Major Vote of the ſame in the affirmative. Nor ſhall the Senate have any power to levy War, Men, or Money, otherwiſe then by the conſent of the People ſo given, or by a Law ſo Enacted, except in caſes of exigence, in which it is agreed, that the Power both of the Senate, and the People ſhall be in the Dictator, ſo qualified, and for ſuch a terme of time as is according unto that Conſtitution already preſcribed. While a Law is in Promulgation the Cenſors ſhall animadvert upon the Senate; and the Tribunes upon the People, that there be no laying of heads together; Conventicles, or Canvaſſing to carry on, or oppoſe any thing; but that all my be done in a free and open way.

For the latter part of the Power of the Prerogative or that whereby they are the Supream Judicatory of this Nation, and of the Provinces of the ſame, the Cognizance of Crimes againſt the Majeſty of the People, as high Treaſon, as alſo of Peculate that is robery, of the Treaſury, or Defraudation of the Common-wealth appertaineth unto this Tribe, and if any Perſon or Perſons, Provincialls or Citizens ſhall appeale unto the people, it belongeth unto the Prerogative to Judge and determine the Caſe; Provided that if the Appeale be from any Court of juſtice in this Nation or the Provinces, the Appellant ſhall firſt depoſite one hundred pounds in the Court from which he appealeth, to be forfeited unto the ſame, if he be caſt in his Suite by the people. But the Power of the Council of War being the expedition of this Common-wealth, and the Martiall

Law

Law of the Strategus in the Field, are those onely from which there shall lye no Appeale unto the People.

The Proceeding of the Prerogative in case of a Proposition, is to be thus Ordered: The Magistrates propoling by Authority of the Senate, shall rehearse the whole Matter, and expound it unto the People, which done, they shall put the whole together unto the Suffrage, with three Bores, the Negative, the Affirmative, and the Non-sincere: and the Suffrage being returned unto the Tribunes, and numbred in the presence of the Propolers, if the Major Vote be in the Non-sincere, the Propolers shall desist, and the Senate shall resume the Debate. If the Major Vote be in the Negative, the Propolers shall desist, and the Senate too. But if the Major Vote be in the Affirmative, then the Tribe is clear, and the Propolers shall begin and put the whole matter, with the Negative and the Affirmative, (leaving out the Non-sincere) by Clauses; and the Suffrages being taken and numbred by the Tribunes in the presence of the propolers, shall be written and reported by the Tribunes unto the Senate, and that which is propoled by the authority of the Senate, and confirmed by the Command of the People, is the Law of Oceana.

The Proceeding of the Prerogative in a case of Judicature is to be thus ordered. The Tribunes being Auditors of all Causes appertaining unto the Cognizance of the people, shall have notice of the Suit or Tryall, whether of appeale or otherwise, that is to be Commenced, and if any one of them shall accept of the same, it appertaineth unto him to introduce it. A Cause being introduced, and the people Muttered or Assembled for the Decision of the same, the Tribunes are presidents of the Court, having power to keep it: unto Orders, and shall be seated upon a Scaffold erected in the middle of the Tribe: upon the right hand shall stand a seat, or large pulpit assigned unto the Plaintiffe, or the Accuser; and, upon the left, another for the Defendant, each if they spleale with his Counsel. And the Tribunes being attended upon such occations with so many Ballotines, Secretaryes, Door-keekers, and Messengers of the Senate as shall be requisite; One of them shall turn up a Glasse of the nature of an hour-glasse, but such an one as is to be of an houre and a halfe's running; which being turned up, the party, or Counsell on the right hand may begin to speak to the People; if there be Papers to be read, or witnesses to be examined, the Officer shall lay the Glasse side-waves until the Papers be read, and the Witnesses examined, and then turn it up again; and so long as the Glasse is running the Party on the right hand hath liberty to speak, and no longer. The Party on the right hand having had his time, the like shall be done in every respect, for the Party on the left. And the Cause being thus heard, the Tribunes shall put the question unto the Tribe with a white, a black, and a red Box (or non-sincere), Whether Guilty, or not Guilty? And if, the Suffrage being taken, the Major Vote be in the Non-sincere, the Cause shall be re-heard upon the next juridical day following; and put unto the question in the same manner. If the Major Vote come the second time in the Non-sincere, the Cause shall be heard again upon the third day: but at the third hearing the question shall be put without the Non-sincere. Upon the first of the three days in which the Major Vote comes in the white box, the party accused is absolved; and upon the first of them in which it comes in the black box, the party accused is condemned. The party accused being condemned, the Tribunes shall put with the white and the black Box, these questions, or such of them, as, regard had unto the Case, they shall conceive most proper. the case be criminal

1. Whether he shall have a writt of case.
2. Whether he shall be fined so much, or so much.
3. Whether he shall be Confiscated.
4. Whether he shall be rendred incapable of Magistracy.
5. Whether he shall be banished.
6. Whether he shall be put to Death.

These or any three of these questions whether simple or such as shall be thought fitly mixed, being put by the Tribunes, that which hath most above half the Votes in the black Box is the sentence of the people, which the Troop of the third Classis is to see executed accordingly.

But whereas by the Constitution of this Common-wealth it may appear that neither the Propositions of the Senate, nor the Judicature of the people, will be so frequent as to hold the Prerogative in continuall employment; the Senate, a maine part of whose Office it is to teach and instruct the people, shall duly (if they have no greater affairs to divert them,) cause an oration to be made unto the Prerogative by some Knight or Magistrate of the Senate, to be chosen out of the ablest men, and from time to time, appointed by the Orator of the House; in the great Hall of the Pantheon, while the Parliament resideth in the town; or in some Grove or sweet place in the field, while the Parliament for the heat of the year shall reside in the country; upon every Tuesday, morning or afternoon. And

And the Orator appointed pro tempore unto this office shall first repeat the orders of the Common-wealth with all possible brevity; and then making choice of one, or some part of it, discourse thereof unto the people. An Oration or discourse of this nature being afterward perused by the council of State, may as they see cause be printed and published.

The Archon's Comment upon the Order, I find to have been of this sense:

My Lords,

TO crave pardon for a word or two in farther explanation of what was read; I shall briefly shew how the Constitution of this Tribe or Assembly answers unto their Function; and how their function, which is of two parts, the former in the Result or Legislative Power; the later in the Supream Judicature of the Common-wealth, answers unto their Constitution. Machiavill hath a Discourse, where he puts the question, Whether the guard of liberty be with more security to be committed unto the Nobility, or to the People. Which doubt of his ariseth through the want of explaining his term; for the guard of liberty can signifie nothing else but the result of the Common-wealth; so that to say, that the guard of liberty may be committed unto the Nobility, is to say, that the result may be committed unto the Senate,

Senate, in which caſe the People ſignifie nothing: Now to ſhew it was a miſtake, to affirm it to have been thus in Lacedemon, ſufficient hath been ſpoken; and whereas he will have it to be ſo in Venice alſo; (Quello, ſaith Contarini, appreſſo il quale e la ſomma autorita di tutta la citta, el dalle leggi, et decreti de i quali pende l'autorita a coſi del Senato come ancora di tutti i Magiſtrati, e il Conſiglio Grande.) it is inſtitutively in the great Council by the Judgment of all that know that Common-wealth; though for the reaſons ſhewn it be ſometimes exerciſed by the Senate. Nor need I run over the Common-wealths in this place for the proof of a thing ſo doubtleſſe, and ſuch as hath been already made ſo apparent, as that the reſult of each was in the Popular part of it. The Popular part of yours, or the Prerogative Tribe, conſiſteth of ſeven Deputies (whereof three are of the Horſe) annually elected out of every Tribe of Oceana, which being fifty, amounteth unto one hundred and fifty Horſe, and two hundred Foot; and the Prerogative conſiſting of three of theſe Liſts, conſiſteth of four hundred and fifty Horſe, and ſix hundred Foot, (beſides thoſe of the Provinces to be hereafter mentioned) mentioned) by which means the over-ballance in the Suffrage remaining unto the Foot by one hundred and fifty Votes, you have unto the ſupport of a true and natural Ariſtocracy, the deepeſt root of a Democracy that hath been planted. Wherefore there is nothing in Art or Nature better qualify'd for the reſult then this Aſſembly.—— It is noted out of Cicero by Machiavill, That the People, albeit they are not ſo prone to find out truth of themſelves, as to follow Cuſtome, or run into errour; yet if they be ſhew'd truth, they not only acknowledge and embrace it very ſuddenly, but are the moſt conſtant and faithful Guardians and Conſervators of it. It is your Duty and Office, whereunto you are alſo qualify'd by the Orders of this Common-wealth, to have the People as you have your Hawks and Greyhounds, in leaſes and ſlips, to range the fields, and beat the buſhes for them; for they are of a nature that is never good at this ſport, but when you ſpring or ſtart their proper quarry: think not that they will ſtand to ask you what it is, or leſſe know it then the Hawks and Greyhounds do theirs; but forthwith make ſuch a flight or courſe, that a Huntſman may as well undertake to run with his dogs, or a

Faulkoner to fly with his Hawk, as an Ariſtocracy at this game to compare with the People. The People of Rome were ſeized upon no leſs prey then the Empire of the World, when the Nobility turned tailes and pearched among Dawes upon the Tower of Monarchy. For though they did not all of them intend the thing, they would none of them indure the remedy, which was the Agrarian.

But the Prerogative Tribe hath not only the Reſult, but is the Supream Judicature, and the ultimate Appeal in this Common-wealth. For the Popular Government that makes account to be of any ſtanding, muſt make ſure in the firſt place of the Appeal unto the People. (Ante omnes de provocatione adverſus Magiſtratus ad Populum, ſacrandoq; cum bonis capite ejus, qui regni occupandi concilia inëſſet.) As an Eſtate in truſt becomes a mans own, if he be not anſwerable for it, ſo the Power of a Magiſtracy not accomptable unto the People from whom it was received becoming of private uſe, the Common-wealth loſes her Liberty; Wherefore the right of Supream Judicature in the People (without which there can be no ſuch thing as Popular Government) is confirmed by the

conſtant Practice of all Common-wealths; as that of Iſrael in the Caſes of Achan, and of the Tribe of Benjamin, adjudged by the Congregation. The Dicaſterion or Court called the Heliaia in Athens, which (the Comitia of that Common-wealth conſiſting of the whole People, and ſo being too numerous to be a Judicatory) was conſtituted ſometimes of Five hundred, at others of One thouſand, or, according to the greatneſſe of the Cauſe, of Fifteen hundred, elected by the Lot out of the whole body of the People, had with the nine Archons, that were Preſidents, the Cognizance of ſuch Cauſes as were of higheſt importance in that State. The Five Ephors in Lacedemon, which were Popular Magiſtrates, might queſtion their Kings, as appears by the Caſes of Pauſanias and of Agis, who being upon his Tryall in this Court, was cryed unto by his Mother, to appeal unto the People, as Plutarch hath it in his Life. The Tribunes of the People of Rome, like in the nature of their Magiſtracy, and for ſometime in number, unto the Ephors; as being according unto Halicarnaſſeus and Plutarch, inſtituted in imitation of them; had power (diem dicere) to Summon any Man, his Magiſtracy at leaſt being expired, (for from the Dictator there lay no Appeal) to anſwer for himſelf unto the People. As in the caſe of Coriolanus, which was going about to force the People by withholding Corn from them in a famine, to relinquiſh the Magiſtracy of the Tribunes. In that of Sp. Caſſius for affecting Tyranny. Of M. Sergius for running away at Veii. Of C. Lucretius for ſpoyling his Province. Of Junius Silanus for making War againſt the Cimberi, injuſſu Populi; with divers others. And the Crimes of this nature were call'd Læſæ Majeſtatis. Examples of ſuch as were arraigned, or tryed for Peculate, or Defraudation of the Common-wealth, were, M. Curius, for intercepting the money of the Samnites. Salinator, for the unequal diviſion of Spoyles unto his Souldiers. M. Poſthumius, for Cheating the Common-wealth by a feigned Shipwrack; Cauſes of theſe two kinds were of more Publique nature; but the like Power upon Appeals was alſo exerciſed by the People in private Matters, even during the time of the Kings; As in the Caſe of Horatius. Nor is it otherwiſe with Venice, where Doge Loridano was Sentenced by the great Council; and Antonio Grimani; afterwards Doge, questioned, for that he being Admiral, had suffered the Turk to take Lepanto in view of his Fleet.

Nevertheless, there lay no Appeal from the Roman Dictator unto the People; which if there had, might have cost the Common-wealth dear, when Sp. Mœlius affecting Empire, circumvented and debauched the Tribunes; whereupon T. Quintius Cinninatus was created Dictator. Who having chosen Servilius Alaha to be his Lieutenant or Magister Equitum, sent him to apprehend Mœlius, whom while he disputed the Commands of the Dictator, and implored the ayd of the People, Alaha cut off upon the place: By which example you may see in what cases the Dictator may prevent the blow, which is ready sometimes to fall ere the People be aware of the danger. Wherefore there lyes no Appeal from the Dieci in Venice unto the Great Council, nor from our Council of War to the People. For the way of proceeding of this Tribe, or the Ballot, it is, as was once said for all, Venetian.

This Discourse (de Judiciis) whereupon we are fallen, bringeth us rather naturally then of design from the two general Orders of every Common-wealth; that is to ſay, from the Debating part, or the Senate; and the Reſolving part, or the People; to the third, which is the Executive part, or the Magiſtracy; whereupon I ſhall have no need to dwell: For, the Executive Magiſtrates of this Common-wealth are the Strategus in Arms, the Signory in their ſeveral Courts; (as the Chancery, the Exchequer) as alſo the Councils in divers Caſes within their Inſtructions, the Cenſors as well in their proper Magiſtracy, as in the Council of Religion: the Tribunes in the Government of the Prerogative, and that Judicatory: And the Judges with their Courts; Of all which ſo much is already ſaid or known as may ſuffice.

The Tueſday-Lectures or Orations unto the People, will be of great benefit unto the Senate, the Prerogative, and the whole Nation. Unto the Senate, becauſe they will not only teach your Senators Elocution, but keep the Syſteme of the Government in their memories. Elocution is of great uſe unto your Senators; for if they do not underſtand Rhetorick, (giving it at this time for granted, that the Art were not otherwiſe good) and come to treat with, or vindicate the cauſe of the Common-wealth againſt ſome other Nation, that is good at it; the advantage will be ſubject to remain upon the merit of the Art, and not upon the merit of the Cauſe. Furthermore, the Genius or Soul of this Government, being in the whole and in every part; they will never be of ability in determination upon any particular, unleſſe at the ſame time they have an Idea of the whole. That this therefore muſt be, in that regard, of equal benefit unto the Prerogative, is plain; though theſe have a greater concernment in it. For this Common-wealth is the Eſtate of the People: and a man (you know) though he be virtuous, yet if he do not underſtand his Eſtate, may run out or be cheated of it. Laſt of all, the treaſures of the Politicks will by this means be ſo opened, rifled, and diſperſed, that this Nation will as ſoon dote, like the Indians, upon glaſſe Beads, as diſturb your Government with whimſies, and freaks of mother-wit; or ſuffer themſelves to be ſtutter'd out of their Liberties. There is not any reaſon why your Grandees, your wiſe men of this Age, that laugh out, and openly, at a Common-wealth, as the moſt ridiculous thing, do not appear to be, as in this regard they are, meer Ideots; but that the People have not Eyes.

There

There remaineth no more appertaining unto the Senate and the People, than

24. Ord. Constitution of the Provincial part of the Senate, and the People.

The Twenty fourth Order, Whereby it is lawfull for the Province of Marpesia to have 30. Knights of their own election continually present in the Senate of Oceana together with 60. Deputies of Horse, and 120. of Foot in the Prerogative Tribe, indued with equall power (respect had unto their quality and number,) in the Debate and result of this Common-wealth: Provided that they Observe the Course or Rotation of the same by the Annuall Return of 10. Knights, 20. Deputyes of the Horse, and 40. of the Foot The like in all respects is lawfull for Panopea and the Horse of both the Provinces amounting unto one Troop, and the Foot unto one Company; one Captain, and one Cornet of the Horse shall be annually chosen by Marpesia; and one Captain and one Ensigne of the Foot shall be annually chosen by Panopea.

Constitution of the Parliament.

The Orb of the Prerogative being thus Compleat is not unnaturally compar'd unto that of the Moon, either in consideration of the Light, borrowed from the Senate as from the Sun; or of the ebbs and floods of the People, which are marked by the Negative or Affirmative of this Tribe. And the Constitution of the Senate and the People being shewn, You have that of the Parliament of Oceana, Consisting of the Senate proposing, and of the People resolving; which amounts unto an Act of Parliament. So the Parliament is the Heart, which consisting of two Ventricles; the one greater and repleniſhed with a grosser store; the other lesse and full of a purer; sucketh in, and gusheth forth the life blood of Oceana by a perpetuall Circulation. Wherefore the life of this Government is no more unnaturall or obnoxious for this, unto dissolution, then that of a Man; Nor unto giddinesse then the World, (seeing the Earth whether it be it self, or the Heavens that are in Rotation, is so farr from being giddy that it could not subsist without the motion.) But why should not this Government be much rather capable of duration and steddinesse by a motion? than which GOD hath ordained no other unto the universall Common-wealth of Mankind: seeing one Generation cometh, & another goeth, but the Earth remaineth firme for ever; that is in her proper Situation or Place, whether shee be moved or not moved upon her proper Center. The Senate the People and the Magistracy, or the Parliament so Constituted (as you have seen) is the Guardian of this Commonwealth, and the Husband of such a Wife as is elegantly described by Solomon. Shee is like the Merchants Ship, Shee bringeth her food from farre. She considereth a Field and buyeth it: with the fruit of her hands Shee Planteth a Vineyard. Shee conceived that her Merchandize is good: Shee stretcheth forth her hands to the poor: Shee is not afraid of the Snow for her Household, for all her household are clothed with Scarlet: Shee maketh her self Coverings of her Tapestry; Her clothing is Silke and Purple; Her Husband is known (by his Robes) in the Gates, when he sitteth amongst the Senators of the Land. The Gates, or inferiour Courts were branches as it were of the Sanhedrim or Senate of Israel. Nor is our Common-wealth a worse housewife, or hath shee lesse regard unto her Magistrates; as may appear by. Prov. 31.

The Twenty fifth Order. That, whereas the Publique Revenue is through the late Civill Warr diminished, the Excise, being improved or improveable to the Revenue of One Million, be applyed for the space of Eleaven yeats to come, unto the reparation of the same, and the present Maintenance of the Magistrates, Knights, Deputies, and other Officers, who according unto their severall Dignities and Functions shall annually receive towards the Support of the same, as followeth: Ord. 25.

The dignity of the Common-wealth, and ayds of the severall Magistracies and Offices thereunto belonging being provided for as aforesaid, the Overplus of the Excize with the Product of the Summe rising shall be carefully managed by the Senate and the People through the diligence of the Officers of the Exchequer, till it amount unto Eight Millions, or to the purchase of about four hundred thousand Pounds solid Revenue. At which time, the terme of eleven yeers being expired, the Excize, (except it be otherwise ordered by the Senate and the people) shall be totally remitted, and abolished for ever.

At this Inſtitution the Taxes (as will better appear in the Corollary) were abated about one half, which made the Order when it came to be taſted, to be of good reliſh with the People in the very beginning; though the Advantages then were no wiſe comparable unto the Conſequences to be hereafter ſhewn. Nevertheleſſe, my Lord Epimonus, who with much ado had been held till now, found it Midſummer Moon, and broke out of Bedlam in this mood,

My Lord Archon,

I Have a ſinging in my head like that of a Cart wheel, my brains are upon a rotation; and ſome are ſo merry, that a man cannot ſpeak his griefs; but if your high-ſhod Prerogative, and thoſe ſame ſlouching Fellowes your Tribunes, do not take my Lord Stratēgus's, and my Lord Orator's heads, and jole them together under the Canopy, then let me be ridiculous unto all Poſterity: For here is a Common-wealth, to which if a man ſhould take that of the Prentices in their ancient adminiſtration of Juſtice at Shrove-tide, it were an Ariſtocratie. You have ſet the very Rabble with Troncheons in their hands, and the Gentry of this Nation like Cocks with ſcarlet gills, and the golden combs of their Salaries to boot, leſt they ſhould not be thrown at.

Not a Night can I ſleep for ſome horrid Apparition or other; One while theſe Myrmidons are meaſuring ſilks

by their quarter-Staves; another ſtuffing their greaſie Poutches with my Lord High-Treaſurer's Jacobus's: For they are above a thouſand in Arms to three hundred, which, their Gowns being pull'd over their ears, are but in their doublets and hoſe. But what do I ſpeak of a Thouſand? there be two thouſand in every Tribe, that is an hundred thouſand in the whole Nation, not only in the Poſture of an Army, but in a Civil capacity ſufficient to give us what Lawes they pleaſe: Now every body knowes, that the lower ſort of People regard nothing but money; and you ſay it is the duty of a Legiſlator to preſume all men to be wicked, wherefore they muſt fall upon the richer, as they are an Army; or leſt their minds ſhould miſgive them in ſuch a villany, you have given them encouragement that they have a neare way, ſeeing it may be done every whit as well by the overballancing Power which they have in Elections. There is a Fair which is annually kept in the Center of theſe Territories at Kiberton, a Town famous for Ale, and frequented by Good-Fellowes; where there is a ſolemnity of the Pipers, and Fidlers of this Nation, I know not whether Lacedemon, where the Senate kept accompt of the ſtops of the Flutes and of the Fiddleſtrings of that Common-wealth, had any ſuch Cuſtom) call'd the Bull-running, and he that catcheth and holdeth the Bull, is the annuall and Supream Magiſtrate of that Comitia, or Congregation, called King-Piper; without whoſe Licence it is not lawfull for any of thoſe Citizens to enjoy the liberty of his Calling; nor is he otherwiſe legitimately qualify'd (or civitate donatus) to lead Apes, or Bears in any Perambulation of the ſame. Mine Hoſt of the Bear, in Kiberton, the father of Ale, and Patron of good Foot-ball and Cudgel-players, hath any time ſince I can remember been Grand-Chancellor of this Order. Now ſay I, ſeeing great things ariſe from ſmall beginnings, what ſhould hinder the People prone to their own advantage, and loving money, from having Intelligence conveyed unto them by this ſame King-Piper & his Chancellor, with their Loyall Subjects the Minſtrills and Bear-wards: Maſters of Ceremonies, unto which there is great recourſe in their reſpective Perambulations, and which they will Commiſſion and inſtruct, with directions unto all the Tribes, willing and commanding them, That as they wish their own goods, they choose none other into the next Primum Mobile, but of the ablest Cudgell and Foot-ball Players: which done as soon as said, your Primum mobile consisting of no other stuffe, must of necessity be drawn forth into your Nebulones, and your Galimofrys, and so the silken Purses of your Senate and Prerogative being made of Sowes-ears, most of them Black-Smiths, they will strike while the Iron is hot, and beat your Estates into Hob-nailes; Mine Host of the Bear being Strategus, and King-Piper Lord Orator. Well, my Lords, it might have been otherwise, expresst, but this is well enough a conscience. In your way, the wit of Man shall not prevent this or the like Inconvenience; but if this, (for I have conferr'd with Artists) be a Mathematical demonstration, I could kneel to you, that ere it be too late we might return unto some kind of Sobriety.

If we empty our Purses with these Pomps, Salaries, Coaches, Lacquays, and Pages, what can the people say lesse, then that we have dresst a Senate and a Prerogative for nothing, but to go unto the Park with the Ladies?

My

My Lord Archon, whose meekneſſe reſembled that of Moſes, vouchſafed this Anſwer:

My Lords,

FOr all this, I can ſee my Lord Epimonus every night in the Park, and with Ladies; nor do I blame this in a young man, or the reſpect which is and ought to be given unto a Sex that is one half of the Common-wealth of mankind, and without which the other would be none; howbeit our Magiſtrates I doubt may be ſomewhat with the oldeſt to perform this part with much acceptation: (and, Servire et non gradire, è coſa da morire.) Wherefore we will lay no certain obligation upon them in this point, but leave them (if it pleaſe you) unto their own fate or diſcretion. But this, for I know my Lord Epimonus loves me, and though I can never get his eſteem, I will ſay, If he had a Miſtreſſe ſhould uſe him ſo, he would find it a faſt life: or I appeal unto your Lordſhips, how I can reſent it from ſuch a friend, that he puts King Piper's Politicks in the ballance with mine. King Piper, I deny not, may teach his Bears to dance, but they have the worſt ear of all creatures; now how he ſhould make them keep time in fifty ſeverall Tribes, and that two years together, for elſe it will be to no purpoſe, may be a ſmall matter with my Lord to promiſe; but it ſeemeth unto me of impoſſible performance: firſt, through the nature of the Beaſts, and ſecondly, through that of the Ballot; or what he hath hath hitherto thought ſo hard, is now come to be eaſie; but he may think, that for expedition they will eat up theſe Balls like Apples; however, there is ſo much more in their way, by the conſtitution of this, than is to be found in that of any other Common-wealth, that I am reconciled; it now appearing plainly, that the points of my Lords arrowes are directed at no other white then to ſhew the excellency of our Government above others; which as he proceeds farther, is yet plainer: while he makes it appear, that that there can be no other elected by the people but Smiths,

Othoniel, Aod, Gideon, Jephtha, Samson, as in Israel: Miltiades, Aristides, Themistocles, Cimon, Pericles, as in Athens. Papyrius, Cincinnatus, Camillus, Fabius, Scipio, as in Rome. Smiths of the fortune of the Common-wealth, not such as forg'd hobnails, but Thunder-bolts. Popular Elections are of that kind, that all the rest of the world is not able either in number or glory to equal those of these three Common-wealths. These indeed were the ablest Cudgel and Foot-ball players; bright Armes were their Cudgels, and the World was the Ball that lay at their Feet. Wherefore we are not so to understand the Maxime of Legislators, which holdeth all men to be wicked, as if it related to mankind or a Common-wealth, the interests whereof are the only streight lines that they have whereby to reform the crooked, but as it relates unto every man or party under what colour soever he or they pretend to be trusted apart, with or by the whole. Hence then it is derived, which is made good in all experience, that the Aristocracy is ravenous, and not the People: Your high-way-men are not such as have Trades, or have been brought up unto industry; but such whose education hath pretended unto that of Gentlemen. My Lord is so honest, he doth not know the Maxims that are of absolute necessity unto the arts of wickedness; for it is most certain, if there be not more purses then Thieves, that the thieves themselves must be forced to turn honest, because they cannot thrive of their Trade: but now if the people should turn thieves, who sees not that there would be more theeves then purses; wherefore that an whole People should turn robbers or Levellers is as impossible in the end as in the means. But that I do not think your Artist mention'd, Astronomer or Arithmetician which he be, can tell me how many barly corns would reach unto the Sun, I could be content he were called unto the account, with which I shall conclude this Point: when by the way I have chidden my Lords the Legislators, who as if they doubted my tackling would not hold, leave me to ſlag in a perpetual calm; but for my Lord Epimonus, who breathes now and then into my ſayles and ſtirs the waters. A Ship maketh not her way ſo briskly, as when ſhe is handſomely bruſhed by the waves, and tumbles over thoſe that ſeem to tumble againſt her; in which caſe I have perceived in the dark, that light hath been ſtricken even out of the Sea, as in this place, where my Lord Epimonus faining to give us a demonſtration of one thing, hath given it of another, and of a better. For the people of this Nation, if they amount in each Tribe unto two thouſand Elders, and two thouſand Youth upon the annual Roll, holding a fifth unto the whole Tribe; then the whole of a Tribe (not accounting women and children) muſt amount unto twenty thouſand; and ſo the whole of all the Tribes, being fifty, unto one million. Now you have ten thouſand Pariſhes, and reckoning theſe one with another, each at one thouſand pounds a year dry rent; the Rent or Revenue of the Nation as it is or might be let to farm, amounteth unto ten millions; and ten millions in revenue divided equally unto one million of men, comes but to ten pounds a year unto each whereupon to maintain himſelf, his Wife and Children. But he that hath a Cow upon the Common, and ernes his ſhilling by the day at his labour, hath twice as much already as this would come unto for his ſhare; becauſe if the Land were thus divided, there would be no body to ſet him on work: my Lord Epimonus's Footman, who coſts him thrice as much as one of theſe could thus get, would loſe by this bargain. What ſhould we ſpeak of thoſe innumerable Trades whereupon men live not only better then others upon good ſhares of Lands, but become alſo purchaſers of greater Eſtates? Is not this the demonſtration which my Lord meant, that the Revenue of Induſtry in a Nation, at the leaſt in this, is three or four-fold greater then that of the meer rent? If the people then obſtruct Induſtry, they obſtruct their own livelihood; but if they make a War, they obſtruct Induſtry.

Take

Take the bread out of the peoples mouthes, as did the Roman Patritians, and you are ſure enough of a War, in which caſe they may be Levellers; but our Agrarian cauſeth their Induſtry to flow with milk and honey. It may be anſwer'd;

(O fortunati nimiùm, bona ſi ſua nôrint Agricolæ)

That this is true, if the people were given to underſtand their own happineſſe; but where do they that? Let me ~~anſwer~~ reply with the like queſtion, Where do they not? They do not know their happineſſe it ſhould ſeem in France, Spain, and Italy: teach them what it is, and try whoſe ſenſe is the truer. But as to the late Wars in Germany, it hath been affirmed unto me there, that the Princes could never make the people to take Arms while they had bread, and have therefore ſuffer'd Countreys now and then to be waſted, that they might get Souldiers: This you will find to be the certain pulſe and temper of the people; and if they have been already proved to be the moſt wiſe and conſtant order of a Government; why ſhould we think, when no man can produce one example of the common Souldiery in an Army, mutinying becauſe they had not Captains pay; that the Prerogative ſhould jole the heads of the Senate together, in regard that theſe have the better Salaries, while it muſt be as obnoxious unto the People in a Nation, as to the Souldiery in an Army, that it is no more poſſible, their emoluments of this kind ſhould be afforded by any Common-wealth in the world to be made equal with thoſe of the Senate, then that the Common Souldiers ſhould be equall with the Captains: it is enough to the common Souldier that his virtue may bring him to be a Captain, and more unto the Prerogative, that each of them is nearer to be a Senator.

If my Lord think our Salaries too great, and that the Common-wealth is not Houſwife enough; whether is it better huſwifery that ſhe ſhould keep her family from the ſnow, or ſuffer them to burn her houſe that they may warm themſelves; for one of theſe wil be; do you think that ſhe came off at a cheaper rate, when men had their rewards by a thouſand, two thouſand pounds a year in Land of Inheritance? If you ſay, that they will be more godly then they have been, it may be ill taken; and if you cannot promiſe that, it is time we find out ſome way of ſtinting at leaſt, if not curing them of that ſame Sacra Fames. On the other ſide, if a poor man (as ſuch an one may ſave a City) give his ſweat unto the publick, with what conſcience can you ſuffer his Family in the mean time to ſterve. But he that layes his hand unto this plough, ſhall not loſe by taking it off from his own: and a Common-wealth that will mend this, ſhall be penny-wiſe. The Sanhedrim of Iſrael being the Supream, and a conſtant Court of Judicature could not chooſe but be exceeding gainful. The Senate of the Bean in Athens, becauſe it was but annual, was moderately ſalariated, but that of the Areopagites being for life bountifully; which advantages the Senators of Lacedemon had, where there was little mony or uſe of it, was in honour for life. The Patricians having no profit took all; Venice being a ſituation, where a man goes but to the door for his imployment, the honour is great, and the reward very little; but in Holland a Counſellour of State hath fifteen hundred Flemiſh pounds a year, beſides other accommodations. The States General have more. And that Common-wealth looketh nearer her penny, then ours need to do.

For the Revenue of this Nation, beſides that of her induſtry, it amounts, as hath been ſhewn, unto ten millions, and the Salaries in the whole, come not unto three hundred thouſand pounds a pear; the beauty they will adde unto the Common-wealth will be exceeding great, and the people delight in the beauty of their Common-wealth, the encouragement they will give unto the ſtudy of the publick very profitable, the accommodation they will afford unto your Magiſtrates, very honourable and eaſie. And the ſum, when it or twice as much much was ſpent in hunting and houſe-keeping, was never any grievance unto the people. I am aſhamed, to ſtand huckſing upon this point; it is ſordid. Your Magiſtrates are rather to be provided with farther accommodations. For what if there ſhould be ſickneſſe? whither will you have them to remove? and this City in the ſoundeſt times, for the heat of the year, is no wholſome abode: have a care of their healths unto whom you commit your own. I would have the Senate and the People, except they ſee cauſe to the contrary; every firſt of June, to remove into the Country ayr, for the ſpace of three moneths: you are better fitted with Summer houſes for them, then if you had built them to that purpoſe; there is ſome twelve miles diſtant the Convallium upon the River Halcionia, for the Tribunes and the Prerogative, a Palace capable of a thouſand men; and at twenty miles diſtant you have Mount Celia, reverend as well for the antiquity as ſtate of a Caſtle, compleatly capable of the Senate, the Propoſers having lodgings in the Convallium, and the Tribunes in Celia; it holds the correſpondence between the Senate and the People exactly. And it is a ſmall matter for the Propoſers, being attended with the Coaches and Officers of State, beſides other conveniences of their own, to go a matter of five or ten miles (thoſe Seats are not much farther diſtant) to meet the people upon any Heath or Field that ſhall be appointed: where having diſpatched their buſineſſe, they may hunt their own Venizon, (for I would have the great walled Park upon the Halcionia to belong to the Signory, and thoſe about the Convallium unto the Tribunes) and ſo go to ſupper. Pray my Lords, ſee that they do not pull down theſe houſes to ſell the lead of them; for when you have conſider'd on it, they cannot be ſpared. The founders of the School in Hiera, provided that the boyes ſhould have a Summer ſeat. You ſhould have as much care of theſe Magiſtrates. But there is ſuch a ſelling, ſuch a Jewiſh humour in our Republicans, that I cannot tell what to ſay to it; onely this, any man that knowes what belongs to a Common-wealth, or how diligent every Nation in that caſe hath been, to preſerve her ornaments, and ſhall ſee waſte lately made, the Woods adjoyning unto this City which ſerved for the delight and health of it, cut down to be ſold for three pence; will tell you, that they who did ſuch things would never have made a Common-wealth: The like may be ſaid of the ruine or damage done upon our Cathedrals, ornaments in which this Nation excels all others: nor ſhall this ever be excuſed upon the ſcore of Religion; for though true it be, that God dwelleth not in houſes made with hands, yet you cannot hold your Aſſemblies but in ſuch houſes, and theſe are of the beſt that have been made with hands. Nor is it well argued that they are pompous, and therefore prophane, or leſſe proper for Divine ſervice, ſeeing that the Chriſtians in the Primitive Church choſe to meet with one accord in the Temple; ſo far were they from any inclination to pull it down.

The Orders of this Common-wealth, ſo far, or near ſo far forth, as they concern the Elders, together with the ſeverall Speeches at the Inſtitution, which may ſerve unto the better underſtanding of them as ſo many Commentaries, being ſhewn; I ſhould now come from the Elders unto the Youth, or from the Civil Conſtitution of this Government unto the Military, but that I judge this the fitteſt place; whereinto by the way to inſert the Government of the City, though for the preſent but perfunctorily.

THe Metropolis or Capitall City of Oceana is commonly called Emporium, though it consist of two Cities distinct, as well in name as in Government, whereof the other is called Hiera: For which cause I shall treat of each apart, beginning with Emporium. The Government of Emporium.

Emporium with the Liberties, is under a twofold division, the one regarding the Nationall and the other the Urbane or City Government; it is divided in regard of the Nationall Government into three Tribes, and in respect of the Urbane into Twenty six, which for distinction sake are called Wards, being contained under the three Tribes but unequally, wherefore the first Tribe containing ten Wards is called Scazon, the second containing eight Metoche, and the third containing as many, Telicouta: the bearing of which names in mind concernes the better understanding of the Government. The City Tribes and Wards.

Every Ward, hath her Wardmot, Court or Inquest, consisting of all that are of the clothing or Liveries of Companies, residing within the same. Wardmot.

Such are of the Livery or Clothing as have attained unto the dignity to weare Gowns and Particolour'd Hoods or Tipets according unto the Rules, and ancient Customes of their respective Companies. The Liveries.

A Company is a Brotherhood of Tradesmen, professing the same Art, governed, according unto their Charter, by a Master and Wardens: Of these there be a matter of sixty, whereof twelve are of greater dignity then the rest, that is to say the Merters, Grocers, Drapers, Fishmongers, Gold-Smiths, Skinners, Merchant-Taylors, Haberdashers, Salters, Ironmongers, Vinters, Cloth-workers, which with most of the rest have common Halls, divers of them being of antient and magnificent Structure, wherein they have frequent meetings at the summons of their Masters, or Wardens, for the managing and regulation of their respective Trades and Mysteries. These Companies, as I shall shew, are the roots of the whole Government of the City, for the Liveries that reside in the same Ward, meeting at the Wardmot inquest, unto which it belongeth to take cognizance of all sorts of misdemeanes, and violations of the customs and Orders of the City, and to present them unto the Court of Aldermen; have also power to make election of two sorts of Magistrates or Officers; the first of Elders or Aldermen of the Ward, the second of Deputies of the same, otherwise called Common-Council men. The Companies. Common Halls. Election of Aldermen and of the Common Council men.

The Wards in these Elections, because they do not elect all at once, but some one yeare, and some another, observe the distinction of the three Tribes; for example, the Scazon consisting of ten Tribes, maketh maketh election the first yeare of ten Aldermen, one in each Ward, and of one hundred and fifty Deputies, fifteene in each Ward: all which are Triennial Magistrates or Officers, that is to say, are to beare their dignity for the space of three years.

The second year, the Metoche, consisting of eight Wards electeth eight Aldermen, one in each Ward; and an hundred and twenty Deputies, fifteen in each Ward; being also Trienniall Magistrates.

The third yeare Telicouta, consisting of a like number of Wards, electeth an equall number of like Magistrates for a like terme: So that the whole number of the Aldermen, according unto that of the Wards, amounteth unto twenty-six; and the whole number of the Deputies, unto three hundred and ninety.

The Court of Aldermen.

The Aldermen thus elected have divers capacities; for first, they are Justices of the Peace, for the term, and by consequence of their election; secondly, they are Presidents of the Wardmot, and Governours, each of that Ward, whereby he was elected; and last of all these Magistrates being assembled together, constitute the Senate of the Citty, otherwise called the Court of Aldermen: but no man is capable of this election, that is not worth ten thousand pounds: this Court upon every new Election maketh choice of Censors out of their own number.

The Common-Councill.

The Deputies in like manner being assembled together, constitute the Prerogative Tribe of the City; otherwise called, the Common-Councill; by which meanes the Senate and the People of the City were caught in as it were by the rapture of the Nationall Government, to the same wheele of annuall, trienniall, and perpetuall revolution.

The Common-Hall.

The Election of the Lord Maior and Sheriffs.

The Common-Hall hath right of two other elections; the one of the Lord Mayor, and the other of the two Sheriffs being annuall Magistrates. The Lord Major can be elected out of no other then one of the twelve Companies of the first ranks, and the Common-Hall agreeeth by the plurality of Suffrages upon two names; which being presented unto the Lord Mayor, for the time being, and the Court of Aldermen: they elect one by their scruteny, for so they call it, though it differ from that of the Common-wealth: The Orator or Assistant unto the Lord Major in the holding of his Courts is some able Lawyer elected by the Court of Aldermen, and called the Recorder of Emporium.

The

The Lord Major being thus elected, hath two capacities; the one regarding the Nation, the other the City: in that which regards the City, he is Preſident of the Court of Aldermen, having power to aſſemble the ſame, or any other Council of the City, as the Common-Councill or Common-Hall, at his will and pleaſure; and in that which regards the Nation, he is Commander in Cheif, of the three Tribes, whereinto the City is divided; one of which he is to bring up in perſon at the Nationall Muſter unto the Ballot; as his Vice Comites, or High-Sheriffs, are to do by the other two, each at their diſtinct partition, where the nine Aldermen elected Cenſors, are to officiate by three in each Tribe, according unto the Rules and Orders already given unto the Cenſors, of the ruſtick Tribes: And the Tribes of the City have no other then one common Phylarch, which is the Court of Aldermen, and the Common-Councill; for which cauſe they elect not at their muſter the firſt Liſte called the Prime Magnitude.

The Conveniences of this alteration of the City Government, beſides the bent of it unto conformity with that of the Nation, were many; whereof I ſhall mention but a few, at firſt, whereas men under the former adminiſtration, when the burden of ſome of theſe Magiſtracyes, lay for life, were oftentimes choſen not for their fitneſſe, but rather unfitneſſe, or at leaſt unwillingneſſe to undergo ſuch a weight, whereby they were put at great rates to fine for their eaſe; a man might now take his ſhare in Magiſtracy, with that equity which is due unto the publick, and without any great inconvenience unto his private affaires. Secondly, whereas the City, in as much as the Acts of the Ariſtocracy or Court of Aldermen in their former way of proceeding, were rather Impoſitions, then Propoſitions, was frequently diſquieted, with the inevitable conſequence, in the power of debate exerciſed by the popular part or Common Councill; the right of debate being hence forth eſtabliſhed in the Court of Aldermen and that of reſult in the Common Councill, killed the branches of diviſion in the root, which for the preſent may ſuffice to have been ſaid of the City of Emporium.

That of Hiera conſiſteth as to the Nationall Government of two Tribes, the firſt called Agoræa, the ſecond Propola: but as to the peculiar Policy of twelve Maniples, or Wards divided into three cohorts each cohort containing four Wards, whereof the Wards of the firſt cohort elect for the firſt yeare four Burgeſſes, one in each ward; the wards of the ſecond cohort, for the ſecond yeare four Burgeſſes, one in each Ward; and the wards of the third cohort for the third yeare foure Burgeſſes, one in each ward; all trienniall Magiſtrates: by which the twelve Burgeſſes, making one Court for the Government of this City, according unto their inſtructions by act of Parliament, fall likewiſe into an anaual, triennial, and perpetuall revolution.

This

The High Steward.

This Court being thus constituted, maketh election of diverse Magistrates; as first of an High Steward, who is commonly some person of quality, and this Magistracy is elected in the Senate by the scrutiny of this Court; unto him they choose some able Lawyer to be his Deputy, and to hold the Court; and last of all they elect out of their own number six Censors.

The High Steward is Commander in Chief, of the two Tribes, whereof he in person bringeth up the one at the Nationall Muster unto the Ballot, and his Deputy the other, at a distinct pavilion; the six Censors chosen by the Court officiating by three in each Tribe at the Urnes, and these Tribes, have no other Phylarch, but this Court.

As for the manner of elections, and suffrage both in Emporium and Hiera, it may be said once for all, that they are performed by the Ballott, and according unto the respective rules already given.

There be other Cities and Corporations throughout the territory, whose Policy being much of this kind, would be tedious and not worth the labour to insert, nor dare I stay. Juvenum manus emicat ardens.

I returne with the method of the Common-wealth, unto the remaining part of her Orbes which are military and provinciall; the military except the Strategus, and the Polemarchs or feild Officers consisting of the youth only, and the Provinciall consisting of a mixture, both of the Elders and of the Youth.

To begin with the Youth, or the military Orbes, they are Circles unto which the Common-wealth must have a Care to keep close; A man is a Spirit raised up by the Magick of Nature; if she doe not stand safe, and so that she may set him to some good and usefull work, he spets fire, and blowes up Castles; for where there is life, there must be motion or work and the work of idlenesse is mischiefe, (Non omnibus dormit) But the work of industry is health. To set men unto this, the Common-wealth must begin early with them, or it will be too late: and the meanes whereby she sets them unto it, is education; the Plastick art of government. But it is as frequent as sad in experience, whether through negligence, or which in the consequence is all one, or worse, overfondnesse in domestick performance of this Duty, that innumerable Children come to owe their utter Perdition unto their own Parents; in each of which, the Commonwealth loseth a Citizen; Wherefore the Lawes of a Government how wholesome-soever in themselves, being such as if men by a congruity in their Education be not brought up to find a relish in them, they

they will ſpit at: The education of a mans Children is not wholly to be committed or truſted unto himſelf. You find in Livy the Children of Brutus, having been bred under Monarchy, make faces at the Common-wealth of Rome, A King (ſay they) is a Man, you may prevaile with him when you have need there ſhould be Law, or when you have need there ſhould be no Law. He hath favours in the right, and he frowns not in the wrong place; he knowes his friends from his Enemies. But Lawes are deafe inexorable things, ſuch as make no difference between a Gentlemen and an ordinary fellow; a Man can never be merry for them, for to truſt altogether to his own innocence is a ſad Life: unhappy wantons! Scipio (on the other ſide) when he was but a Boy (ſome two or three and twenty) being informed that certaine Patricians, or Roman Gentlemen, through a qualme upon the defeate which Hanibal had given them at Canna, were laying their heads together and contriving their Flight with the tranſportation of their goods out of Rome; drew his ſword and ſetting himſelf at the doore of the Chamber where they were at Council, proteſted, That who did not immediately ſweare, not to deſert the Common-wealth he would make his Soul to deſert his Body. Let men argue as they pleaſe for Monarchy, or againſt a Commonwealth, the world ſhall never ſee any man ſo ſottiſh or wicked as (in cool blood) to preferre the education of the Sons of Brutus, before that of Scipio; and of this mould, except a Melius or a Manlius was the whole youth of that Commonwealth though not ordinarily ſo well caſt. Now the health of a Government, and the education of the youth being of the ſame pulſe, no wonder if it have been the conſtant practize of well order'd Commonwealths to commit the Care and feeling of it unto publique Magiſtrates. A duty that was performed in ſuch manner by the Areopagites, as is elegantly praiſed by Iſocrates. The Athenians, ſaith he, write not their Lawes upon dead Walls, nor content themſelves with having ordained puniſhments for Crimes, but provide in ſuch manner by the education of their youth, that there be no Crimes for puniſhment: he ſpeakes of thoſe Lawes which reguarded manners, not of thoſe orders which concerned the adminiſtration of the Commonwealth, leaſt you ſhould think he contradicts Xenophon and Polibius. The Children of Lacedemon, at the ſeaventh yeare of their Age, were delivered unto the pædonomi, School-Maſters, not Mercenary but Magiſtrates of the Commonwealth, unto which they were accomptable for their charge: by theſe at the age of fourteen they were preferr'd unto other Magiſtrates called the Beidiei, having the inſpection of the Games, and exerciſes, among which that of the Platiniſta was famous, a kind of Fight in ſquadrons, but ſome-

what too fierce; when they came to be of military age, they were lifted of the Mora, and ſo continued in readineſſe for publique Service under the Diſcipline of the Polemarches. But the Roman Education and Diſcipline by the Centuryes and Claſſes, is that unto which the Commonwealth of Oceana hath had a more concerned eye in her three Eſſays, being certain degrees by which the youth commence as it were in Armes for Magiſtracy, as appeares by

2 C. Ord. The Twenty Sixth Order, inſtituting that if a Parent have but one Sonne, the Education of that one Sonne ſhall be wholly at the diſpoſing of that Parent, but (whereas there be Free-Schools erected and indow'd, or to be erected and indow'd in every Tribe of this Nation, to a ſufficient proportion for the Education of the Children of the ſame; which Schooles, to the end that there be no detriment or diverſance unto the Schollers upon caſe of removeing from one unto another, are every of them to be Governed by the ſtrict inſpection of the Cenſors of the Tribes, both upon the School-Maſters their manner of life and teaching, and the Proficiency of the Children; after the Rules and method of that in Hiera). If a Parent have more Sons then one, the Cenſors of the Tribes ſhall animadvert upon and puniſh him that ſendeth not his Sons within the ninth yeare of their age unto ſome one of the Schooles of a Tribe, there to be kept and taught if he be able at his Charges, and if he be not able, Gratis till they arrive at the age of fifteen yeares. And a Parent may diſpoſe of his Sons at the fifteenth yeare of their age, according unto his choice or ability, whether it be unto Service in the way of Apprentices unto ſome Trade, or otherwiſe, or unto farther ſtudy, as by ſending them unto the Inns of Court, of Chancery, or unto one of the Univerſities of this Nation; but he that taketh not upon him ſome one of the Profeſſions proper unto ſome one of thoſe places, ſhall not continue longer in any of them till they have attained unto the age of eighteen yeares; and every man having not at that age of 18. yeares taken upon him or addicted himſelfe unto the profeſſion of the Law, Theology, or Phyſick, and being no Servant, ſhall be capable of the Eſſays of the youth, and no other Perſon whatſoever; except a man having taken upon him ſuch a Profeſſion, happen to lay it by, ere he arrive at three or four and twenty yeares of age, and be admitted unto this Capacity by the reſpective Phylarch, being ſatisfyed that he kept

not out so long with any designe to evade the service of the Commonwealth, but that being no sooner at his own disposing it was no sooner at his own choice to come in. And if any Youth or other Person of this Nation have a desire to travell into Forraigne Countries upon occasion of businesse, delight, or further improvement of his Education; the same shall be lawfull for him upon a passe obtained from the Censors in Parliament, putting a convenient limit unto the time, and recommending him unto the Embassadours by whom he shall be assisted, and unto whom he shall yield honour and obedience in their respective residences. Every Youth at his returne from his travell, is to present the Censors with a Paper, of his own writing, containing the interest of State or forme of Government of the Countries or some one of the Countries where he hath been; and if it be good, the Censors shall cause it to be printed and published, prefixing a Line in Commendation of the Author.

Every Wednesday next ensuing the last of December, the whole Youth of every Parish, that is to say every man (not excepted by the foregoing part of the Order) being from eighteen yeares of age to 30. shall repaire at the sound of the Bell unto the respective Church, and being there assembled in presence of the overseers, who are to governe the Ballot, and the Constable who is to officiate at the Urne, shall after the manner of the Elders, elect every fifth man of their whole number, (provided that they chuse not above one of two Brothers at one Election, nor above halfe if they be some or upward) to be a Stratiot or Deputy of the Youth; And the list of the Stratiots so elected being taken by the overseers shall be entred in the Parish Book, and diligently preserved as a record, called the first Essay. They whose estates by the Law are able, or whose Friends are willing to mount them, shall be of the Horse, the rest are of the Foot. And he who hath been one yeare of this list is not capable of being re-elected till after one years interball.

Every Wednesday next ensuing the last of January, the Stratiots being Mustred at the Rendevous of their respective hundred, shall in the presence of the Jury-men, who are overseers of that Ballot, and of the High-Constable who is to officiate at the Urne, elect out of the Horse of their Troop, or Company one Captain, and one Ensigne or Cornet, unto the Command of the same; And the Jury-men having entered the List of the Hundred into a Record to be diligently kept at the Rendevouz of the same; the first publique Game of this Common-wealth shall begin and be performed in this manner. Whereas there is to be at every Rendevouz of an Hundred, one Cannon, Culverin, or Sakre; The prize Armes, being forged by sworne Armorours of this Common-wealth, and for their proof, besides their beauty, viewd and tryed at the Tower of Emporium, shall be exposed, by the Justice of Peace appertayning unto that Hundred; the said Justice, with the Jury-men being Judge of the Game: And the Judges shall deliver unto the Horse-man that gaines the Prize at the carrier, one suite of Armes being of the value of twenty pounds. Unto the Pikeman that gaines the Prize at throwing the Bullet, one suit of Armes of the value of ten pounds. Unto the Pasquetter that gaines the Prize at the Pack with his Pasquet, one suite of Armes of the value of ten pounds; And unto the Canoneer that gaines the Prize at the Parke with the Cannon, Culverin, or Sakre, one Chaine of Silver being of the value of ten pounds. Provided, that no one Man at the same Muster play above one of the Prizes. Whosoever gaineth a Prize is bound to weare it (if it be his lot) upon Service, and no man shall sell, or give away an Armour thus won, except he have lawfully attained unto two or more of them, at the Games.

The Games being ended, and the Muster dismist, the Captaine of the Troop, or Company shall repaire with a Copy of the Role unto the Lord Lieutenant of the Tribe, and the High-Constable with a Duplicate of the same unto the Custos Rotulorum, or Muster-Master-Generall, to be also communicated with the Censors, in each of which the Jury-men giving a note upon every name of an only Son shall certifie that the Role is without subterfuge of evasion; or, if it be not, upon whom the evasion or subterfuge lyeth, unto the end that the Phylarch or the Censors may animadvert accordingly.

And every Wednesday next ensuing the last of February, the Lord Lieutenant, Custos Rotulorum, the Censors and the Conductor shall receive the whole Muster of the Youth of that Tribe at the Rendevouz of the same, distributing the Horse and Foot with their Divisions, according unto the Directions given in the like case for the distribution of the Elders, and the whole Squadron being put by that meanes in Battalia; the second Game of this Common-wealth shall begin, by the exercise of the Youth in all the parts of their military discipline according unto the Orders of Parliament, or direction of the Council of Warr in that Case: And the hundred pounds allowed by the Parliament for the ornaments of the Muster in every Tribe, shall be expended by the Phylarch, upon such artificiall Castles, Citadels, or like devices, as may make the best and most profitable sport for the Youth and their spectators. Which being ended, the Centons having prepared the Urnes by putting into the Horse Urne, 2000. Gold Balls, whereof ten are to be marked with the Letter M. and ten with the Letter P. Into the Foot Urne, 1000. Gold Balls, whereof 500. are to be marked with the Letter M. and 500. with the Letter P. and made up the Gold Balls in each Urne by the addition of Silver Balls unto the same, in number equall to the Horse and Foot of the Stratiots: the Lord Lieutenant shall call the Stratiots unto the Urnes, where they that draw the Silver Balls shall returne unto their Places; and they that draw the Gold Balls shall fall off to the pavilion, where, for the space of one houre they may choppe and change their Balls according as one can agree with another, whose Lot he likes better; but the houre being out the consuls reperating them, whose Gold Balls have no letter, from those whose Balls are marked, shall cause the Cryer to call the Alphabet, as first A. whereupon all they whose Gold Balls are not marked, and whose surnames begin with the Letter A. shall repaire unto a Clerk appertayning unto the Custos Rotulorum, who shall first take the names of that Letter: then those of B. and so forth, till all the names be Alphabetically enrolled, and the Youth of this List being fly hundred in a Tribe Foot, that is 30000. Foot in all the Tribes, and two hundred in a Tribe Horse, that is 10000. Horse in all the Tribes, are the second Essay of the Stratiots and the standing Army of this Commonwealth to be alwaies ready upon Command to march. They whose Balls are marked with M. amounting by 20 Horse, and 50. Foot in a Tribe unto 2500 Foot and 500 Horse in all the Tribes; And they whose Balls are marked with P. in every point correspondent are parts of the third Essay, they of M. bring together to muster for Pharsalia and they of P. for Pharnapon, to the ends here according to the further directions following in the order for the Probationer Tribe.

If the Polemarchs, or Field Officers be elected by the Decurions of the Council of War, and the Strategus Commanded by the Parliament, or the dictator for a month, the Lords Lieutenants (who have power to Muster and Discipline the Youth to attain as they receive Orders for the same from the Council of War) are to deliver the second Essay, or so many of them as shall be Commanded unto the Centurions, who shall present them unto the Lord Strategus at the time and place appointed by his Excellency to be the Generall Rendevous devouze of Oceana where the Council of Warr shall have the accommodation of Horses and Armes for his men in readineſſe, and the Lord Strategus, having armed, mounted, and diſtributed them, whether according unto the recommendation of their Prize Armes or otherwiſe; ſhall lead them away unto his Shipping, being alſo ready, and provided with Victualls, Ammunition, Artigliery, and all other neceſſarys, commanding them, and diſpoſing of the whole conduct of the Warr by his ſole power and authority: and this is the third Eſſay of the Stratiots, which being Shipp'd, or march'd out of their Tribes, the Lords Lieutenants ſhall re-elect the ſecond Eſſay out of the remaining part of the firſt; and the Senate another Strategus.

If any veterane or veteranes of this Nation, the terme of whoſe Youth, or militia is expired, having a deſire to be entertained in the further ſervice of the Commonwealth ſhall preſent him or themſelves at the Rendevouz of Oceana, unto the Strategus, it is in his power to take on ſuch and ſo many of them as ſhall be conſented unto by the Polemarchs, and to ſend back an equall number of the Stratiots.

And for the better managing of the proper Forces of this Nation the Lord Strategus by appointment of the Council of Warr, and out of ſuch Levies as they ſhall have made in either or both of the Provinces, unto that end, ſhall receive Auxiliarys at Sea, or elſewhere at ſome certaine place, not exceeding his proper Armes, in number.

And whoſoever ſhall refuſe any one of his three Eſſays, except upon cauſe ſhewn he be diſpenſed withall by the Phylarch, or if the Phylarch be not aſſembled, by the Cenſors of his Tribe, ſhall be deemed an Helot or publique Servant, pay one fifth of his yearely revenue beſides all other Taxes unto the Commonwealth for his Protection, and be incapable of bearing Magiſtracy except ſuch as is proper to the Law. Nevertheleſſe if a man have but two Sons, the Lord Lieutenant ſhall not ſuffer above one of them to come unto the Urne at one election of the ſecond Eſſay: and though he have above two Sons, there ſhall not come above halfe the Brothers at one Election; and if a man have but one Son he ſhall not come unto the Urne at all without the conſent of his Parents, or his Guardians nor ſhall it be any reproach unto him, or impediment unto his bearing of Magiſtracy.

This for Expeditions that are Forraigne will be proved, and explained together with

The Twenty Seaventh Order, Providing in case of invasion apprehended, that the Lords High-Sheriffs of the Tribes upon Commands received from the Parliament, or the Dictator, distribute the bands of the Elders into divisions after the nature of the Essayes of the Youth, and that the second division or Essay of the Elders being made and consisting of 30000 Foot, and 10000 Horse be ready to march with the second Essay of the Youth, and be brought also by the Conductors unto the Strategus. 27. Ord.

The second Essay of the Elders and Youth being marcht out of their Tribes, the Lords High-Sheriffs and Lieutenants shall have the remayning part of the annuall Bands, both of Elders and Youth in readinesse, which if the Beacons be fired, shall march unto the Rendevous to be in that case appointed by the Parliament or the Dictator, and the Beacons being fired, the Curiatæ Comitia or Parochiall Congregations shall elect a fourth, both of Elders and Youth to be immediately upon the Guard of the Tribes, and dividing themselves as aforesaid to march also in their divisions according unto Orders which method in case of extremity shall proceed unto the election of a third, or the leavy of a second, or of the last man in the Nation, by the power of the Lords High-Sheriffs, to the end that the Commonwealth in her utmost pressure may shew her trust that God in his justice will remember mercy, by humbling her selfe, and yet preserving her courage, discipline and constancy, even unto the last drop of her blood, and the utmost farthing.

The Services performed by the youth, or by the Elders in case of Invasion, and according unto this Order, shall be at their proper cost and charges that are any wayes able to endure it, but if there be such as are known in their Parishes to be so indigent that they cannot march out of their Tribes, nor undergoe the burden, in this case incumbent, the Congregations of their Parishes shall furnish them with sufficient summes of money to be repayd upon the Certificate of the same by the Parliament when the action shall be over. And of that which is respectively enjoyn'd by this Order, any Tribe, Parish, Magistrate, or Person that shall faile, is to answer for it at the Council of Warr, as a Deserter of his Country.

The

The Archon being the greateſt Captain of his, (if not of any) Age, added much unto the Glory of this Common-wealth, by interweaving the Militia with more Art and Luſtre then any Legiſlator from, or before, the time of Servius Tullius. But as the bones or Skeleton of a man, though the greateſt part of his beauty be contained in their proportion or ſymmetry, yet ſhewn without fleſh, are a ſpectacle that is rather horrid; ſo without Diſcourſes, the Orders of a Common-wealth; which if ſhe go forth in that manner, may complain of her friends that they ſtand mute, and ſtaring upon her. Wherefore this Order was thus fleſhed by the Archon:

My Lords,

Diogenes, ſeeing a young Fellow drunk, told him that his Father was drunk when he begot him: For this in natural, I muſt confeſſe I ſee no reaſon; but in Political Generation, it is right. The Vices of the People are from their Governours. Thoſe of their Governours, from their Lawes or Orders; and thoſe of their Lawes or Orders, from their Legiſlators. (Ut malè poſuimus initia, ſic cætera ſequuntur;) What ever was in the womb imperfect as to her proper work, comes very rarely, or not at all to perfection: And the formation of a Citizen in the Womb of the Common-wealth, is his Education. Cicero.

Education by the firſt of the foregoing Orders is of Six kinds; At the School, in the Mechannicks, at the Univerſities, at the Innes of Court or Chancery, in Travels, and in Military Diſcipline: Some of which I ſhall touch, and ſome I ſhall handle.

That which is propoſed for the erecting, and endowing of Schools throughout the Tribes capable of all the Children of the ſame, and able to give unto the Poor the Education of theirs Gratis, is only matter of direction in a caſe of very great Charity, as eaſing the needy of the Charge of their Children from the Ninth to the Fifteenth year of their Age; during which time their work cannot be profitable, and reſtoring them them when they may be of use, furnished with tooles, whereof there be advantages to be made in every work, seeing he that can read, and use his pen, hath some convenience by it in the meanest Vocation; and it cannot be conceived, but that which comes (though in small parcels) to the advantage of every Man in his Vocation, must amount unto the advantage of every Vocation; and so unto that of the Common-wealth: Wherefore this is commended unto the Charity of every wise-hearted, and well-minded man to be done in time; and as GOD shall stir him up or inable him: there being such provision already in the Case, as may give us leave to proceed without obstruction.

Parents (under animadversion of the Censors) are to dispose of their Children at the fifteenth year of their Age unto something; but what, is left, according to their abilities or inclination, in their own Choice: This, with the Many, must be unto the Mechanicks, that is to say, unto Agriculture or Husbandry; unto Manufactures; or unto Merchandize.

Agriculture is the Bread of the Nation, we are hung upon it by the teeth; it is a mighty Nursery of Strength, the best Army, and the most assured Knapsack; it is managed with the least turbulent or ambitious, and the most innocent hands of all other Arts. Wherefore I am of Aristotle's opinion, That a Common-wealth of Husband-men (and such is ours) must be the best of all others. Certainly, my Lords, you have no measure of what ought to be, but what can be done for the encouragement of this Profession; I could wish I were Husband good enough to direct something to this end; but racking of Rents is a vile thing in the richer sort, an uncharitable one to the poorer; a mark of slavery, and nips your Common-wealth in the fairest Blossom: On the other side, if there should be too much ease given in this kind, it would occasion Sloath, and so destroy Industry the nerve of a Commonwealth. But if ought might be done to hold the ballance even between these two, it would be a Work in this Nation equall

In Manufactures and Merchandize the Hollander hath gotten the ſtart of us; but at the long-run it will be found, that a People Working upon a Forraign Commodity, doth but farm the Manufacture, and that it is entailed upon them only, where the growth of it is native: As alſo that it is one thing to have the Carriage of other mens Goods, and another for a man to bring his own unto the beſt market. Wherefore Nature having provided encouragement for theſe Arts in this Nation above others, where the people growing, they of neceſſity muſt alſo increaſe, it cannot but eſtabliſh them upon a far more ſure and effectual Foundation then that of the Hollanders. But theſe Educations are in order unto the firſt things or neceſſities of nature; as Husbandry unto the Food; Manufacture unto the Clothing; and Merchandize unto the Purſe of the Common-wealth.

Cicero.

There be other things in Nature, which being ſecond as to their Order, for their dignity and value are firſt, and ſuch to which the other are but Accommodations; of this ſort are eſpecially theſe, Religion, Juſtice, Courage, Wiſdome.

The Education that anſwers unto Religion in our Government is that of the Univerſities. Moſes the Divine Legiſlator was not only learned in all the Learning of the Egyptians, but took into the Fabrick of his Common-wealth the Learning of the Midianites in the advice of Jethro: and his Foundation of an Univerſity laid in the Tabernacle, and finiſht in the Temple, became that Pinacle from whence all the Learning in the World hath taken wing; as the Philoſophy of the Stoicks, from the Phariſees; that of the Epicureans, from the Sadducees; and from the Learning of the Jews, ſo often quoted by our Saviour, and fulfilled in Him, the Chriſtian Religion. Athens was the moſt famous Univerſity in her dayes and her Senators, that is to ſay, the Areopagites were all Philoſophers.

Lacedemon (to ſpeak truth) though ſhe could write and read, was not very bookiſh. But who diſputeth hence againſt Univerſities, diſputeth in the ſame Argument againſt Agriculture, Manufacture, and Merchandize, every one of theſe having been equally forbidden by Lycurgus, not for it ſelf, (for if he had not been Learned in all the Learning of Crete, and well travell'd in the knowledge of other Governments, he had never made his Common-wealth) but for the diverſion which they muſt have given his Citizens from their Arms, who being but few, if they had minded any thing elſe, muſt have deſerted the Common-wealth. For Rome, ſhe (had ingenium par imperio) was as Learned as Great, and held her Colledge of Augurs in much reverence. Venice hath taken her Religion upon truſt: Holland, cannot tend it to be very ſtudious: Nor doth Switz mind it much; yet are they all addicted unto their Univerſities. We cut down Trees to build Houſes, but I would have ſome body ſhew me, by what reaſon or experience, the cutting down of an Univerſity, ſhould tend unto the ſetting up of a Common-wealth. Of this I am ſure, the perfection of a Common-wealth is not to be attained unto without the knowledge of ancient Prudence; nor the knowledge of ancient prudence without Learning; nor Learning without Schools of good Literature; and theſe are ſuch as we call Univerſities. Now though meer Univerſity-Learning of it ſelf, be that which (to ſpeak the words of Verulamius) Crafty men contemn, and ſimple men onely admire, yet is it ſuch as wiſe men have uſe of; for Studies do not teach their own uſe, but that is a wiſdome without, and above them, won by obſervation. Expert men may execute, and perhaps judge of particulars one by one; but the general Counſels and the plots, and the marſhalling of affairs, come beſt from thoſe that are learned. Wherefore if you would have your children to be Stateſmen, let them drink by all means of theſe Fountains, where perhaps there was never any. But what though the water a man drinks be not nouriſhment? it is the vehiculum without which he cannot be nouriſhed. Nor is Religion leſſe concerned in this point than Government; For take away your Universities, and in a few years you lose it.

The Holy Scriptures are written in Hebrew and in Greek, they that have neither of these Languages may think light of both; But find me a man that hath one in perfection, the study of whose whole Life it hath not been. Again, this is apparent to us in daily Conversation, that if four of five Persons that have lived together be talking, another speaking the same Language may come in, and yet understand very little of their Discourse, in that it relateth unto Circumstances, Persons, Things, Times and Places which he knoweth not. It is no otherwise with a Man, having no insight of the times in which they were written, and the Circumstances unto which they relate, in the reading of ancient Books, whether they be Divine or humane. For example, when we fall upon the discourse about Baptisme and Regeneration, that was between our Saviour and Nicodemus, where Christ reproacheth him of his ignorance in this manner: Art thou a Doctor in Israel, and understandest not these things? What shall we think of it? or, Wherefore should a Doctor in Israel have understood these things more then another, but that both Baptisme and Regeneration (as was shewed at large by my Lord Phosphorus) were Doctrines held in Israel? Instance in one place of a hundreds, which he that hath not mastered the circumstances unto which they relate, cannot understand. Wherefore to the understanding of the Scripture, it is necessary to have ancient Languages, and the knowledge of ancient times, or the ayd of them who have such knowledg, and to have such as may be alwaies able and ready to give such ayd, (unlesse you would borrow it of another Nation, which would not only be base, but deceitfull) it is necessary unto a Common-wealth that she have Schools of good Literature, or Universities of her own. We are Commanded (as hath been said more then once) to search the Scriptures; And whether do they search the Scriptures that take this pains in ancient Languages and Learning, or they that will not, but trusting unto Translations onely, and to words as they sound to present Circumstances, about which nothing is more fallible, Or certain to loſe the true ſenſe of Scriptures, pretend to be above humane underſtanding, for no other cauſe then that they are below it? But in ſearching the Scriptures by the proper uſe of our Univerſities, we have been heretofore bleſſed with greater Victories and Trophies againſt the purple Hoſts, and golden Standards of the Romiſh Hierarchy, than any Nation; and therefore, why we ſhould relinquiſh this upon the preſumption of ſome, that becauſe there is a greater Light they have it, I do not know. There is a greater Light then the Sun, but it doth not extinguiſh the Sun, nor doth any Light of GOD's giving extinguiſh that of Nature, but encreaſe and ſanctifie it. Wherefore, neither the honour borne by the Iſraeliſh, Roman, nor any other Commonwealth that I have ſhewn, unto their Eccleſiaſticks conſiſted in being governed by them, but in conſulting them as matter of Religion; upon whoſe reſponſa, or Oracles, they did afterwards as they thought fit. Nor would I be miſtaken, as if by affirming the Univerſities, to be in order both unto Religion and Government, of abſolute neceſſity, I declared them or the Miniſtry in any wiſe fit to be truſted ſo far as to exerciſe any power not derived from the civill Magiſtrate, in the adminiſtration of either. If the Jewiſh Religion were directed and eſtabliſhed by Moſes, it was directed and eſtabliſhed by the civill Magiſtrate; or if Moſes exerciſed this adminiſtration as a Prophet, the ſame Prophet did invert with the ſame adminiſtration the Sanhedrim, and not the Prieſts; and ſo doth our Commonwealth, the Senate and not the Clergy. They who had the ſupreme Adminiſtration or Government of the National Religion in Athens, were the firſt Archons, the (Rex Sacrificus, or) High Prieſt, and Polemarch; which Magiſtrates were ordained or elected, (per χειροτονίαν) by the holding up of Hands, in the Church, Congregation, or comitia of the People. The Religion of Lacedemon was governed by the Kings, who were alſo high Prieſts; and officiated at the Sacrifice, tho' had power to ſubſtitute

their Pythii, Embassadors or Nuncios by which not without concurrence of the Senate they held intelligence with the Oracle of Apollo at Delphos. And the Ecclesiasticall part of the Commonwealth of Rome was governed by the Pontifex Maximus, the Rex Sacrificulus, and the Flamines, all ordained or elected by the people, the Pontifex, Tributis; the King, Centuriatis; and the Flamines or Parish Preists, Curiatis Comitiis. I do not mind you of these things, as if for the matter there were any parallel to be drawn out of their superstitions to our Religion; but to shew that for the manner, ancient prudence is as well a rule in divine as humane things; nay, and such an one as the Apostles themselves, ordaining Elders by the holding up of hands in every Congregation, have exactly follow'd; for some of the Congregations where they thus ordained Elders were those of Antioch, Iconium, Lystra, Derbe, the Country of Lycaonia, Pisidia, Pamphylia, Perga, with Italia. Now that these Cittys and Countrys when the Romans propagated their Empire into Asia, were found most of them Commonwealths, and that many of the rest were indued with like power, so that the people living under the protection of the Romane Emperors, continued to elect their own Magistrates, is so known a thing; that I wonder whence it is, men quite contrary unto the universall proof of these examples, will have Ecclesiasticall Government to be necessarily distinct from civill power, when the right of the Elders ordained by the holding up of hands in every Congregation, to teach the people, was plainly derived from the same civill power by which they ordained the rest of their Magistrates. And it is no otherwise in our Commonwealth, where the Parochiall Congregation electeth or ordaineth her Pastor. To object the Commonwealth of Venice in this place were to shew us that it hath been no otherwise, but where the civill power hath lost the liberty of her Conscience by embracing of Popery; as also that to take away the liberty of conscience in this administration from the civill power, were a proceeding which hath no other president than such as is Popish. Wherefore your Religion is thus settled; the Universities are the seminaries of that part which is nationall, by which meanes others withall safely may be permitted to follow the liberty of their consciences, in reguard that however they behave themselves, the ignorance of the unlearned in this case cannot lose your religion, nor disturb your Government; which otherwise it would most certainely do, and the universities with their Emoluments, as also the Benefices of the whole Nation are to be improoved by such Augmentations, as may make a very decent and comfortable subsistance for the Ministry, which is neither to be allow'd Synods nor Assemblies, (but upon the occasion shewn in the Universities, when they are consulted by the Councill for Religion) suffred to meddle with affaires of State, nor to be capable of any other publick preferment whatsoever; by which means the interest of the learned can never come to corrupt your Religion, nor disturb your Government; which otherwise it would most certainly do. Venice, though she do not see, or cannot help the corruption of her Religion, is yet so circumspect to avoid disturbance in this kind of her Government, that her Council proceeds not unto election of Magistrates, till it be proclaimed, Fora Papalini, by which words such as have consanguinity with red hats, or relation unto the Court of Rome, are warned to withdraw. If a Minister in Holland meddle with matter of State, the Magistrate sendeth him a pair of shooes, whereupon if he do not go, he is driven away from his charge. I wonder why Ministers of all men should be perpetually tampering with Government, first because they as well as others have it in expresse charge to submit themselves unto the Ordinances of men; and secondly, because these Ordinances of men must go upon such Politicall Principles; as they of all others (by any thing that can be found in their writings or actions) least understand: whence you have the suffrage of all Nations unto this sense: An ounce of wisdom is worth a pound of Clergy: Your greatest Clerks are not your wisest men: and when some foul absurdity in State is committed, it is common with the French, and even the Italians, to call it Pas de Clerc, or, Governo da Prete. They may bear with men that will be preaching without ſtudy, while they will be governing without Prudence. My Lords, if you know not how to rule the your Clergy, you will moſt certainly be like a man that cannot rule his Wife; have neither quiet at home, nor honour abroad. Their honeſt Vocation is to teach your Children at the Schools and the Univerſities, and the people in the Pariſhes; and Yours is concern'd to ſee that they do not play the ſhrewes: of which parts conſiſts the Education of your Common-wealth, ſo far forth as it regards Religion.

To Juſtice, or that part of it which is commonly executive, anſwers the Education of the Inns of Court, or Chancery. Upon which (to Philoſophize) requires a peculiar kind of Learning that I have not. But they who take upon them any Profeſſion proper unto the Educations mentioned, that is, Theology, Phyſick, Law, are not at leiſure for the Eſſayes: Wherefore the Eſſays being Degrees, whereby the Youth Commence for all Magiſtracies, Offices and Honours in the Pariſh, Hundred, Tribe, Senate, or Prerogative; Divines, Phyſicians, and Lawyers, not taking theſe Degrees, exclude themſelves from all ſuch Magiſtracies, Offices, and Honours. And whereas Lawyers are likeſt to exact farther reaſon for this: They growing up from the moſt gainful Art at the Barr, unto thoſe Magiſtracies upon the Bench, which are continually appropriated to themſelves; and not onely endowed with the greateſt Revenues, but held for life; have the leaſt reaſon of all the reſt to pretend unto any other; Eſpecially in an equal Commonwealth, where Accumulation of Magiſtracy, or to take a Perſon engaged by his Profit unto the Lawes as they ſtand, into the Power which is Legiſlative, and ſhould keep them unto what they were, or ought to be, were a Solœciſme in Prudence. It is true, that the Legiſlative power may have need of Advice and Aſſiſtance from the executive Magiſtracy, or ſuch as are learned in the Law; for which Cauſe the Judges are, (as they have heretofore been) Assistants in the Senate. Nor, however it came about, can I see any reason why a Judge, being but an Assistant, a Lawyer, should be a member of a Legislative Council.

I deny not, that the Roman Patricians were all Patrons; and that the whole People were Clients, some unto one family, and some unto another, by which means they had their Causes pleaded and defended in some appearance gratis; for the Patron took no money; though if he had a daughter to marry, his Clients were to pay her portion: nor was this so much. But if the Client accused his Patron, gave testimony or Suffrage against him, it was a crime of such nature, that any man might lawfully kill him as a Traytor: and this, as being the nerve of the Optimacy, was a great cause of ruine unto that Common-wealth: for when the people would carry any thing that pleased not the Senate, the Senators were ill provided if they could not intercede, that is, oppose it by their Clients; with whom, to vote otherwise then they pleased, was so high a Crime. The observation of this bond till the time of the Gracchi (that is to say, till it was too late, or to no purpose, to break it) was the cause, why in all the former heats and disputes that had happened between the Senate and the People, it never came to blowes; which was good: but withall, the people could have no remedy, which was Evil: Wherefore I am of opinion, that a Senator ought not to be a Patron or Advocate; nor a Patron or Advocate to be a Senator; for if his practice be gratis, it debaucheth the people; and if it be mercenary, it debaucheth himself: take it which way you will, when he should be making of Lawes, he will be knitting of Nets.

Lycurgus, as I said, by being a Traveller, became a Legislator; but, in times, when Prudence was another thing: Nevertheless we may not shut out this part of Education, in a Common-wealth which will be her Self a Traveller; for those of this make, have seen the World; especially, because this (though it be not regarded in our times, when things being left to take their chance, it fares with us accordingly) is certain; No man can be a Polititian, except he be first an Historian or a Traveller; for except he can see what Must be, or what May be, he is no Polititian: Now if he have no knowledge in story, he cannot tell what hath been; and if he hath not been a Traveller, he cannot tell what is: but he that neither knoweth what hath been, nor what is; can never tell what must be, or what may be. Furthermore, the Embassies in ordinary by our constitution, are the Prizes of young men, more especially such as have been Travellers. Wherefore they of these inclinations, having leave of the Censors, owe them accompt of their time, and cannot choose but lay it out with some ambition of Praise, or Reward, where both are open: whence you will have eyes abroad, and better choice of Publique Ministers: your Gallants shewing themselves not more unto the Ladies at their balls, than unto your Commonwealth at her Academy, when they return from their Travels.

But this Common-wealth being constituted more especially of two Elements, Arms, and Councils, driveth by a natural instinct, at Courage and wisdome, which he who hath attained, is arriv'd at the perfection of humane nature. It is true, that these Virtues must have some naturall root in him that is capable of them; but this amounteth not unto so great a matter as some will have it. For if Poverty make an industrious, a moderate Estate, a temperate, and a Lavish fortune, a Wanton Man; and this be the common course of things; Wisdom is rather of necessity, than Inclination. And that an Army which was meditating upon Flight, hath been brought by Despair to win the Field, is so far from being strange, that like Causes will evermore produce like Effects. Wherefore this Common-wealth driveth her Citizens like Wedges, there is no way with them but through; nor end, but that Glory whereof Man is capable by Art or Nature. That the Genius of the Roman Families preserved it self throughout the line; as to instance in some, that the Manlii were still severe; the Publicola lovers; and the Appii haters of the people, is attributed by Machiavill unto their Education: nor, if interest might adde unto the reason, why the Genius of a Patrician was one thing, and that of a Plebeian another, is the like so apparent between different Nations, who according unto their different Educations have yet as different manners. It was anciently noted, and long confirmed by the French, that in their first assaults their courage was more then that of men; and for the rest lesse then that of women: which nevertheless through the amendment of their discipline, we see to be otherwise. I will not say, but that some Man or Nation upon equall improvement of this kind may be lighter then some other; but certainly, Education is the scale without which no Man or Nation can truly know his or her own weight or value. By our Histories we can tell when one Marpesian would have beaten ten Oceaners; and when one Oceaner would have beaten ten Marpesians. Marc Anthony was a Roman, but how did that appear in the embraces of Cleopatra? You must have some other Education for your Youth; or they, like that passage, will shew better in Romance, then true Story.

The Custom of the Common-wealth of Rome in distributing her Magistracies without respect of age, happened to do well in Coriolanus and Scipio; for which cause Machiavill (with whom that which was done by Rome, and that which is well done, is for the most part all one) commendeth this course. Yet how much it did worse at other times, is obvious in Pompey & Cæsar; examples by which Boëtius illustrateth the Prudence of Venice in her contrary practice, affirming it to have been no small step unto the ruine of the Roman Liberty, that these having tasted in their Youth of the Supream Honours, had no greater in their age to hope for, but by perpetuating of the same in themselves, which came to Blood, and ended in Tyranny. The opinion of Verulamius is safe; The Errours (saith he) of Young Men are the ruine of Businesse; whereas the errours of aged men amount but to this, that more might have been dons or ſooner. But though their Wiſdome be little, their Courage is great. Wherefore (to come unto the main Education of this Common-wealth) the Militia of Oceana is the Province of Youth.

The diſtribution of this Province by the Eſſays is ſo fully deſcribed in the Order, that I need repeat nothing. The Order it ſelf being but a Repetition or Copy of that Originall, which in ancient Prudence is, of all other, the faireſt; as that from whence the Commonwealth of Rome, more eſpecially derived the Empire of the World; And there is much more reaſon in this age, when Governments are univerſally broken, or ſwerved from their Foundations, and the People groan under Tyranny, that the ſame cauſes (which could not be withſtood when the World was full of Popular Governments) ſhould have the like effect.

The Cauſes in the Common-wealth of Rome, whereof the Empire of the World was not any miraculous, but a naturall (nay I may ſafely ſay neceſſary) conſequence are contained in that part of her diſcipline which was domeſtick, and in that which ſhee exerciſed in her provinces or conqueſt. Of the latter I ſhall have better occaſion to ſpeak when we come unto our Provinciall Orders; the former divided the whole People by Tribes, amounting, as Livy ſhewes, at their full growth unto thirty five; and every Tribe by the Cenſe or valuation of Eſtates into five Claſſes, for the ſixth being Proletary that is, the Nurſery, or ſuch as through their Poverty contributed nothing to the Commonwealth but Children, was not reckoned nor uſed in Armes. And this is the firſt point of the Militia, in which Moderne Prudence is quite contrary unto the Ancient; for whereas we excuſing the rich, and arming the Poore, become the vaſſalls of our Servants, they by excuſing the Poor and Arming ſuch as were rich enough to be Freemen, became Lords of the Earth. (The Nobility and Gentry of this Nation, who underſtand ſo little what it is to be Lords of the Earth, that they have not been able to keep their Lands will think it a ſtrange education for their Children to be common Souldiers, and obliged unto all the duties of Armes; nevertheleſſe it is not for 4, s. a week, but to be capable of being the beſt man in the Feild or in the City: the latter part of which conſideration makes the Common Souldier in this, a better man then the Generall of any Monarchicall Army. And whereas it may be thought, that this would drink deep of Noble Blood; I dare boldly ſay, take the Roman Nobility in the heat of their fierceſt Warrs, and you ſhall not find ſuch a ſhambles of them as hath been made of ours by meer luxury and ſlothfullneſſe; which killing the body, kill the Soul alſo; whereas Common right is that which who ſtands in the vindication of, hath uſed that Sword of Juſtice for which he receiveth the purple of Magiſtracy: the glory of a man on Earth can go no higher, and if he fall he riſeth, and comes ſooner unto that reward which is ſo much higher as Heaven is above Earth. To return unto the Roman example.) Every Claſſis was divided (as hath been more then once ſhewn) into Centurys, and every Century was equally divided into Youth and Elders; the Youth for Forraigne Service, and the Elders for the Guard of the Territory. In the firſt Claſſis were a matter of eighteene Centurys of Horſe being thoſe which by the Inſtitution of Servius were firſt called unto the ſuffrage (Centuriatis.) But the Acleſtus, or Levy of an Army (which is the preſent buſineſſe) proceeded according to Polybius in this manner.

Upon a Warr decreed, the Conſuls elected four and twenty military Tribunes or Colonels; whereof ten, being ſuch as had merited their tenth Stipend, were younger Officers. The Tribunes being choſen, the Conſuls appointed the day unto the Tribes, when thoſe in them of military Age were to appear at the Capitol; The day being come, and the Youth Aſſembled accordingly, the Conſuls aſcended their Tribunal, and the younger Tribunes were forthwith divided into four parts after this manner: foure were assigned unto the first Legion, (a Legion at the most consisted of 6000 Foot, and 300 Horse) three unto the second, four unto the third, and three unto the fourth; the younger Tribunes being thus distributed, two of the Elder were assigned unto the first Legion, three unto the second, two unto the third, and three unto the fourth. And the Officers of each Legion thus assigned, having drawn the Tribes by Lots, and being seated according unto their divisions at a convenient distance from each other; the Tribe of the first Lot was called: whereupon they that were of it knowing the businesse, and being prepared, presently bolted out four of their Number, in the choice whereof such care was taken, that they offered none that was not a Citizen; no Citizen that was not of the Youth; no Youth that was not of some one of the five Classes, nor any one of the five Classes that was not expert at his Exercizes. Moreover, they used such diligence in matching them for age and stature, that the Officers of the Legions, except they happened to be acquainted with the Youths so bolted, were forced to put themselves upon fortune, while they of the first Legion chose one; they of the second, the next; they of the third, another; and the fourth Youth fell to the last Legion, and thus was the election (the Legions and the Tribs varying according unto their Lots) carryed on till the Foot were compleat. The like Course with little alteration was taken by Horse Officers till the Horse also were compleat. This was called giving of Names (which the Children of Israel did also by Lot) and if any Man refused to give his Name, he was sold for a slave, or his Estate confiscated to the Commonwealth (Marcus Curius Consul cum subitum delectum edicere coactus esset & juniorum nemo respondisset conjectis in sortem omnibus, Pollia (it is the name of a Tribe) quæ proxima exierat, primum nomen urnâ extractum citari jussit, neq; eo respondente, bona Adolescentis hasta subjecit, which was conformable unto the Law in Israel, according whereunto Saul took a yoak of Oxen, and hewed them in pieces, and sent them throughout the

the Tribes, saying, Whosoever cometh not forth (unto battel) after Saul and Samuel, so shall it be done unto his Oxen. By which you may observe also, that they who had no cattle were not of the Militia in Israel. But the age of the Roman Youth (Lege Tullia) determined at 30. and by the Law (though it should seem by Machiavill and others, that this was not well observed) a Man could not stand for Magistracy till he (was miles emeritus) had fulfilled the full term of his Militia, which was compleat in his tenth stipend or Service: nor was he thence forth obliged under any penalty to give his name, except the Commonwealth were invaded, in which case the Elders were as well obliged as the Youth, (Quod per magnos tumultus fieri solitum erat, justitio indicto, delectus sine vacationibus habitus est) The Consul might also Levy (Milites evocatos) commanded-Men out of such as had served their terme, and this at his Discretion. The Legions being thus compleat, were divided by two unto each Consul; and in these no man had right to serve, but a Roman Citizen; Now because two Legions made but a small Army, the Romans added unto every one of their Armies an equall number of Foot, and a double number of Horse Levied among their Latine or Italian Associates; so a Consular Army with the Legions and Auxiliaries, amounted to about Thirty thousand: and whereas they commonly levy'd two such Armies together, these being joyned made a matter of 60 thousand.

Livy.

The Steps whereby our Militia followes the greatest Captain, are the three Essays; the first elected by a fifth man (Cuviatis) in the Parishes, amounting in the whole unto One hundred thousand, choosing their Officers (Centuriatis) at the Hundreds, where they fall also unto their Games, or Exercises, invited by handsome Prizes, such as for themselves and the honour of them will be coveted; such as will render the Hundred a place of Sports, and exercise of Arms all the year long; such as in the space of ten years will harneyse you 30000 Men Horse and Foot, with such Arms for their Forge, proof;

proof, and beauty, as (notwithſtanding the Argyraſpides, or ſilver ſhields of Alexanders guard) were never worn by ſo many; ſuch as will preſent marks of Virtue and direction unto your General or Strategus in the diſtribution of his Army, which doubles the value of them, unto the Proprietors, who are bound to wear them, and eaſeth the Common-wealth of ſo much Charge, ſo many being Armed already. But here will be the Objection, now. How ſhall ſuch a Revenue be compaſſed? Fifty pounds a year in every Hundred is a great deal, not ſo eaſily raiſed: men will not part with their money; nor would the ſum as it is propoſed by the Order of Pompe, riſe in many years. Theſe are difficulties that fit our Genius exactly: And yet a Thouſand pounds in each Hundred once levied, eſtabliſheth the Revenue for ever. Now the Hundreds one with another are worth ten thouſand pounds a year dry rent, over and above Perſonal Eſtates, which bring it unto twice the value. So a twentieth part of one years Revenue of the Hundred, does it. If you cannot afford this while you pay Taxes, though from henceforth they will be but ſmall ones, do it when you pay none: If it be then too much for one year, do it in two: If it be too much for two years, do it in four. What Husbands have we hitherto been? What is become of greater Summes? My Lords, if you ſhould thus caſt your bread upon the waters, after many daies you would find it: ſtand not huckling, when you are offer'd Corn and your money again in the mouth of the Sack.

But to proceed: The firſt Eſſay being Officer'd at the Hundreds, and muſtred (Tributis) at the Tribes, where they are entertain'd with other Sports, which will be very fine ones; Proceed unto the Election of the ſecond Eſſay, or ſtanding Army of this Nation conſiſting of thirty thouſand Foot, and ten thouſand Horſe; and theſe (upon a War decreed) being delivered at the Rendezvouz of Oceana unto the Strategus, are the third Eſſay, which anſwereth unto the Roman Legions. But you may obſerve, that whereas the Conſuls elected the Military Tribunes, and raised Commanded men out of the Veteranes at their own discretion: Our Polemarchs or Field-Officers are elected by the Scrutiny of the Council of Warre; and our Veteranes not otherwise taken on, than as Voluntiers, and with the consent of the Polemarchs, which may serve for the removall of certain Scruples which might otherwise be incident in this place, though without encouragement by the Roman way of proceeding, much lesse that which is proposed. But whereas the Roman Legions in all amounted not in one Army to above 30000 Men, or little more, you have here Fourty thousand; and whereas they added Auxiliaries, in this regard it is that Marpesia will be of greater Revenue unto you, then if you had the Indies; for whereas heretofore She hath brought you forth nothing but her native Thistle: ploughing out the rankness of her Aristocracy by your Agrarian, you will find her an inexhaustible Magazine of Men, and to her own advantage, who will make a far better Accompt by the Arms, then by the Pins of Poland. Wherefore as a Consular Army consisted of about an equall number of Auxiliaries added unto their Legions by their Latine or Italian Associates, you may adde unto a Parliamentary Army an equall number of Marpesians, or Panopeans; as that Colony shall hereafter be able to supply you. By which means the Common-wealth will be able to go forth to Battail with Fourscore thousand Men. To make Wars with small Forces is no Husbandry, but a waste, a disease, a lingring and painful Consumption of Men and Money; the Romans making theirs thick, made them short, and had little regard unto Money, as that which they who have men enow, can command where it is fitten that it should be Levied. All the ancient Monarchies by this means got on wing, and attain'd unto vast Riches. Whereas your Modern Princes being dear Purchasers of small parcels, have but empty Pockets. But it may be that some will accuse the Order, of rashnesse; in that it committeth the sole Conduct of the War unto the General; and the Custom of Venice by her Proveditors, or Checks upon her Commanders in Chief, may seem to be of greater Prudence; but in this part of our Government neither Venice, nor any Nation that maketh use of mercenary Forces, is for our Instruction. A mercenary Army, with a standing General, is like the fatall Sister that Spins: But proper Forces, with an annuall Magistrate, are like Her that cuts the thread. Their Interests are quite contrary, and yet you have a better Proveditor then the Venetian, another Strategus sitting with an Army standing by him; whereupon that which is marching, if there were any probability it should, would find as little possibility that it could recoyl, as a Forraign Enemy to invade you. These things considered, a War will appear to be of a contrary nature unto that of all other reckonings, in as much as of this, you must never look to have a good accompt if you be strict in imposing Checks. Let a Council of Hunts-men assembled before-hand, tell you which way the Stagg shall run, where you shall cast about at the fault, and how you shall ride to be in at the Chase all the day: but these may as well do that, as a Council of War direct a General. The hours that have painted wings, and of different colours, are his Counsel; he must be like the eye that maketh not the scene, but hath it so soon as it changes. That in many Counsellors there is strength, is spoken of civill Administrations; As to those that are Military, there is nothing more certain, then that in many Counsellors there is weaknesse. Joynt Commissions in Military affairs are like hunting your Hounds in their Couples: In the Attick War, Cleomenes and Demaratus, Kings of Lacedemon, being thus coupled, tugg'd one against another; and while they should have joyn'd against the Persian, were the Cause of the calamity: whereupon that Common-wealth took better Counsel, and made a Law, whereby from thenceforth there went at once but one of her Kings unto Battail.

The Fidenati being in rebellion, and having slain the Colony of the Romans; four Tribunes with Consular power were created by the people of Rome, whereof one being left for the guard of the City, the other three were ſent againſt the Fidenati, who through the diviſion that happened among them, brought nothing home but diſhonour: whereupon the Romans created the Dictator; (and Livy gives his judgment in theſe words: Tres Tribuni, poteſtate Conſulari, documento fuêre, quàm plurimum imperium bello inutile eſſet; tendendo ad ſua quiſq; conſilia, cum alii aliud videretur, aperuerunt ad occaſionem, locum hoſti) when the Conſuls; Quictius and Agrippa, were ſent againſt the Æqui, Agrippa for this reaſon refuſed to go forth with his Colleague, (ſaying; Saluberrimum in adminiſtratione magnarum rerum, ſummam imperii apud unum eſſe) And if the ruine of Modern Armies were well conſidered, moſt of it would be found to have fallen upon this Point: it being in this caſe far ſafer to truſt unto any one Man of common Prudence, then to any two or more together of the greateſt Parts. The Conſuls indeed being equal in Power, while one was preſent with the Senate, and the other in the Field with the Army, made a good Ballance; and this with us is exactly follow'd by the Election of a new Strategus upon the march of the old one.

The Seven and twentieth Order, Whereby the Elders in caſe of Invaſion are obliged unto equall duty with the Youth, and each upon their own Charge, is ſuitable unto reaſon, (for every Man defends his own Eſtate); and unto our Copy, as in the War with the Sammites and Tuſcans. (Senatus juſtitium indici, delectum omnis generis hominum haberi juſſit: nec ingenui modo, et juniores Sacramento adacti ſunt, ſed ſeniorum etiam cohortes factæ.) This Nation of all others is the leaſt obnoxious unto Invaſion. Oceana (ſaith a French Politician) is a Beaſt that cannot be devoured but by her Self; Nevertheleſſe, that Government is not perfect which is not provided at all points; and in this (ad Triarios res rediit) the Elders being ſuch as in a martial State muſt be Veterans, the Commonwealth invaded gathers ſtrength (like Antæus) by her fall, whilſt the whole number of the Elders conſiſting of five hundred thouſand, and the Youth of as many (being brought up according unto the Order) give twelve Succeſſive Battels, each Battel conſiſting

ing of Eighty thousand Men, half Elders, and half Youth: And the Common-wealth whose Constitution can be no stranger unto any of those virtues which are to be acquired in humane life, growes familiar with Death ere She dye. If the hand of God be upon her for her transgressions, She shall mourn for her sins, and lye in the dust for her iniquities, without losing of her manhood.

The remaining part being the Constitution of the Provinciall Orbe is partly Civill, or consisting of the Elders; and partly Military, or consisting of the Youth. The Civil part of the Provincial Orbe is directed by

28. Ord. Constitution of the Civill part of the Provinciall Orbe.

The Twenty-Eighth Order; Whereby the Council of a Province being constituted of twelve Knights, divided by four into three Regions (for their terme and revolution conformable unto the Parliament) is perpetuated by the annuall election at the Lopick of four Knights (being triennial Magistrates) out of the Region of the Senate whose terme expireth, and of one Knight out of the same Region to be Strategus, or General of the Province, which Magistracy is annuall. The Strategus or Magistrate thus chosen, shall be as well President of the Provincial Council with power to propose unto the same, as General of the Army. The Council for the rest shall elect weekly Provolls, having any two of them alike right to propose, after the manner of the Senatorian Councils of Oceana. And whereas all Provincial Councils are members of the Council of State, they may and ought to keep diligent correspondence with the same, which is to be done after this manner; Any opinion or opinions Legitimately proposed and debated in a Provincial Council; being there, upon signed by the Strategus, or any two of the Provolls, may be transmitted unto the Council of State in Oceana: and the Council of State proceeding upon the same in their naturall Course (whether by their own Power if it be a matter within their instructions, or by authority of the Senate, thereupon consulted, if it be a matter of State which is not in their instructions or by authority of the Senate and Command of the People, if it be a matter of Law, as for the Leaves of Plate or Money upon common ale and safety) shall returne such answers, advice, or Orders, as in any of the ways mentioned shall be determined upon the Case. The Provinciall Councils of Harpefia and Panopea respectively shall take especiall care that the Agrarian Lawes, as also all other Lawes that be or shall from time to time be enacted by the Parliament of Oceana, for either of them, be duely put in execution; They shall manage and receive the Customs of either Nation for the Shipping of Oceana being the Common Guard, they shall have a care that moderate and sufficient pay upon the respective Provinces be duely rayled for the support and maintenance of the Officers and Souldiers, or Army of the same in the most effectuall constant and convenient way. They shall receive the Regalia, or publique Revenues of those Nations, out of which every Councellor shall have for his terme, and unto his proper use, the Summe of 500*l.* per annum; and the Strategus 500*l.* as President, besides his pay as Generall, which shall be 1000 pounds: the remainder to go unto the use of the Knights and Deputies of the respective Provinces, to be paid if it will reach, according unto the rates of Oceana; if not, by an equall distribution, respectively; or the overplus, if there be any, to be returned unto the Treasury of Oceana. They shall manage the Lands (if there be any such holden in either of the Provinces by the Common-wealth of Oceana, in Dominion) and return the Rents into the Exchequer. If the Commonwealth come to be possessed of richer provinces, the pay of the Generall or Strategus, and of the Councills may be respectively encreased. The People for the rest shall elect their own Magistrates, and be governed by their own Lawes, having power also to appeale from their Native, or Provinciall Magistrates if they please unto the People of Oceana. And whereas there may be such as receiving injury are not able to prosecute their appeales at so great a distance: Eight Serjants at Law being chosen by the Commissioners of the Seale shall be sent by foure into each Province once in two yeares, who dividing the same by Circuits, shall heare such Causes, and having gathered and introduced them shall returne unto the severall Appellants, Gratis, the Determinations and Decrees of the People in their severall Cases.

The terme of a Knight in a Provinciall Senate or Nomothetick Magistracies shall be esteemed a Vacation and no barr unto present

Election

Election into any other Honour, his Provinciall Magistracy being expired.

The Quorum of a Provinciall Council, as also of every other Council or Assembly in Oceana, shall in time of health consist of two parts in three, of the whole number proper unto that Council or Assembly, and, in a time of Sicknesse, of one part in three; But of the Senate there can be no Quorum without three of the Signory: nor of a Council without two of the Provosts.

The Civil part of the Provinciall Orbe being declared by the foregoing Order; The military part of the same is constituted by

29. Ord. Constitution of the Military part of the Provinciall Orbe.

The Twenty Ninth Order; Whereby the Stratiots of the third Class, having drawn the Gold Balls marked with the Letter M. and being ten Horse e fifty Foot in a Tribe, that is to say, five hundred Horse, and two thousand five hundred Foot in all, the Tribes shall be delivered by the respective Conductors unto the Provinciall Strategus, or Generall, at such a time and place of Rendevouz as he shall appoint by Order and Certificate of his Election; and the Strategus having received the Horse and Foot mentioned, which are the third Classis of his Provinciall Guard, or Army, shall forthwith lead them away unto Marpesa, where the Army consisting of three Classes each Classis containing three thousand Men, whereof five hundred are Horse; and receiving the new Strategus with the third Classis; the old Strategus with the first Classis shall be dismist by the Provinciall Council. The same method with the Stratiots of the Letter P. is to be observed for the Provinciall Orbe of Panopea: and the Commonwealth coming to acquire new Provinces, the Senate and the People may erect new Orbs in like manner consisting of greater or lesse numbers according as is required by the respective occasion. If a Stratiot have once served his terme in a Provinciall Orbe, and happen afterwards to draw the Letter of a Province at the Election of the second Class, he may refuse his Lot, and if he refuse it, the Censor of that Urn shall cause the files balloting at the same to make an hault; and if the Stratiot produce the Certificate of his Strategus or Generall, that he hath served his time accordingly; the Censor throwing the Ball that he drew into the Urn againe, and taking out a blank; shall dismisse the Youth, and cause the Ballot to proceed.

The Thirtieth Order: When thou goeſt to battel againſt thine enemies and ſeeſt Horſes and Chariots, and a people more then thou; be not affraid of them, for the Lord thy God is he that goeth with thee to fight for thee againſt thine enemies: And when thou divideſt the ſpoile, it ſhall be as a ſtatute and an Ordinance unto thee, that as his part is that goeth down to the battle, ſo ſhall his part be that tarryeth by the Stuffe: that is, as to the Commonwealth of Oceana; The ſpoile taken of the enemy (except Clothes, Armes, Horſes, Ammunition and Victuall, to be divided unto the Souldiery by the Strategus and the Polemarchs upon the place according unto their Diſcretion) ſhall be delivered unto four Commiſſaries of the Spoiles elected and ſworn by the Councill of War, which Commiſſaries ſhall be allowed ſhipping by the State and convoyes according as occaſion ſhall require by the Strategus; to the end that having a bill of lading ſigned by three or more of the Polemarchs they may ſhip and bring or cauſe ſuch ſpoiles to be brought unto the Prize Office in Oceana, where they ſhall be ſold, and the profit ariſing by ſuch ſpoiles ſhall be divided into three parts whereof one ſhall go unto the Treaſury, another ſhall be paid to the Souldiery of this Nation, a third unto the Auxiliaries, at their return from their ſervice, provided that the ſaid Auxiliaries be equall in number unto the proper forces of this Nation, otherwiſe their ſhare ſhall be ſo much leſſe as they are fewer in number: the reſt of the two thirds to go unto the Officers and Souldiers of the proper forces; and the ſpoiles ſo divided unto the proper forces ſhall be ſubdivided into three equall parts, whereof one ſhall go unto the Officers, and two unto the common Souldiers, the like for the Auxiliaries: and the ſhare allotted unto the Officers, ſhall be divided into foure equall parts whereof one ſhall go to the Strategus, another unto the Polemarchs, a third unto the Colonels, and a fourth unto the Captaines, Cornets, Enſignes and under Officers, receiving their ſhare of the ſpoile as common Souldiers. The like for the Auxiliaries: and this upon paine in the caſe of failure, of what the people of Oceana, unto whom the Cognizance of Peculate or Crimes of this nature is properly appertaining, ſhall adjudge or decree.

30 Order, Deut. 20 2 Sam. 30. 24.

Upon these three last orders the Archon seemed to bee hanging at the head of his Army, in this manner.

My dear Lords and Excellent Patriots:

A Government of this make, is a Commonwealth for increase. Of those for preservation the inconveniences, and frailties have been shewn: their rootes are narrow, such as do not runne, have no fivers, their tops weak and dangerously exposed unto the weather; except you chance to finde one (as Venice) planted in a flowerpot, and if shee grow, shee grows top-heavy, and falls too. But you cannot plant an Oak in a flowerpot: She must have earth for her root, and heaven for her branches.

Rome was said (Mole sua ruere) to bee broken by her own weight, but Poetically. For that weight by which she was pretended to bee ruined, was supported in her Emperors, by a farre slighter foundation. And in the Common experience of good Architecture, there is nothing more known, than that buildings, stand the firmer and the longer for their own weight, nor ever swerve through any other internal cause, than that their materials are corruptible, but the people never dyes, nor, as a Political Body, are subject unto any other corruption than that which deriveth from their Government. Unlesse a man will deny the chain of causes in which hee denies God, hee must also acknowledge the chain of effects; wherefore there can bee no effect in Nature, that is not from the first Cause, and those successive lincks of the chain, without which it could not have been. Now except a man can shew the contrary in a Commonwealth, if there bee no cause of corruption in the first make of it, there can never bee any such effect. Let no mans superstition, impose prophanenesse upon this assertion; for as Man is sinfull, but yet the World is perfect, so may the Citizen bee sinfull, and yet the Commonwealth bee perfect. And as man seeing this World is perfect, can never commit any such sin as can render it imperfect, or bring it unto a natural dissolution; so the Citizen, where the common Wealth is perfect can never commit any such crime, as can render it imperfect, or bring it unto a natural dissolution. To come unto experience, Venice, notwithstanding that wee have found some flaws in it, is the only Cõmonwealth, in the make whereof, no man can find a cause of dissolution; for which reason wee behold her (albeit she consist of men that are not without sin) at this day with one thousand years upon her back, for any internal cause, as young, as fresh, and free from decay, or any appearance of it, as shee was born, but what ever in nature, is not sensible of decay by the course of a thousand years; is capable of the whole age of nature: by which calculation for any check that I am able to give my self; a Commonwealth rightly ordered, may for any internal cause, be as immortal, or long-lived as the World. But if this be true, those Commonwealths that are naturally fallen, must have derived their ruine from the vice of them. Israel and Athens, died not naturall, but violent deaths, in this manner the World is to dye, wee are speaking of those causes of dissolution which are naturall unto government; and they are but two, either Contradiction or Inequality, if a Commonwealth be a contradiction she must needs destroy her self, and if she be unequal, it tends to strife, and strife to ruine. By the former of these fell Lacedemon, by the latter Rome. Lacedemon being made altogether for war, and yet not for increase, her natural progresse, became her natural dissolution, and the building of her own victorious hand, too heavy for her foundation, so shee indeed fell by her own weight.

But Rome through her native Inequality, which how it inveterated the bosomes of the Senate and the people each against other, and even unto death hath been shewn at large.

Look well unto it my Lords, for if there be a contradiction or inequality in your Commonwealth it must fall; but if it have neither of these, it hath no principle of mortality, do not think mee impudent, if this be truth, I should commit a gross

groſſe indiſcretion, in concealing it. Sure I am that Machiavil, is for the immortality of a Commonwealth upon far weaker principles. If a Commonwealth (ſaith he) were ſo happy as to be provided often with men, that when ſhe is ſwarving from her principles; ſhould reduce her unto her inſtitution, ſhee would be immortall. But a Common-wealth, as we have demonſtrated, ſwarveth not from her Principles, but by and through her inſtitution, if ſhe brought no byaſſe into the World with her, her courſe for any internal cauſe, muſt be ſtreight forward, as we ſee is that of Venice, ſhe cannot turn unto the right hand, nor to the left, but by ſome rubs, which is not an internal but an external cauſe, againſt ſuch ſhe can be no way fortifyed, but through her ſituation as is Venice, or through her Militia as was Rome; by which examples a Common-wealth may be ſecure, of thoſe alſo, Think me not vain, for I cannot hold, a Common-wealth that is rightly inſtituted can never ſwarve, nor one that is not rightly inſtituted be ſecured from ſwarving by reduction unto her principles, wherefore it is no leſs apparent in this place, that Machiavil underſtood not a Common-wealth as to the whole peice, as where having told you, That a Tribune or any other Citizen of Rome, might propoſe a Law unto the people, and debate it with them, he adds this order was good while the people were good, but when the people became evil, it became moſt pernicious; as if this Order, through which with the like, the people moſt apparently became evil, could ever have been good; or that the people, or the Commonwealth could ever have become good, by being reduced unto ſuch principles as were the Original of their evil. The diſeaſe of Rome was, as hath been ſhewn, from the native inequality of her ballance, and no otherwiſe from the Empire of the World, which then as this falling into one ſcale, that of the Nobility (an evil in ſuch a Fabrick inevitable) kickt out the People, wherefore a man that could have made her to throw away the Empire of the World, might in that have reduced her unto her principles, and yet have been ſo far from rendering her immortal, that going no farther hee ſhould never have cured her. But your C. W. is founded upon an equal Agrarian, and if the earth be given unto the Saints of men, this ballance

Dif. B. 3. C. 22. B. 3 C. 29.

Dif. B. 1. C. 18

Prov. 20. 14 lance, is the ballance of justice, such an one as in having due regard unto the different industry, of different men, yet faithfully judgeth the poor. And the King that faithfully judgeth the poor, his Throne shall be established for ever, much more the Commonwealth, seeing that equality which is the necessary dissolution of Monarchy, is the generation, the very life and soul of a Commonwealth; And now if ever, I may be excusable, seeing that the Throne of a Commonwealth may be established for ever, is consonant unto the holy Scriptures.

The ballance of a Commonwealth that is equal, is of such nature, that what ever falleth into her Empire, must fall equally, and if the whole earth fall into your scales, it must fall equally, & so you may be a greater people, and yet not swerve from your principles one hair. Nay you will be so far from that, that you must bring the world in such a case, unto your ballance, even unto the ballance of Justice. But hearken, My Lords, Are we on earth? Do we see the Sun? or are we visiting those shady places which are fained by the Poets?

These Gothick Empires that are yet in the world, were at the first, though they had legs of their own, but an heavy and unweildy burden, but their foundations being now broken, the Iron of them entereth even into the souls of the oppressed, and hear the voice of their Comforters. My father hath chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions. Hearken, I say, if thy brother cry unto thee in affliction, wilt thou not hear him? This is a Commonwealth of the fabrick, that hath an open ear, and a publick concernment, she is not made for her self only, but given as a Magistrate of God unto mankinde, for the vindication of common Right, and the law of Nature. Wherefore saith Cicero of the like, that of the Romans (Nos magis patrocinium orbis terrarum suscepimus, quam Imperium) we have rather undertaken the Patronage than the Empire of the world. If you, not regarding this example, like some other Nations that are upon the point to smart for it, shall, having attained unto your own liberty, bear the sword of your common Magistracy, in vain, sit still, and fold your arms, or which is worse, let out the blood of your people unto Tyrants to be shed in the defence of their yoaks, like water, and so not only turn the grace of God into wantonness, but his justice into vengeance.

You are not now making a Commonwealth, but heaping coals of fire upon your own heads. A Commonwealth, I say, of this make is a Minister of God upon earth, to the end that the world may be governed with righteousness. For which cause (that I may come at length unto our present business) the orders last rehearsed are buds of Empire, such as with the blessing of God, may spread the arms of your Commonwealth, like an holy Asylum unto the distressed world, and give the earth her Sabbath of years, or rest from her labours under the shadow of your wings. It is upon this point where the writings of Machiavil having for the rest excelled all other Authors, come as far to excel themselves.

(Commonwealths, saith he, have had three wayes of propagating themselves, One after the manner of Monarchies, by imposing the yoak, which was the way of Athens, and towards the latter times of Lacedemon; another by equal leagues, which is the way of Switz (I shall adde of Holland though since his time) A third by unequal leagues, which to the shame of the world, was never practised, nay nor so much as seen, or minded by any other Commonwealth, but that only of Rome. They will each of them either for caution, or imitation, be worthy to be well weighed, which is the proper work of this place. Athens and Lacedæmon, have been the occasion of great scandal to the world, in two, or at least one of two regards. The first their emulation, which involved Greece in perpetual wars, the second their way of propagation, which by imposing yoaks upon others, was plainly contradictory to their own principles. Disc. B. 2. C. 4.

For the first, Governments bee they of what kinde soever, if they bee planted too close, are like trees, that impatient in their growth to have it hindred, eat out one another. It was not unknown unto these, in contemplation, or (if you read the story of Agesilaus) in action, that either of them with thirty thousand men might have mastered the East, and certainly, if the one had not ſtood in the others light, Alexander had come too late to that end, which was the means (and would be if they were to live again) of ruine, at the leaſt unto one of them: wherefore with any man that underſtandeth the nature of Government, this is excuſable; ſo it was between Oceana and Marpeſia; ſo it is between France and Spain (though leſſe excuſable) and ſo it ever will bee in like caſes. But to come unto the ſecond occaſion of ſcandal by them given, which was in the way of their propagation, it is not excuſable: for they brought their confederates under bondage; by which means Athens gave occaſion of the Peloponeſian warre, the wound of which ſhee dy'd ſtinking, when Lacedemon, taking the ſame infection from her carkaſſe, ſoon followed.

Wherefore my Lords, let theſe bee warnings unto you, not to make that liberty which God hath given you, a ſnare unto others, in uſing this kind of inlargement of your ſelves.

The Second way of Propagation or inlargement uſed by Common-wealths, is that of Switz and Holland, equal leagues; this, though it be not otherwiſe miſchievous, is uſeleſſe to the world, and dangerous unto themſelves; uſeleſſe unto the world, for as the former governments were Storks, theſe are blocks, have no ſenſe of honour, or concernment in the ſufferings of others. But as the Aetolians a ſtate of the like fabrick, were reproached by Phillip of Macedon, proſtrate themſelves, by letting out their arms unto the luſts of others: while they have their own liberty barren, and without legitimate iſſue. I do not defame the people, the Switz for valour have no ſuperior, the Hollander for induſtry no equal: but themſelves in the mean time ſhall ſo much the leſs excuſe their Governments, ſeeing that unto the Switz it is well enough known, that the Enſigns of his Common-wealth have no other Motto then (in te converte manus) and that of the Hollander, though hee ſweat more gold than the Spaniard digs, let's him languiſh in debt, for ſhee her ſelf lives upon charity, theſe are dangerous unto themſelves, precarious governments, ments, ſuch as do not command, but beg their bread from Province to Province. Coats that being patched up of all colours are of none; that their Cantons and Provinces are ſo many arrows, is good; but they are ſo many bows too, which is naught.

Like unto theſe was the Commonwealth of the ancient Tuſcans, hung together like Bobbins, without an hand to weave with them; therefore eaſily overcome by the Romans, though at that time, for number, a far leſſe conſiderable people. If your liberty be not a root that grows, it will be a branch that withers, which conſideration brings mee unto the Paragon, the Common-wealth of Rome.

The ways and means whereby the Romans acquired the Patronage, and in that the Empire of the world, were different, according unto the different Condition of their Commonwealth in her riſe, and in her growth; in her riſe ſhee proceeded rather by Colonies, in her growth by unequal Leagues. Colonies without the bounds of Italy ſhee planted none (ſuch diſperſion of the Roman Citizen, as to plant him in forreign parts, til the contrary intereſt of the Emperors brought in that practice, was unlawful) nor did ſhee ever demoliſh any City within that Compaſs, or diveſt it of liberty, but whereas the moſt of them were Commonwealths, ſtirred up by emulation of her great felicity, to war againſt her, if ſhee overcame any, ſhe confiſcated ſome part of their Lands that were the greateſt incendiaries, or cauſes of the trouble, upon which ſhee planted Colonies of her own people, preſerving the Lands and Liberties for the reſt, unto the natives or inhabitants. By this way of proceeding, (that I may bee brief as is poſſible) ſhe did many and great things. For in confirming of Liberty, ſhee propagated her Empire, in holding the inhabitants from rebellion, ſhee put a curb upon the incurſion of Enemies; in exonerating her ſelf of the poorer ſort, ſhee multiplied her Citizens, in rewarding her veterans, ſhee rendered the reſt leſſe ſeditious, and in acquiring unto her ſelf the reverence of the Common parent, ſhee from time to time became the

Mother

Mother of New-born Cities.

In her farther growth the way of her propagation went more upon Leagues, which for the first division were of two kindes, Social and Provincial.

Again, Social Leagues, or Leagues of Society, were of two kindes.

The first called, Latinity or Latine; The second Italian Right.

The League between the Romans and the Latins, or Latine Right, approached neareſt unto (Jus Quiritium) the right of a native Roman. The Man or the City that was honoured with this Right was (Civitate donatus cum ſuffragio) adopted a Citizen of Rome, with the right of giving ſuffrage with the people in ſome caſes, as thoſe of Confirmation, of Law, or Determination in Judicature, if both the Conſuls were agreed, not otherwiſe, wherefore that coming to little, the greateſt and moſt peculiar part of this Priviledge was, that who had born Magiſtracy (at leaſt that of Ædile or Queſtor) in any Latine City, was by conſequence of the ſame a Citizen of Rome at all points.

Italian Right was alſo donation of the City, but without Suffrage; they who were in either of theſe Leagues, were governed by their own Laws and Magiſtrates, having all the Rights, as to liberty of Citizens of Rome, yeelding and paying to the Commonwealth as head of the League, and having the Conduct of all Affairs appertaining to the Common Cauſe, ſuch aid of Men and Monies as were particularly agreed upon the merit of the cauſe, and ſpecified in their reſpective Leagues, whence ſuch Leagues came to be called equal or unequal accordingly.

Provincial Leagues were of different extention, according unto the Merit and Capacity of a conquered People, but of one kinde, for every Province was governed by Annual Magiſtrates, as a Prætor or a Conſul, according to the dignity of the Province, for the Civil Adminiſtration, and conduct of the Provincial Army: And a Queſtor for the gathering of the publick Revenue, from which Magistrates, a Province might appeal unto Rome.

For the better understanding of these particulars, I shall exemplifie in as many of them as is needful: And first, in Macedon. The Macedonians were thrice conquered by the Romans, first under the conduct of T. Quintius Flaminius, secondly under that of L. Æmilius Paulus; and thirdly, under that of Q. Cæcilius Metellus, thence called Macedonicus.

For the first time (Procpetenti Philippo data, Gratia libertas) Philip of Macedon, who (possessed of Acro Corinthus) boasted, no less than was true, that he had Greece in fetters, being overcome by Flaminius, had his Kingdome restored unto him, upon condition that he should forthwith set all the Cities which he held in Greece, and in Asia at liberty, and that he should not make war out of Macedon, but by leave of the Senate of Rome, which Philip (having no other way to save any thing) agreed should be done accordingly.

The Grecians being at this time assembled at the Isthmian Games, where the concourse was mighty great, a Cryer, appointed unto the office by Flaminius, was heard among them proclaiming all Greece to be free; to which the people being amazed, as so hopeless a thing, gave little credit, till they received such testimony of the truth as put it past all doubt; whereupon they fell immediately on running unto the Proconsul, with Flowers and Garlands, and such violent expressions of their admiration and joy, as if Flaminius a young man (about some thirty three) had not also been very strong, hee must have dyed of no other death then their kindness, while every one striving to touch his hand, they bore him up and down the field with an unruly throng, full of such Ejaculations as these; How! Is there a people in the world, that at their own Charge, at their own Peril, will fight for the liberty of another! Did they live at the next door unto this fire! Or what kinde of men are these, whose business it is to pass Seas, that the World may be governed with righteousness! The Cities of Greece and of Asia shake off their Iron fetters at the voyce of a Cryer! Was it madneſs to imagine ſuch a thing; and is it done! O Vertue! O Felicity! O Fame!

In this example your Lordſhips have a Donation of Liberty, or of Italian Right unto a people, by reſtitution to what they had formerly enjoyed; and ſome particular Men, Families, or Cities, according unto their merit of the Romans, if not upon this, upon like occaſions were gratified with Extinity.

But Philips ſhare by this means did not pleaſe him; wherefore the League was broken by his ſon Perſeus. And the Macedonians thereupon for the ſecond time conquered by Æmilius Paulus, their King taken, and they ſometime after the Victory, ſummoned unto the Tribunal of the General; where remembring how little hope they ought to have of pardon, they expected ſome dreadful ſentence. When Æmilius in the firſt place declared the Macedonians to be free, in the full poſſeſſion of their Lands, Goods, and Laws, with right to elect annual Magiſtrates, yeelding and paying unto the people of Rome one half of the Tribute which they were accuſtomed to pay unto their own Kings. This done he went on, making ſo skilful a diviſion of the Country, in order to the methoditing of the people, and caſting them into a form of popular Government. That the Macedonians being firſt ſurprized with the vertue of the Romans, began now to alter the ſcene of their Admiration, that a ſtranger to them ſhould do ſuch things for them in their own Country, and with ſuch facility, as they had never ſo much as once imagined to be poſſible. Nor was this all, for Æmilius, as if not dictating to conquered Enemies, but to ſome well-deſerving friends, gave them in the laſt place Laws, ſo ſuitable, and contrived with ſuch care and prudence, that long uſe and experience (the only Correctreſs of works of this nature) could never finde a fault in them.

In this Example you have a Donation of Liberty, or of Italian Right, unto a people that had not taſted of it before, but were now taught how to uſe it.

My Lords, The Royaliſts ſhould compare what we are doing, and we what hitherto we have done for them, with this example, example. It is a shame that while wee are boasting up our selves above all, we should be so far from imitating such examples as these, that we do not so much as understand, that if Government be the parent of manners, where there be no Heroical Vertues, there is no Heroical Government.

But the Macedonians rebelling (at the name of a false Philip) the third time against the Romans, were by them judged incapable of Liberty, and reduced by Metellus unto a Province.

Now whereas it remains, that I explain the nature of a Province, I shall rather choose that of Sicely, because having been the first that the Romans made, the descriptions of the rest relate to it.

We have so received the Sicilian Cities into amity (saith Cicero) that they enjoy their ancient Laws, and upon no other condition than of the same obedience unto the people of Rome, which they formerly yeelded unto their own Princes or Superiors. So the Sicilians, whereas they had been parcelled forth unto divers Princes, and into divers States, the cause of perpetual Wars, whereby hewing one another down, they became Sacrifices unto the ambition of their Neighbours, or of some Invader, were now received at the old rate into a new Protection, which could hold them, and in which no Enemy durst touch them; nor was it possible (as the case stood with such) for the Sicilians to receive, or for the Romans to give more.

A Roman Province is defined by Sigonius, a Region having Provinciall Right. Provinciall Right in general, was to bee Governed by a Roman Prætor, or Consull, in matter, at least, of State, and of the Militia. And by a Quæstor, whose Office it was to receive the Publicks Revenue. Provinciall Right in particular, was different, according unto the different Leagues, or Agreements between the Common-wealth, and the People reduced unto a Province. (Siculi hoc jure sunt, ut quod civis cum cive agat, domi certet suis legibus, quod Siculus cum Siculo non ejusdem Civitatis, ut de eo Prætor Judices, ex P. Rupilii Decreto, Sortiatur. Quod privatus a Populo petit, aut populus a privato, Cicero.

vato, Senatus ex aliqua Civitate, qui judicet, datur, cui alterna Civitates rejectæ sunt. Quod civis Romanus a Siculo petit, Siculo Judex datur; quod Siculus a cive Romano, civis Romanus datur. Cæterarum rerum selecti Judices. ex civium Romanorum conventu proponi solent. Inter aratores & decumanos lege frumentaria, quam Hieronicam appellant, judicia sunt.) Because the rest would oblige mee unto a discourse too large for this place, it shall suffice that I have shewed you how it was in Sicely.

My Lords, Upon the Fabrick of your Provinciall Orbe I shall not hold you, because it is sufficiently described in the Order, and I cannot beleeve that you think it inferiour to the way of a Prætor and a Quæstor. But whereas the Provinciall way of the Roman Common-wealths was that whereby shee held the Empire of the World, and your Orbes are intended to bee capable at the least of the like use, there may arise many Controversies. As whether such a course bee lawfull, whether it bee feizable? and seeing that the Romans ruined upon that point, whether it would not bee unto the destruction of the Common-wealth?

For the first, If the Empire of a Common-wealth bee a Patronage, to ask whether it bee lawfull for a Commonwealth to aspire unto the Empire of the World, is to ask whether it bee lawfull for her to do her duty, or to put the World into a better condition than it was before.

And to ask whether this bee feizable, is to ask why the Oceanar, being under the like administration of Government, may not do as much with two hundred men as the Roman did with one hundred, for comparing their Commonwealths in their rise, the difference is yet greater. Now that Rome (seris Avaritia Luxuriaque) through the naturall thirst of her constitution, came at length with the fulnesse of her Provinces, to burst her self, this is no otherwise to bee understood, than as when a man that from his owne evill constitution, had contracted the Dropsie, dyes with drinking: It being apparent that in case her Agrarian had held, shee could never have been

thus ruined; And I have already demonſtrated that your Agrarian being once poyſed, can never break or ſwerve.

Wherefore to draw towards ſome Concluſion of this Diſcourſe, let mee inculcate the uſe, by ſelecting a few conſiderations out of many. The regard had in this place unto the Empire of the World, appertaineth to a well-ordered Commonwealth, more eſpecially for two Reaſons.

2 The danger that you would run, in the omiſſion of ſuch a Government.

The facility of this enterprize, upon the grounds already laid, muſt needs bee great, foraſmuch as the Empire of the World hath been, both in reaſon and experience, the neceſſary conſequence of a Common-wealth of this nature only, for though it have been given unto all kinds to drive at it, inaſmuch as that of Athens, or Lacedemon, if the one had not hung in the others light, might have gained it, yet could neither of them have held it; not Athens, through the manner of her propagation, which being by down-right Tyranny, could not preſerve what ſhee had; nor Lacedemon, becauſe ſhee was overthrown by the weight of a leſs Conqueſt. The facility then of this great Enterprize, being peculiar unto that popular Government; I ſhall conſider it, Firſt, In gaining; And ſecondly, In holding.

For the former (Volenti non fit injuria) it is ſaid of the people under Eumenes, that they would not have changed their ſubjection for liberty, wherefore the Romans gave them no diſturbance.

If a people be contented with their Government, it is a certain ſign that it is good, and much good do them with it. The ſword of the Magiſtracy is for a terror unto them that do evil.

Eumenes had the fear of God, or of the Romans before his eyes, concerning ſuch hee hath given you no Commiſſion.

But

But till wee can say here are the Romans, where is Eumenes? Do not think that the late appearances of God unto you, have been altogether for your selves; he hath surely seen the affliction of your Brethren, and heard their cry, by reason of their task-masters. For to believe otherwise, is not only to be mindlesse of his wayes, but altogether deaf. If you have ears to hear, this is the way in which you will assuredly bee called upon: for if while there is no Stock of Liberty, no sanctuary of the afflicted, it bee a common object, to behold a people calling themselves out of the pan of one Prince into the fire of another: what can you think, but if the world should see the Roman Eagle again, shee would renew her age, and her flight, nor ever did shee spread her wing with better Omen, then will be read in your Ensigns, which if called in by an oppressed people, they interpose between them and their Yoak; the people themselves must either do nothing in the mean time, or have no more pains to take for their wished fruit than to gather it, if that bee not done for them. Wherefore this must needs bee easy, and yet you have a greater facility, than is in the arm of flesh, for if the cause of mankind, bee the cause of God, the Lord of Hosts will bee your Captain, and you shall bee a praise unto the Earth.

The facility of holding, is in the way of your Propagation, if you take that of Athens and Lacedemon, you shall rain snares, but either catch or hold nothing. Lying lips are an abomination unto the Lord, if setting up for liberty you impose yoaks, hee will assuredly destroy you; On the other side, to go about a work of this nature, by a League without an head is to abdicate that Magistracy, wherewithall hee hath not only indued you, but whereof hee will require an account of you; for cursed is hee that doth the work of the Lord negligently. Wherefore you are to take the course of Rome: if you have subdued a Nation that is capable of liberty, you shall make them a present of it, as did Flaminius unto Greece, and Æmilius unto Macedon, reserving unto your selves some part of that revenue, which was legally paid unto the former Government, together with the right of being head of the League, which includeth such Levyes of men and mony as shall bee necessary for the carrying on of the publick work, for if a people have by your means attained unto freedom, they owe both unto the cause and you, such aid as may propagate the like fruit unto the rest of the world. But whereas every Nation is not capable of her liberty unto this degree, lest you be put, to doing and undoing of things, as the Romans were in Macedon, you shall diligently observe what Nation is fit for her liberty unto this degree, and what not; which is to be done by two marks, the first if shee bee willing to help the Lord against the mighty; for if shee have no care of the Liberty of mankind, shee deserveth not her own; but because in this you may be deceived by pretences, which continuing for a while specious, may afterwards vanish; the other is more certain, and that is, if shee bee capable of an equal Agrarian; which that it was not observed by excellent Æmilius, in his Donation of Liberty, and introduction of a Popular State among the Macedonians, I am more then moved to believe; for two reasons; the first because at the same time the Agrarian was odious unto the Roman Patricians; the second, that the Pseudo-Phillip could afterwards so easily recover Macedon, which could not have happened, but by the Nobility, and their impatience having great estates, to bee equalled with the people, for that the people should otherwise, at the meer sound of a name, have thrown away their liberty, is incredible; Wherefore bee assured, that the Nation where you cannot establish an equal Agrarian, is incapable of her liberty, as to this kinde of Donation. For example, except the Aristocracy in Marpesia, bee dissolved, neither can that people, have their liberty there, nor you govern at home, for they continuing still liable to bee sold by their Lords, unto forrain Princes, there will never (especially in a Country of which there is no other profit to be made) bee want of such Merchants and drovers, while you must be the market where they are to receive their ſecond payment.

Nor can the Ariſtocracy there be diſſolved but by your means, in relation whereunto, you are provided with your Provincial Orb, which being proportioned unto the meaſure of the Nation that you have vindicated or conquered, will eaſily hold it; for there is not a people in the world more difficult to be held than the Marpeſians, which though by themſelves is be given unto their own nature, is truly to be attributed unto that of their Country: Nevertheleſs you having nine thouſand men upon the continual guard of it, that threatned by any ſudden inſurrection, have places of retreat; and an Army of forty thouſand men upon a dayes warning ready to march unto their reſcue, it is not to be rationally ſhewn, which way they can poſsibly ſlip out of your hands; and if a man ſhall think, that upon a Province more remote, and divided by Sea, you have not the like hold; he hath not ſo well conſidered your wings, as your talons, your ſhipping being of ſuch nature, as maketh the deſcent of your Armies almoſt of equal facility in any Country, ſo that what you take, you hold, both becauſe your Militia being already populous, will bee of great growth in it ſelf, and through your confederates; by whom in taking and holding, you are ſtill more inabled to take and hold.

Nor ſhall you eaſilier hold, then the people under your Empire or Patronage be held (My Lords, I would not go unto the door, to ſee whether it be (rimarum plena) cloſe ſhut, this is no under-board dealing, nor game, at which he ſhall have any advantage againſt you that ſees your Cards, but to the contrary the advantage ſhall be your own) for with eighteen thouſand men (which number I put, becauſe it circulates your Orb by the annual change of ſix thouſand) having ſet your matters in the order ſhewn, you will be able to hold the greateſt Province, and eighteen thouſand men, allowing them greater pay than any Prince ever gave, will not ſtand the Province in one Million revenue; In conſideration whereof, they ſhall have have their own eſtates free unto themſelves, be governed by their own Laws and Magiſtrates; which if the Revenue of the Province be in dry rent (as there may be ſome that are four times as big as Oceana) forty millions, will bring it with that of induſtry (to ſpeak with the leaſt) unto twice the value, ſo that the people there, who at this day are ſo oppreſſed, that they have nothing at all whereupon to live, ſhall for one Million paid unto you, receive at the leaſt ſeventy nine unto their proper uſe, in which place I appeal unto any man, whether the Empire deſcribed, can be other than the Patronage of the world.

Now if you adde unto the propagation of Civil Liberty, (what is ſo natural unto this Commonwealth that it cannot bee omitted) the Propagation of the Liberty of Conſcience, this Empire, this Patronage of the world, is the Kingdome of Chriſt. For as the Kingdome of God the Father, was a Commonwealth, ſo ſhall be the Kingdome of God the Son; The people ſhall be willing in the day of his power, Pſal. 110. 3.

Having ſhewed you in this, and other places ſome of thoſe ineſtimable benefits of this kinde of Government, together with the natural and facile emanation of them from their fountain. I come (leſt God, who hath appeared unto you, for hee is the God of Nature, in the glorious Conſtellation of theſe ſubordinate cauſes, whereof wee have hitherto been taking the true elevation, ſhould ſhake off the duſt of his feet againſt you) to warn you of your dangers, which you, not taking the opportunity, will run by omiſſion.

Machiavil ſpeaking of the defect of Venice, through her want of proper Arms, cryes out (Queſto tagliogli le gambe da montar in cielo) this cut her wings, and ſpoyled her mount unto heaven. If you lay your Commonwealth upon any other foundation, then the people, you fruſtrate your ſelf of proper Arms, and ſo loſe the Empire of the World, nor is this all, but ſome other Nation will have it.

Columbus offered gold unto one of your Kings, through whoſe happy incredulity, another Prince hath drunk the poyſon, even unto the consumption of his people; but I do not offer you a nerve of war that is made of purse-strings, such an one as hath drawn the face of the earth into convulsions, but such an one as is natural unto her health and beauty. Look you to it, where there is tumbling and tossing upon the bed of sickness, it must end in death, or recovery. Though the people of the world in the dregs of Gothick Empire, bee yet tumbling and tossing upon the bed of sickness, they cannot dye, nor is there any means of recovery for them, but by ancient prudence, whence of necessity it must come to pass, that this drug bee better known. If France, Italy and Spain, were not all sick, all corrupted together, there would bee none of them so, for the sick would not bee able to withstand the sound, nor the sound to preserve her health without curing of the sick. The first of these Nations (which if you stay her leasure, will in my minde bee France) that recovers the health of ancient Prudence, shall assuredly govern the world, for what did Italy when shee had it? And as you were in that, so shall you in the like case bee reduced unto a Province, I do not speak at randome. Italy (L. Æmilio Papo. C. Atilio Regulo Cos.) armed upon the Gallick Tumult that then happened of her self, and without the aid of forreign Auxiliaries, Seventy thousand Horse, and Seven hundred thousand Foot; but as Italy is the least of those three Countries in extent, so is France the greatest in Population.

My dear Lords, Oceana is as the Rose of Sharon, and the Lilly of the Valley. As the Lilly among thorns, such is my Love among the Daughters. She is comely as the Tents of Kedar, and terrible as an Army with Banners. Her neck is as the Tower of David, builded for an armory, whereon there hang a thousand Bucklers, and Shields of mighty men. Let me hear thy voyce in the morning, whom my soul loveth. The South hath dropped, and the West is breathing upon thy Garden of Spices. Arise Queen of the earth, Arise holy Spouse of Jesus, For lo the Winter is past, the Rain is over and gone. The Flowers appear on the earth, the time of ſinging of birds is come, and the voyce of the Turtle is heard in our Land. Ariſe I ſay, come forth, and do not tarry, ah! wherefore ſhould mine eyes behold thee by the rivers of Babylon, hanging thy harpes upon the willows, thou faireſt among women?

Excellent Patriots. If the people bee ſoveraign, here is that which eſtabliſheth their Prærogative. If wee be ſincere, here is that which diſburdeneth our ſouls, maketh good all our ingagements. If we be charitable, here is that which imbraceth all Partyes. If wee would bee ſetled, here is that which will ſtand.

If our Religion bee any thing elſe but a vain boaſt, ſcratching and defacing humane nature or reaſon, which being the image of God, makes it a kinde of murther, here is that Empire, whence Juſtice ſhall runne down like a river, and judgement like a mighty ſtream, Amos 5. 24. who is it then that calls us? or what is in our way? a Lyon, is it not the Dragon that old Serpent? for what wretched ſhifts are theſe? Here is a great deal, might wee not have ſome of this at one time, and ſome at another?

My Lords, permit me to give you the ſum or brief

Epitome of the whole Common-Wealth.

Epitome of the whole Common wealth.

The Center of Fundamental Laws are, firſt the Agrarian propoztioned at two thouſand pounds a yeat in Land, lying and being within the proper territozy of Oceana, and ſo ſtating Pzopziety in Land at ſuch a ballance, that the power can never swarve out of the hands of the many.

Secondly, The Ballot conveying this equal say, from the root by an equal election or rotation, unto the branches of Magistracy or Soveraign power.

The Orbes of this Common-wealth being Civil, Military, or Provincial, are as it were cast upon this Wold or Center, by the Divisions of the People; first into Citizens and Servants: Secondly, Into Youth and Elders: Thirdly, Into such as have one hundred pound a year in Lands, Goods, or Monies, who are of the horse, and such as have under, who are of the Foot. Fourthly, by their usual residence into Parishes, hundreds, and Tribes.

The Civil Orbs consist of the Elders, and are thus Created, every Monday next ensuing the last of December, the Elders in every Parish, elect the fifth man to be a Deputy, half a days work, every Monday next ensuing the last of January, the Deputies meet at their respective hundred, and elect out of their number one Justice of the Peace, one Jury-man, one Coroner, and one High-Constable of the Foot; one days work.

Every Monday next ensuing the last of Febyuary, the hundreds meet at their respective Tribe, and there elect the Lords High-Sheriffe, Lieutenant, Custos Rotulorum, the Conductor, the two Censors out of the horse, the Magistrates of the Tribe, and of the hundreds, with the Jury-men constituting the Phylarch, assist in their respective Offices at the Assizes, hold the Quarter Sessions, &c. The day following the Tribe elects, the annual Galary, consisting of two Knights, and three Deputies out of the horse, with four Deputies of the Foot, thereby indued with Power, as Magistrates of the whole Nation for the term of three years: an Officer chosen at the hundred, may not bee elected a Magistrate of the Tribe, but a Magistrate or Officer, either of the the Hundred or of the Tribe, being elected into the Galaxy may substitute any one of his own Order, unto his Magistracy or Office in the Hundred, or in the Tribe: This of the Nutter is two days work, so the body of the People is annually at the charge of three days work, and an half, in their own Tribes, for the perpetuation of their power, receiving over and above the Magistracies so divided among them.

Every Monday next ensuing the last of March; The Knights being an Hundred in all the Tribes, take their places in the Senate; The Knights having taken their Places in the Senate, make the third Region of the same; and the house proceeds unto the Senatorian Elections. Senatorian Elections are annual, biennial, or emergent.

The Annual are performed by the Tropick.

The Tropick is a Scedule consisting of two parts, the first by which the Senatorian Magistrates are elected, the second, by which the Senatorian Councils are perpetuated.

The first part is of this Tenor.

The Lord Orator.
The first Censor.
The second Censor.
} Annual Magistrates, and therfore such as may bee elected out of any Region; the term of every region, having at the Tropick one year at the least unexpired.

} Triennial Magistrates, and therefore such as can bee chosen out of the third Region only, as that alone, which hath the term of three years unexpired.

The Strategus and the Orator sitting are Consuls, or Presidents of the Senate.

The

The Strategus marching is General of the Army, in which case a new Strategus is elected to sit in his room.

The Strategus sitting with the six Commissioners being Counsellors of the Nation, are the Signory of the Commonwealth.

The Censors are Magistrates of the Ballot, Presidents of the Council for Religion, and Chancellors of the Universities.

The second part of the Tropick, perpetuateth the Council of State, by the election of five Knights, out of the first Region of the Senate, to be the first Region of that Council, consisting of fifteen Knights, five in every Region.

The like is done by the election of four into the Council of Religion, and four into the Council of Trade, out of the same Region in the Senate, each of these Councils consisting of twelve Knights, four in every Region.

But the Council of Warre consisting of nine Knights, three in every Region, is elected by and out of the Council of State, as the other Councils are elected by and out of the Senate; And if the Senate add a Juncta of nine Knights more, elected out of their own number, for the term of three months, the Council of Warre by vertue of that addition, is Dictator of Oceana for the said term.

The Signory joyntly or severally hath right of Session, and Suffrage in every Senatorian Council, and to propose either unto the Senate, or any of them. And every Region in a Council electing one weekly Proposer; any two of those Proposers, have power also to propose unto their respective Council, as the proper and peculiar proposers of the same: for which cause they hold an Academy, where any man either by word of mouth, or writing, may propose unto the Proposers.

of the house, unto the Resident of France, he visits him: the Resident of France, removes to Spain, he of Spain, to Venice, hee of Venice, to Constantinople, and hee of Constantinople returns. So the Orbe of the Residents, is wheeled about in eight years, by the triennial election of one Embassadour in Ordinary.

The last kind of Elections is emergent. Emergent Elections are made by the Scrutiny. Election by Scrutiny, is when a Competitor being made by a Council, and brought into the Senate: The Senate chooseth four more Competitors unto him, and putting all the five unto the Ballot, hee who hath most above half the Suffrages is the Magistrate. The Polemarches, or Field-Officers, are chosen by the Scrutiny of the Council of Warre: An Embassadour extraordinary by the Scrutiny of the Council of State: the Judges and Serjeants at Law by the Scrutiny of the Seal, and the Barons, and prime Officers of the Exchequer, by the Scrutiny of the Treasury.

The opinion, or opinions that are legitimately proposed unto any Council must bee debated by the same, and so many as are resolved upon the debate, are introduced into the Senate, where they are debated and resolved, or rejected by the whole house: that which is resolved by the Senate is a Decree, which is good in matter of State, but no law except it bee proposed unto, and resolved by the Prerogative.

The Deputies of the Galary being three horse and four foot in a Tribe, amount in all the Tribes unto one hundred and fifty horse, and two hundred foot, which having entred the Prerogative, and chosen their Captains, Cornet and Ensign (Triential Officers) make the third Classis consisting of one Troop, and one Company, and so joyning with the whole Prerogative, elect four annual Magistrates, called Tribunes, whereof two are of the horse, and two of the foot, these have the command of the Prerogative Sessions and Suffrage in the Council of war, and Sessions without Suffrage in the Senate.

The Senate having past a Decree which they would propose unto the people, causeth it to be printed and published, or promulgated for the space of six weeks, which being Ordered, they choose their Propolers, The Propolers must bee Magistrates, that is, the Commissioners of the Seal, those of the Treasury, or the Censors. These being chosen, desire the Muster of the Tribunes, and appoint the day. The people being assembled at the day appointed, and the Decree proposed, that which is proposed by authority of the Senate, and commanded by the People is the Law of Oceana, or an Act of Parliament.

So the Parliament of Oceana consisteth of the Senate proposing, and the People resolving.

The People, or Prerogative are also the Supream Judicatory of this Nation, having power of hearing and determining all Causes of appeal from all Magistrates, or Courts Provinciall, or Domestick, as also to question any Magistrate, the term of his Magistracy being expired: if the Case be introduced by the Tribunes or any one of them.

The Military Orbs consist of the Youth, that is, such as are from eighteen to thirty years of age: and are thus created.

Every Wednesday next ensuing the last of December, the Youth of every Parish assembling, elect the fifth of their number to be their Deputies, the Deputies of the Youth, are called Stratiots, and this is the first Essay.

Every Wednesday next ensuing the last of January, the Stratiots assembling at the hundred, elect their Captain and their Ensign, and fall to their game.

Every Wednesday next ensuing the last of Febuary, the Stratiots are received by the Lord Lieutenant their Commander mander in Chief, with the Conductors and the Censors; and having been disciplin'd and entertained with other Games, are called unto the Venes, where they elect the second Essay, consisting of two hundred horse and six hundred foot in a Tribe, that is, of ten thousand horse, and thirty thousand foot in all the Tribes, which is the standing Army of this Nation, to march at any warning; they also elect at the same time, a part of the third Essay, by the mixture of balls marked with the letter M. and the letter P. for Marpesia and Panopea, they of either mark being ten horse and fifty foot in a Tribe, that is, five hundred horse and two thousand foot in all the Tribes; which are forthwith to march to their respective Provinces.

But the third Essay of this Nation more properly so called, is when the Strategus with the Polemarches (the Senate and the People, or the Dictator having Decreed a Warre) receive in return of his Warrants the second Essay from the hands of the Conductors at the Randezvouz of Oceana, which Army marching with all Accommodations, Provided by the Council of Warre, the Senate elects a new Strategus, and the Lords Lieutenants, a new second Essay.

A Youth except he bee an onely sonne, refusing any one of his three Essays without sufficient cause, shewn unto the Phylarch, or the Censors, is incapable of Magistracy, and is fined a fift part of his yearly rent, or of his Estate for Protection. In case of Invasion the Elders are obliged unto like duty with the Youth, and upon their own Charge.

Four Knights out of the first Region falling, are elected in the Senate, to bee the first Region of the Provincial Orbe of Marpesia, these being triennial Magistrates, take their places in the Provincial Council, consisting of twelve knights, five in every Region, each Region choosing their weekly Provosts, of the Council thus constituted, one knight more chosen out of the same Region to the Senate, being an annual Magistrate to be President, with power to propose, and the opinions proposed by the President, or any two of the Provosts are debated by the Council, and if occasion be of further power or instruction, than they yet have transmitted unto the Council of State, with which the Provincial is to hold Intelligence.

The President of this Council is also Strategus, or General of the Provincial Army, wherefore the Conductors upon notice of his Election, and appointment of his Randezvous, deliver unto him the Stratiots of his Letter, which he takes with him into his Province: and the Provincial Army having received the new Strategus, with the third Tassis, the Council dismisseth the old Strategus with the first Tassis. The like is done by Pansas, and any other Provincial.

But whereas the term of every other Magistracy or election in this Common-wealth, whether annual or triennial, requireth an equal Vacation, the term of a Provincial Counsellor or Magistrate, requireth no vacation at all. The Quorum of a Provincial, as also that of every other Council and assembly, requireth two thirds in a time of health, and one third in time of sickness.

I think I have omitted nothing, but the Props and Scaffolds which are not of use but in building. And how much is here? Shew me another Commonwealth in this compass? How many things? Shew me another intire Government consisting but but of thirty Orders. If you go to ſuit there lye unto ſome of your Courts two hundred original Writs; If you ſtir your hand, there go more nerves and bones unto the motion, If you play, you have more Cards in the pack; nay you could not ſit with your eaſe in that chair, if it conſiſted not of more parts, will you not allow unto your Legiſlator, what you can afford your Upholdſter; unto the Throne, what is neceſſary to a Chair?

My Lords, If you will have fewer Orders in a Commonwealth you will have more, for where ſhe is not perfect at firſt, every day, every houre will produce a new Order, the end whereof is to have no Order at all, but to grinde with the chick of ſome Demigogi; Is hee providing already for his golden Thumb? Lift up your heads; Away with Ambition, that fulſome complexion of a Stateſ-man, tempered like Sylla's (Lutea cum ſanguine) with blood and muck. And the Lord give unto his Senators wiſdome, and make our faces to ſhine, that we may be a light unto them that ſit in darkneſs, and the ſhadow of death to guide their feet in the way of peace.—In the Name of God, What's the matter!—

Philadelphus the Secretary of the Council, having performed his taſk in reading the ſeveral Orders, as you have ſeen, upon the receit of a Packet, it ſhould ſeem from his correſpondent Boccalini, Secretary of Parnaſſus, in reading one of the letters, burſt forth into ſuch a violent paſſion of weeping, and down-right howling, that your Legiſlators being ſtartled with the apprehenſion of ſome horrid news, one of them had no ſooner ſnatched the letter out of his hand, then the reſt crying Read, Read, he obeyed in this manner.

The third inſtant, his Phœbean Majeſty, having taken the nature of free States into his Royal conſideration, and being ſteadily perſwaded, that the Laws in ſuch Governments are incomparably better, and more aſſuredly directed unto the good of mankinde, than in any other, that the courage of ſuch a people is the apteſt tindar, unto noble fire, that the genius of ſuch a ſoyl is that wherein the roots of good literature are leaſt worm-worm-eaten with Pestilentisme, and where their fruits have ever come unto the greatest maturity, and highest relish, conceived such a loathing of their Ambition and Tyranny, who usurping the liberty of their native Countries, become slaves to themselves, in as much as be it never so contrary unto their own nature or conscience, they have taken the earnest of sin, and are ingaged to persecute all them that are good. (For, Nemo unquam imperium flagitio quæsitum bonis artibus exercuit) with the same or greater right, than is ordained by Laws for the wicked, assembled all the Senators residing in the learned Court at the Theater of Pompeius, where he caused Cæsar the Dictator to come upon the Stage, and his Sister Octavia, with his Nephew Augustus, Julia his Daughter, with the children which she had by Marcus Agrippa, Lucius, and Cajus Cæsars, Agrippa Postumus, Julia, and Agrippina, with the numerous Progeny which she bare unto her renowned husband Germanicus, to enter. A miserable Scene in any, but most deplorable in the eyes of Cæsar, thus beholding what Havock his prodigious ambition, not satisfied with his own bloody ghost, had made upon his more innocent Remains, even unto the total extinction of his Family. For it is (seeing where there is any humanity, there must be some compassion) not to be spoken without tears, that of the full branches deriving from Octavia, the elder sister, and Julia the Daughter of Augustus, there should not be one fruit or blossome that was not cut off, or blasted, by the Sword, Famine, or Poyson. Now might the great soul of Cæsar have been full, and yet that which powred in as much or more, was to behold that execrable race of the Claudii, having hunted, and sucked his blood with the thirst of Tygers, to be rewarded with the Roman Empire, and remain in full possession of the famous Patrimony. A spectacle to pollute the light of heaven. Nevertheless as if Cæsar had not yet enough, his Phœbean Majesty caused to be introduced on the other side of the Theater, the most illustrious and happy Prince Andrea Doria, with his dear posterity, imbraced by the soft and constant arms of the City Genua, into whose bosome, ever fruit-fruitful in her gratitude, he had dropp'd her fair liberty like the dew of heaven, which when the Sun is gone he can't behold, and how much more fresh that Laurel was worn with a riot in the hearts of the people, than that which hee had torn off, he fell into such horrid distortion of limbs and countenance, that the Senators who had thought themselves steel and flint at such an object, having hitherto stood in their reverent snow like thawing Alpes, now covered their faces with their large sleeves.

My Lords (said the Archon rising) witty Philadelphus, hath given us a grave admonition in a dreadful Tragedy (Discite justitiam moniti, & non temnere Divos) Great and glorious Cæsar, the highest character of flesh, yet could not rule but by that part of man, which is the beast, but a Commonwealth is a Monarchy, to bear God is King, in as much as reason his dictate, is her Soveraign Power.

Which said, he adjourned the Council. And the Model being soon after promulged (Quorum facta, fusisque hostibus Gentes, transfugæ, pulsæ populo) the Scarves and the Blinds clapt into hands.

LIBERTAS

WHereas his Highneſs and the Council, in the framing of the model promulgated, have not had any private intereſt, or ambition, but the fear of God, and the good of this people before their eyes, and it remains their deſire, that this great Work may bee carried on accordingly, this preſent greeting is to inform the good people of this Land, that as the Council of Prytans ſate, during the framing of the model, to receive from time to time, ſuch propoſitions as ſhould be offered, by any wiſe hearted or publick ſpirited man, towards the inſtitution of a well ordered Common-Wealth, ſo the ſaid Council is to ſit as formerly in the great Hall of the Pantheon, during Promulgation gation, which is to continue for the ſpace of three months, to receive, weigh, and as there ſhall bee occaſion, tranſmit unto the council of Legiſlators, all ſuch objections as ſhall be made againſt the ſaid Model, whether in the whole, or in any part. Wherefore that nothing bee done rathly, or without conſent of the people, ſuch of what party ſoever, with whom there may remain any doubts or difficulties, are deſired with all convenient ſpeed to addreſs themſelves unto the ſaid Prytans, where if ſuch objections, doubts, or difficulties receive ſolution unto the ſatisfaction of the auditory, they ſhall have publick thanks, but if the ſaid objections, doubts, or difficulties, receive no ſolution unto the ſatisfaction of the auditory, then the model promulgated ſhall bee reviewed, and the party that was the occaſion of the review, ſhall receive publick thanks, together with the beſt horſe in his Highneſſes Stable, and bee one of the Council of Legiſlators. And ſo God have you in his keeping.

I ſhould now write the ſame Council of the Prytans, but for two reaſons, the one, that having had but a ſmall time for that which is already done, I am over-laboured; The other, that there may be new objections: Wherefore if my Reader have any ſuch as to the Model, I intreat him to addreſs himſelf by way of Oration, as it were unto the Prytans that when this rough draught draught comes to be a work, his ſpeech being faithfully inſerted in this place, may give, or receive correction unto amendment. For what is written will be weighed but converſation, in theſe dayes is a game, at which they are beſt provided that have light Gold.

It is like the ſport of women that make flowers of ſtraws, which muſt be ſtuck up, but may not be touched: Nor, which is worſe, is this the fault of converſation onely. But to the Examiner, I ſay, If to invent method, and to teach an art, be all one, Let him ſhew that this Method is not truly invented, or this Art is faithfully taught.

Ariſt. Rhet.

I cannot conclude a Circle, (and ſuch is this Commonwealth) without turning the end into the beginning. The time of Promulgation being expired, the Surveyors were ſent down, who having in due ſeaſon made report that their work was perfect, the Orators followed, under the adminiſtration of which officers, & Magiſtrates the Commonwealth was ratified and eſtabliſhed by the whole body of the people, Curiatis, Centuriatis, and Tributis Comitiis. And the Orators being by vertue of their Scroles or lots, members of their reſpective Tribes, were elected each firſt Knight of the third Liſt, or Galaxy: Wherefore having at their return, aſſiſted the Archon in putting the Senate, and the People or Prerogative into motion, they abdicated the Magiſtracy both of Orators and Legiſlators.

The Corollary.

FOR the rest (sayes Plutarch closing up the story of Lycurgus) when he saw that his Government had taken root, and was in the very Plantation strong enough to stand by it self; he conceived such a delight within him, as GOD is described by Plato to have done, when he had finished the Creation of the World, and saw his owne Orbes move below him: For in the Art of Man, being the imitation of nature, which is the * Art of GOD, there is nothing so like the first Call of beautifull Order, out of Chaos and Confusion, as the Architecture of a well order'd Commonwealth. Wherefore Lycurgus seeing in effect, that his Orders were good, fell into deep Contemplation how he might render them, so far forth as is in humane providence, unalterable and immortall. To which end he assembled the People, and remonstrated unto them, that for ought he could perceive, their Policy was already such, and so well established, as was sufficient to entayle upon them and theirs, that virtue and felicity whereof humane Life is Capable.

Nevertheless, there being another thing of greater Concernment then all the rest, whereof he was not yet provided to give them a perfect accompt, nor could, till he had consulted the Oracle of Apollo; he desired that they would observe his Lawes, without any change or alteration whatsoever, till his return from Delphos; unto which all the People chearfully and unanimously engaged themselves by promise, desiring him that he would make as much hast as he could. But Lycurgus before he went, began with the Kings and the Senators, and thence taking the whole People in Order, made them all swear unto that which they had promised, and then took his Journey. Being arrived at Delphos, he sacrificed unto Apollo, and afterwards enquired if the policy which he had established, were good and sufficient for a virtuous and an happy Life. (It hath been a Maxime with Legislators, not to give Checks unto the present Superstition, but to make the best use of it, as that which is alwayes the most powerfull with the People; otherwise though Plutarch being a Priest, was interested in the cause, there is nothing plainer then Cicero in his Book De Divinatione hath shewed it, that there was never any such thing as an Oracle, except in the Art of the Priests. But to be civill unto the Author.) The God answered Lycurgus, that his policy was exquisite, and that his City holding unto the strict observation of his forme of Government, should attain unto the height of fame and glory. Which Oracle Lycurgus causing to be written, failed not to send unto his Lacidemon. This done, that his Citizens might be for ever inviolably bound by their Oath, that they would alter nothing till his return, he took so firm a Resolution to dye in the Place, that from thence forward receiving no manner of food, he soone after performed it accordingly. Nor was he deceived in the Consequence, for his City became the first in glory and excellency of Goverment in the whole World. And so much for Lycurgus according to Plutarch.

My Lord Archon when he beheld not onely the rapture of motion, but of joy and harmony, into which his Sphears without any manner of Obstruction or enterfering, but as it had been naturally were cast, conceived not les of exultation in his Spirit, but saw no more necessity or reason why he should administer an Oath unto the Senate and the People, that they would observe his Institutions, then unto a Man in perfect health, and felicity of Constitution that he would not kill himself. Nevertheless whereas Christianity though it forbid violent hands, consisteth no lesse in Self denial then any other Religion, he resolved that all carnall Concupiscence should dye in the Place, to which end that no manner of Food might be left unto ambition, he entred into the Senate with an unanimous Applause, And having spoken of his Goverment as Lycurgus did when he assembled the People, abdicated the Magistracy of Archon. The Senate as strucken with astonishment continued silent, Men upon so suddain an Accident being altogether unprovided of what to say; till the Archon withdrawing, and being almost at the doore, divers of the Knights flew from their Places offering as it were to lay violent hands on him, while he escaping left the Senate with the tears in their eyes of Children that had lost their Father, and to rid himself of all farther importunity, retired unto a Country house of his, being remote and very private, in so much that no Man could tell for some time what was become of him. Thus the Law-Maker happened to be the first object and reflection of the Law made: For as Liberty of all things is the most welcome unto a People, so is there nothing more abhorrent from their nature then ingratitude. We accusing the Roman People of this Crime against some of their greatest Benefactors, as Camillus, heap mistake upon mistake, for being not so competent Judges of what belongs unto Liberty as they were,

were, we take upon us to be more competent Judges of virtue. But whereas virtue for being a vulgar thing among them, was of no leſſe rate then Jewels are with ſuch as wear the moſt; we are ſelling this ſtone which we have ignorantly raked out of the Roman ruders, at ſuch a rate as the Switz did that which they took in the Baggage of Charles of Burgundy: For that Camillus had ſtood more firme againſt the Ruine of Rome then her Capitol, was acknowledged: But on the other ſide that he ſtood as firme for the Patricians againſt the Liberty of the People was as plain; wherefore he never wanted of the People that would dye at his foot in the Field, nor that would withſtand him to his beard in the City. An example in which they that think that Camillus had wrong, neither doe themſelves right nor the People of Rome, who in this ſignifie no leſſe then that they had a ſcorn of ſlavery beyond the fear of Ruine, which is the height of Magnanimity. The like might be ſhewn by other examples, objected againſt this, and other Popular Government, as in the Baniſhment of Ariſtides the Juſt from Athens, by the Oſtraciſme, which firſt was no puniſhment, not even underſtood for ſo much as a diſparagement, but tended only to the Security of the Common-wealth, through the removall of a Citizen, whoſe Riches or Power with a party was ſuſpected, out of harms way for the ſpace of ten years, neither to the diminution of his Eſtate or Honour. And next though the virtue of Ariſtides might in it ſelf be unqueſtioned, yet for him under the name of the Juſt to become Univerſall Umpire of the People in all caſes, even to the neglect of the Legall wayes and orders of the Common-wealth, approached ſo much unto the Prince, that the Athenians doing Ariſtides no wrong, did their Government no more then right in removing him, which therefore is not ſo probable to have come to paſſe as Plutarch preſumeth, through the envy of Themiſtocles: ſeeing Ariſtides was far more popular then Themiſtocles, who ſoon after took the ſame walk upon a worſe occaſion. Wherefore as Machiavill for any thing ſince alleadged hath irrefragably proved that Popular Governments are of all other the leaſt ingratefull, ſo the obſcurity (I ſay) into which my Lord Archon had now withdrawn himſelf, cauſed an univerſall ſadneſſe and cloud in the minds of Men upon the glory of his riſing Common-wealth.

Much had been ventilated in private diſcourſe, and the People (for the Nation was divided into Parties that had not yet loſt their animoſities) being troubled, bent their eyes upon the Senate, when after ſome time ſpent in devotion, and the solemn Action of Thanksgiving, his Excellency Manarchus de Parado in the Tribe of Dorean, Lord Strategus of Oceana (though in a new Common-wealth a very Prudent Magistrate) proposed his part or Opinion in such manner unto the Council of State, that passing the Ballott of the same with great unanimity and applause, it was introduced into the Senate, where it past with greater. Wherefore the Decree being forthwith Printed and Published, Copies were returned by the Secretaries unto the Phylarches (which is the manner of Promulgation) and the Commissioners of the Seal, that is to say, the Right Honourable Phosphorus de Auge in the Tribe of Eudia, Dolabella d'Enyo in the Tribe of Turma, and Linceus de Stella in the Tribe of Modia being elected Propolers pro tempore, bespoke of the Tribunes a Muster of the People to be held that day 6 weeks, which was the time allowed for Promulgation, at the Halo.

The Satisfaction which the People throughout the Tribes received upon promulgation of the Decree, loaded the Carriers with weekly Letters between Friend & Friend, whether Magistrates or private Persons. But the day for Proposition being come, and the Prærogative upon the Place appointed in Discipline, Sanguine de Kingwood in the Tribe of Saltus Captain of the Phœnix marched by Order of the Tribune with his Troop unto the Piazza of the Pantheon, where his Trumpets entering into the great Hall by their Blazon gave notice of his Arrivall, at which the Serjant of the House came downe, and returning informed the Propolers, who descending were received at the foot of the Staires by the Captaine, and attended unto the Coaches of State, with which Calear de Gilvo in the Tribe of Phalera Master of the Horse, and the Ballotins upon their great Horses stood waiting at the Gate.

The Propolers being in their Coaches, the Traine being for the Pompe the same that is used at the reception of Embassadors, proceeded in this order, In the Front marched the Troop with the Cornet in the van, and the Captaine in the rear: next the Troop came the twenty Messengers or Trumpets; the Ballotins upon the Coryes with their Usher in the van, and the Master of the Horse in the Rear: Next the Ballotins Brotchus de Rumo in the Tribe of Bestis King of the Heruuldi with his fraternity in their Coats of Arms; And next unto S^r Brochus, Boristenes de Holiwater in the Tribe of Ace Master of the Ceremonies: The Mace and the Seale of the Chancery went immediately before the Coaches, and on either side the doore-keepers or Guard of the Senate with their Pole-axes, accompanied with some three or four hundred dred Footmen, belonging unto the Knights or Senators; The Trumpeters Ballotins, Guards, Poſtilions, Coach-men, and Foot-men being very gallant in the Liveries of the Common-wealth, but all except the Ballotins without hatts, in lieu whereof they wore black velvet calots being pointed with a little peake at the forehead. After the Propoſers, came a long file of Coaches full of ſuch Gentlemen as uſe to grace the Commonwealth upon like occaſions. In this poſture they moved ſlowly through the Streets, affording in the Gravity of the Pomp, and the welcomneſs of the end, a moſt reverent and acceptable Proſpect unto the People from the Pantheon to the Halo, being about half a mile, arrived at the Halo, where they found the Prerogative in a cloſe body inviron'd with Scaffolds that were covered with Spectators: The Tribunes received the Propoſers, and conducted them into a ſeat placed in front of the Tribe, like a Pulpit, but that it was of ſome length, and well adorned by the Herraulds, with all manner of Birds and Beaſts, ſave that they were ill Painted, and never a one of his naturall colour. The Tribunes were placed at a Table that ſtood below the long ſeat, thoſe of the Horſe in the middle, and thoſe of the Foot at either end, with each of them a bowle or baſon before him, that on the right hand being white, and the other green: in the middle of the Table ſtood a third which was red. And the Houſe-keeper of the Pavillion who had already delivered a proportion of dinner balls or pellets unto every one of the Tribe, now preſented boxes unto the Ballotins. But the Propoſers as they enter'd the Gallery, or long Seat, having put off their Hats by way of Salutation, were anſwered by the People with a ſhout; whereupon the younger Commiſſioners ſeated themſelves at either end, and the firſt ſtanding in the middle, ſpake after this manner.

My Lords,

I

My Lords, the People of OCEANA.

WHILE I find in my ſelf what a felicity it is to Salute you by this Name, and in every face anointed as it were with the Oyle of Gladneſſe, a full and ſufficient teſtimony of the like ſenſe. To goe about to feaſt you with words, who are already filled with that food of the mind, which being of pleaſing and wholeſome digeſtion, taketh in the difinition of true joy, were a needleſſe enterprize. I ſhall rather remember you of that thankfulneſſe which is due, then puff you up with any thing that might ſeeme vaine. Is it from the armes of fleſh that we derive theſe Bleſſings? Behold the Common-wealth of Rome falling upon her owne victorious Sword. Or is it from our own Wiſedome, whoſe Counſells had brought it even to that paſſe that we began to repent our ſelves of Victory? Far be it from us (my Lords) to Sacrifize unto our owne Nets, which we our Selves have ſo narrowly eſcaped; Let us rather lay our mouths in the duſt, and look up, (as was taught the other day when we were better inſtructed in this Seſſion) unto the Hills with our gratitude. Nevertheleſſe ſeeing we read how GOD upon neglect of his Prophets hath been provoked unto wrath; it muſt needs follow that he expecteth Honour ſhould be given unto them by whom he hath choſen to worke as his Inſtruments. For which cauſe nothing doubting of my warrant, I ſhall proceed unto that which more particularly concerneth the preſent occaſion, the diſcovery of my Lord Archons virtues and merit to be ever placed by this Nation in their true Meridian.

My Lords,

I Am not upon a ſubject which perſwadeth me to balk, but neceſſitateth me to ſeek out the greateſt examples. To begin with Alexander erecting Trophies common with his Sword and the Peſtilence; to what good of Mankind did he infect the ayre with his heaps of carkaſes? The ſword of war, if it be any otherwiſe uſed then as the ſword of magiſtracy for the feare and puniſhment of thoſe that doe evil, is as guilty in the ſight of GOD, as the Sword of a Murderer; nay more, for if the blood of Abel, of one innocent Man, cryed in the ears of of the Lord for Vengeance, What ſhall the blood of an innocent Nation? Of this kind of Empire, the Throne of Ambition, the quarry of a mighty Hunter, it hath been truly ſayd, that it is but a great Robbery. But if Alexander had reſtored the Liberty of Greece, and propagated it unto Mankind, he had done like my Lord Archon, and might have been truly call'd the Great. Alexander cared not to ſteale a victory, that would be given. But my Lord Archon hath torne away a victory which had been ſtolne, while we were tamely yeelding up Obedience unto a Nation reaping in our Fields, whoſe fields he hath ſubjected unto our Empire, and nayled them with his victorious Sword unto their native Caucaſus.

Machiavill gives an handſome Caveat, Let no man (ſayth he) be circumvented with the Glory of Cæſar, from the falſe reflection of their pens, who through the longer continuance of his Empire in the name then in the family, changed their freedome for flattery. But if a man would know truly what the Romans thought of Cæſar, lett him obſerve what they ſaid of Catiline.

And yet by how much he who hath perpetrated ſome heighnous Crime, is more execrable then he who did but attempt it: by ſo much is Cæſar more execrable then Catiline. To the contrary let him that would know what ancient and heroicall times, what the Greeks and Romans would both have thought and ſayd of my Lord Archon; Obſerve what they thought and ſayd of Solon, Lycurgus, Brutus, and Publicola. And yet by how much his vertue that is crown'd with the perfection of his worke, is beyond theirs, who were either inferiour in their ayme, or in their performance, by ſo much is my Lord Archon to be preferred before Solon, Lycurgus, Brutus, and Publicola.

Nor will we ſhun the moſt illuſtrious example of Scipio; this Hero, though never ſo little leſſe, yet was he not the founder of a Common-wealth, and for the reſt allowing his Vir- tue to have been of the moſt untainted ray, in what did it outſhine this of my Lord Archon? But if dazling the eyes of the Magiſtrates it over-awed Liberty, Rome might be allowed ſome excuſe that She did not like it, and I, if I admit not of this comparison. For where is my Lord Archon? Is there a Genius, how free ſoever, which in his preſence would not find it ſelf to be under power? He is ſhrunk into Clouds, he ſeeks obſcurity in a Nation that ſees by his light. He is im-impatient of his own Glory, leaſt it ſhould ſtand between you and your Liberty.

Liberty! What is that, if we may not be gratefull? And if we may, we have none: For who hath any thing he doth not owe? My Lords, there be ſome hard conditions of virtue: If this debt were exacted, it were not due; whereas being cancel'd, we are all entred into Bonds. On the other ſide, if we make ſuch payment as will not ſtand with a free People, we doe not enrich my Lord Archon, but Rob him of his whole eſtate, and of his immence glory.

Theſe Particulars had in due deliberation, and mature debate, according unto the orders of this Common-wealth. It is propoſed by Authority of the Senate to you my Lords the People of Oceana.

I. THat the Dignity and Office of Archon, or Protector of the Common-wealth of Oceana, be, and is hereby confer'd by the Senate and the People of Oceana, upon the moſt Illuſtrious Prince, and ſole Legiſlator of this Common-wealth, Olphaus Megaletor (Pater Patriæ) whom God preſerve, for the terme of his naturall Life.

II. That three hundred and fifty thouſand pounds per annum yet remaining of the ancient Revenue, be eſtated upon the ſaid illuſtrious Prince, or Lord Archon, for the ſaid terme, and to the propper and peculiar uſe of his Highneſſe.

III. That the Lord Archon have the reception of all Forreigne Embaſſadors, by and with the Councill of State, according unto the orders of this Common-wealth.

IV. That the Lord Archon have a ſtanding Army of twelve thouſand Men, defrayed upon a monethly tax, dureing the terme of three years, for the Protection of this Common-wealth, againſt diſſenting Parties, to be govern'd, directed, and Commanded by, and with the advice of the Council of War, according unto the Orders of this Common-wealth.

V. That this Common-wealth make no diſtinction of Perſons or Parties, but every man being Elected and ſworn, according unto the Orders of the ſame, ſhall be equally capable of Magiſtracy; or not Elected, ſhall be equally capable of Liberty, and the enjoyment of his Eſtate free from all other then common Taxes.

VI. That a man putting a diſtinction upon himſelf, refuſing the Oath upon Election, or declaring himſelf of a party, not conformable to the civil Government, may within any time of the three years ſtanding of the Army, tranſport himſelf and his Eſtate, without moleſtation or impediment, into any other Nation.

VII. That

VII. That in case there remain any distinction of Parties not conforming unto the civil Government of this Common-wealth, after the three years of the standing Army be expired, and the Common-wealth be thereby forced to prolong the terme of the said Army, the pay from thenceforth of the said Army, shall be levied upon the Estates of such parties so remaining unconformable unto the Civil Government.

The Proposer having ended his Oration, the Trumpets sounded, and the Tribunes of the Horse being mounted to view the Ballot, caused the Tribe which thronging up to the Speech, came almost round the Gallery, to retreat a matter of twenty paces, when Lincæus de Stella receiving the Propositions, repaired with Bronchus de Rauco the Heralt, unto a little Scaffold erected in the middle of the Tribe, where he seated himself, the Herrault standing bare upon his right hand. The Ballotines having their boxes ready, stood before the Gallery, and at the Command of the Tribunes marched, one unto every Troop on Horsback, and one unto every Company on foot, each of them being followed by other Children that bore red boxes, (this is putting the Question whether the Question should be put.) And the Suffrage being very suddainly returned unto the Tribunes of the Table, and number'd in the view of the Proposers, the Votes were all in the Affirmative; whereupon the red, or doubtfull Boxes were laid aside, it appearing that the Tribe whether for the Negative or Affirmative, was clear in the matter. Wherefore the Herrault began from the Scaffold in the middle of the Tribe to pronounce the first Proposition, and the Ballotines marching with the Negative and Affirmative only: Bronchus with his voyce like Thunder, continued to repeat the Proposition over and over again so long as it was in Balloting: The like was done for every Clause, till the Ballot was finisht, and the Tribunes assembling had signed the points, that is to say, the number of every Suffrage, as it was taken by the Secretary upon the tale of the Tribunes, and in the sight of the Proposers; for this may not be omitted, it is the pulse of the People. Now whereas it appertaineth unto the Tribunes to report the Suffrage of the people unto the Senate, they cast the Lot for this Office with three silver Balls, and one gold one, and it fell upon the R^t Worshipfull Argus de Crookborne, in the Tribe of Pascua, first Tribune of the Foot. Argus being a good sufficient Man in his own Country, was yet of the mind that he should make but a bad spokes man, and therefore became something blank at his Luck, till his colleagues perswaded him that it was no such great matter, if he could but read, having ing his Paper before him. The Proposers taking Coach, received a volley upon the Field, and returned in the same Order, save that being accompanied with the Tribunes, they were also attended by the whole Prærogative unto the Piazza of the Pantheon, where with another volley they took their leaves. Argus, who had not thought upon his Wife and Children all the way, went very gravely up, and every one being seated, the Senate by their silence seemed to call for the Report, which Argus standing up, delivered in this wise.

SO it is, that it hath falne unto my Lot to report unto your Excellencies the Votes of the People, taken upon the third instant, in the first year of this Commonwealth, at the Halo; the R^t. Honourable Phosphorus de Auge, in the Tribe of Eudia, Dolabella d' Enjo, in the Tribe of Turmæ, and Linceus de Stella, in the Tribe of Nubia, Lords Commissioners of the Great Seal of Oceana, and Proposers pro temporibus— Together with my Brethren the Tribunes, and my Self being present. Wherefore these are to certifie unto your Fatherhoods, that the said Votes of the People were as followeth; that is to say.

Unto the first Propositon, Nemine Contradicante— Unto the second Nomine Contradicente— Unto the third, the like.
Unto the fourth 211 above half.
Unto the fifth 201 above half.
Unto the sixth 150 above half, in the Affirmative.
Unto the seaventh, Nomine again, and so forth—

My Lords, it is a Language that is out of my Prayers, and if I be out at it, no harm—

But as concerning my Lord Archon (as I was saying) these are to signifie unto you, the true-heartednesse, and good will which is in the People, seeing by joyning with you, as one Man, they confesse that all they have to give, is too little for his Highnesse. For truly (Fathers) if he who is able to doe harm, and doth none, may well be called honest.

neſt. What ſhall we ſay unto my Lord Archon's Highneſſe, who having had it in his power to have done us the greateſt miſchief that ever befell a poor Nation, ſo willing to truſt ſuch as they thought well of, hath done us ſo much good, as we ſhould never have known how to doe our ſelves? which was ſo ſweetly delivered by my Lord Chancellor Phoſophorus, unto the People, that I dare ſay there was never an one of them could forbear to doe as I doe—— An't pleaſe your Fatherhoods they be tears of Joy. Ah my Lord Archon ſhall walk the ſtreets (an it be for his eaſe I mean) with a Switch, while the People run after him, and pray for him: he ſhall not wet his foot, they will ſtrew flowers in his way: he ſhall ſit higher in their hearts, and in the judgement of all good Men, then the Kings that goe up ſtairs unto their ſeats, and one of theſe had as good pull two or three of his Fellowes out of their great Chaires, as wrong him, or meddle with him; he ha's two or three hundred thouſand Men, that when you ſay the word, ſhall ſell themſelves unto their ſhirts for him, and dye at his foot. His Pillow is of Down, and his grave ſhall be as ſoft, over which they that are alive ſhall wring their hands. And, to come unto your Fatherhoods, moſt truly ſo called, as being the loving Parents of the People; truly you doe not know what a feeling they have of your Kindneſſe, ſeeing you are ſo bound up, that if there come any harm, they may thank themſelves: And (alaſſe! poor ſouls) they ſee that they are given to be of ſo many minds, that though they always mean well, yet if there come any good, they may thank them that teach them better. Wherefore there was never ſuch a thing as this invented, they doe verily believe that it is none other then the ſame which they always had in their very heads, if they could have but told how to bring it out: As now for a ſample, My Lords the Propoſers had no ſooner ſaid your minds, then they found it to be that which heart could wiſh. And your Fatherhoods may comfort your ſelves, that there is not a People in the world more willing to learn what is for their own goods, nor more apt to ſee it, when you have ſhew'd it them: Wherefore they doe love you as they doe their own ſelves, Honour you as Fathers, reſolve to give you as it were Obedience for ever; and ſo thanking you for your moſt good and excellent Lawes, they doe pray for you as the very Worthies of the Land, Right Honourable Lords and Fathers aſſembled in Parliament.

Argus came off beyond his own expectation, for thinking right, and ſpeaking as he thought, it was apparent by the Houſe, and the thanks they gave him, that they eſteemed him to be absolutely of the best sort of Orators, upon which having a mind that till then misgave him, he became very Courtise, and much delighted with that which might goe down the next week in Print unto his Wife, and his Neighbours. Livy makes the Roman Tribunes to speak in the same stile with the Consuls, which could not be, and therefore for ought in him to the contrary, Volero & Canuleius might have spoken no otherwise for the their stile, then Argus. However they were not created the first year of the Commonwealth; and the Tribunes of Oceana are since become better Orators then were needfull. But the Lawes being Enacted, had the Preamble annexed, and were delivered unto Bronchus, who loved nothing in the Earth so much as to goe staring and bellowing up and down the Town, like a Stagg in a Forrest, as he now did, with his Fraternity in their Coats of Arms, and I know not how many Trumpets, Proclaiming the Act of Parliament, when meeting my Lord Archon (who from a retreat that was without Affectation, as being for Devotion only, and to implore a blessing by Prayer and Fasting, upon his labours, now newly Arrived in Town) the Herault of the Tribe of Bestia, set up his throat, and having chaunted out his Lession, past as haughtily by him, as if his own had been the better Office; which in this place was very well taken, though Bronchus for his high mind, happened afterwards upon some disasters (too long to tell) that spoyled much of his Embroidery.

My Lord Archons arrivall being known, the Signory accompanyed by the Tribunes, repaired unto him, with the newes he had already heard by the Herrauld: to which my Lord Strategus added, That his Highnesse could not doubt upon the Demonstrations given, but the minds of men were firme in the opinion, that he could be no seeker of himselfe, in the way of earthly Pompe and Glory; and that the Gratitude of the Senate, and the People, could not therefore be understood to have any such reflection upon him; But so it was, that in regard of dangers abroad, and Parties at home, they durst not trust themselves, without a standing Army, nor a standing Army in any mans hands, but those of his Highnesse.

The Archon made answer, that he ever expected this would be the sense of the Senate, and the People, and this being their Sence, he should have been sorry they had made choice of any other then himselfe for a standing Generall; First, because it could not have been more unto their owne safety, and secondly, because so long as they should have need of a standing Army, his worke was not done. That he would not dispute against the Judgement of the Senate, and the People, nor ought that to be: Nevertheleſſe, he made little doubt, but experience would ſhew every Party their owne Intereſt in this Government, and that better improved, then they could expect from any other; that mens animoſityes ſhould over ballance their Intereſt, for any time, was impoſſible, that humor could never be laſting, nor through the Conſtitution of the Government, of any effect at the firſt charge. For ſuppoſing the worſt, and that the People had choſen none other into the Senate, and the Prerogative, then royaliſts, a matter of Fourteen hundred men muſt have taken their Oaths at their Election, with an intention to go quite contrary, not only to their Oaths ſo taken, but to their own Intereſt; for being eſtated in the Soveraign Power, they muſt have decreed it from themſelves, (ſuch an example as for which there was never any experience, nor can be any reaſon) or holding it, it muſt have done in their hands as well every whit, as in any other. Furthermore, they muſt have removed the Government from a Foundation that apparantly would hold, to ſet it upon another which apparantly would not hold, which things if they could not come to paſſe, the Senate and the People, conſiſting wholly of Royaliſts, much leſſe by a parcel of them elected. But if the feare of the Senate and of the People, derived from a party without ſuch an one as would not be elected, nor engage themſelves unto the Common-wealth by any oath: this againe muſt be ſo large, as would go quite contrary to their owne Intereſt, they being as free and as fully eſtated in their liberty, as any other, or ſo narrow that they could do no hurt, while the People being in Arms, and at the beck of the Strategus, every Tribe would at any time make a better Army, then ſuch a Party, and there being no parties at home, fears from abroad would vaniſh. But ſeeing it was otherwiſe determined by the Senate, and the People, the beſt courſe was to take that which they held the ſafeſt, in which with his humble thanks for their great bounty, he was reſolved to ſerve them with all duty and obedience.

A very ſhort time after, the Royaliſts now equall Citizens, made good the Archons Judgement, there being no other that found any thing near ſo great a ſweet in the Government. For he who hath not been acquainted with affliction (ſaith Seneca) knoweth but half the things of this world.

Moreover they ſaw plainly, that to reſtore the ancient Government, they muſt caſt up their Eſtates into the hands of three hundred men; wherefore in caſe the Senate, and the Prerogative conſiſting of thirteen hundred men, had been all Royallists, there must of necessity have been, and be for ever, one thousand against this or any such Vote. But the Senate being informed by the Signory, that the Archon had accepted of his Dignity and Office, caused a third Chair to be set for his Highness, between those of the Strategus, and the Orator in the House, the like at every Council; to which he repaired, not of necessity, but at his pleasure, being the best, and as Argus not vainly said, the greatest Prince in the World; for in the Pomp of his Court he was not inferiour unto any, and in the Field he was followed with a force that was formidable unto all: Nor was there a cause in the Nature of this constitution, to put him unto the charge of Guards, spoyle his stomack or his sleep: Insomuch as being handsomely disputed by the wits of the Academy, whether my Lord Archon, if he had been ambitious, could have made himself so great, it was carried clear in the Negative; not only for the Reasons drawn from the present ballance, which was Popular, but putting the case the ballance had been Monarchicall. For there be some Nations (whereof this is one) that will bear a Prince in a Common-wealth, far higher then it is possible for them to bear a Monarch. Spain looked upon the Prince of Aurange as her most formidable Enemy, but if ever there be a Monarch in that Country, he will be her best friend. For whereas a Prince in a Common-wealth, deriveth his greatnes from the root of the People, a Monarch deriveth his from one of those ballances which nip them in the root; by which means the Low Countreyes under a Monarch, were poor and inconsiderable, but in bearing a Prince could grow unto a miraculous height, and give the glory of his actions by far the upper hand of the greatest King in Christendome. There are Kings in Europe, to whom a King of Oceana would be but a Petit Companion. But the Prince of this Common-wealth is the terror, and the Judge of them all.

That which my Lord Archon now minded most, was the Agrarian, upon which debate he uncessantly thrust the Senate, and the Council of State, to the end it might be planted upon some firm root, as the main point and Basis of perpetuity unto the Common-wealth.

And these are some of the most remarkable Passages that happened in the first year of this Government. About the latter end of the second, the Army was disbanded, but the Taxes continued at thirty thousand pounds a month, for three years and an half. By which means a piece of Artiglery was Planted, and a portion of Land to the value of 50*l.* a year purchased for the maintenance of the Games, and of the Priz-arms for ever, in each Hundred.

With

With the eleventh year of the Common-wealth, the terme of the Exciſe, allotted for the mayntenance of the Senate and the People, and for the rayſing of a Publique Revenue, expired. By which time the Exchequer over and above the annuall Sallaryes, amounting unto three hundred thouſand pounds, accumulating every year out of one Million income, Seaven hundred thouſand pounds, in Bancho, brought it with the Product of the Summe, riſing to about eight Millions in the whole, whereby at ſeveral times they had purchaſed unto the Senate and the People, Foure hundred thouſand pounds per annum, ſollid Revenue: which beſides the Lands holden in Panopea, together with the Perquiſites of either Province, was held ſufficient for a publique Revenue. Nevertheleſſe, Taxes being now wholly taken off, the Excize of no great burthen, and many ſpecious Advantages not vainly propoſed in the heightening of the Publique Revenue, the Exciſe was very chearfully eſtabliſhed by the Senate and the People, for the terme of ten years longer: and the ſame courſe being taken, the Publique Revenue was found in the One and twentieth of the Common-wealth, to be worth one Million in good Land; Whereupon the Exciſe was ſo aboliſhed for the preſent; as with all reſolved to be the beſt, the moſt fruitfull and eaſie way of raiſing Taxes, according unto future Exigencies. But the Revenue now ſuch, as was able to be a yearly Purchaſer, gave a jealouſie that by this means the ballance of the Common-wealth, conſiſting in private Fortunes, might be eaten out; whence this yeare is famous for that Law whereby the Senate & the People forbidding any farther Purchaſe of Lands unto the Publique, within the Dominions of Oceana, and the adjacent Provinces, put the Agrarian upon the Common-wealth her ſelf. Theſe encreaſes are things which men, addicted unto Monarchy, deride as impoſſible, whereby they unwarily urge a ſtrong Argument, againſt that which they would defend: For having their eyes fixed upon the Pomp and Expence, by which not only every Child of a King being a Prince, exhauſteth his Fathers Coffers; but favorites and ſervile ſpirits devoted unto the flattery of thoſe Princes, grow inſolent and profuſe, returning a fit Gratitude unto their Maſters, whom while they hold it honourable to deceive, they ſuck and keep eternally poor. It followes that they doe not ſee how it ſhould be poſſible for a Common-wealth to cloath her ſelf in Purple, and thrive ſo ſtrangely upon that which would make a Prince's haire grow through his hood, and not afford him bread. As if it were a Miracle that a careleſs and Prodigall Man ſhould bring ten thouſand pounds a year to nothing; or that an industrious and frugall Man brings a little unto ten thousand pounds a year. But the fruit of a mans industry and frugality, can never be like that of a Common-wealth, first because the Greatnesse of the encrease, followes the greatnesse of the Stock or principall: and secondly, because a frugall Father is for the most part succeeded by a Lavish Son, whereas a Common-wealth is her owne Heire.

This year a part was proposed by the Right Honourable Aurcus de Woolsacke in the Tribe of Pecus, first Commissioner of the Treasury; unto the Council of State, which soon after past the ballot of the Senate and the People: by which the Lands of the Publique Revenue amounting unto one Million, were equally divided into five thousand Lots, enter'd by their names and parcells into a Lot-booke preserved in the Exchequer: and if any Orphant being a Mayd should cast her Estate into the Exchequer for Fourteen hundred pounds, the Treasury was bound by the Law to pay her quarterly Two hundred pounds a yeare, free from Taxes for her Life, and to assigne her a Lot for her Security; if she marryed, her Husband was neither to take ont the Principall without her consent (acknowledged by her selfe unto one of the Commissioners of the Treasury who accoriding as he found it to be free, or forced, was to allow or disallow of it) nor any other way engage it, then to her propper use: But if the Principall were taken out, the Treasury was not bound to repay any more of it then One thousand pounds; nor might be repay'd at any time, save within the first year of the Marriage: the like was to be done by a halfe or quarter Lot respectively.

This was found to be a great Charity unto the weaker Sex, and as some say, who are more skilfull in like Affairs then my self, of good Profit to the Common-wealth.

Now began the Native Spleen of Oceana to be much purged, and men not to affect fullennesse and Pedantisme. The Elders could remember that they had been Youth. Wit and Gallantry were so far from being thought Crimes in themselves, that care was taken to preserve their innocence. For which cause it was proposed unto the Council for Religion, by the Right Honourable Cadiscus de Clero, in the Tribe of Stamnum, first Censor, That such women as living in Gallantry and view about the Town, were of evil fame, and could not shew that they were maintained by their own Estates or Industry; or such as having Estates of their own, were yet wastfull in their way of life, unto others, should be obnoxious unto the animadversion of the Council of Religion, or of the Censors: In which the proceeding

ſhould be after this manner. Notice ſhould be firſt given of the ſcandall, unto the party offending, in private; if there were no amendment within the ſpace of ſix Months, ſhe ſhould be ſummoned and rebuked before the ſaid Council or Cenſors: And if after other ſix Moneths it were found that neither this avayled, She ſhould be Cenſured not to appear at any Publick Meetings, Games or Recreations, upon Penalty of being taken up by the Door-keepers, or Guards of the Senate, and by them to be detained, untill for every ſuch offence, five pounds were duly paid for her enlargement.

Furthermore, if any Common-Strumpet ſhould be found, or any ſcurrility or prophaneſſe repreſented at either of the Theaters, the Prelates for every ſuch offence ſhould be fined Twenty pounds, by the ſaid Council, and the Poet for every ſuch offence on his part, ſhould be whipt. This Law relates unto another, which alſo was enacted the ſame year upon this occaſion.

The Youth and Wits of the Academy having put the buſineſſe ſo home in the defence of Comedies, that the Provoſts had nothing but the Conſequences provided againſt by the fore-going Law to object, prevailed ſo far, that two of the Provoſts of the Council of State, joyn'd in a Propoſition, which after much adoe came to a Law, whereby one hundred thouſand pounds was alotted for the building of two Theaters, one on each ſide of the Piazza of the Halo, and two annuall Magiſtrates called Prelates, choſen out of the Knights, were added unto the Tropick, the one called the Prelate of the Buskin, for inſpection of the Tragick Scene called Melpomene, and the other the Prelate of the Socke, for the Comick called Thalia, which Magiſtrates had each of them five hundred pounds a year, allowed out of the Profits of the Theaters, the reſt (except 800 a year to four Poets) payable into the Exchequer. A Poet Laureate created in one of theſe Theaters, by the Strategus receives a wreath of five hundred Pounds in Gold, paid out of the ſaid Profits. But no man is capable of this Creation, that had not two parts in three of the Suffrages at the Academy, aſſembled after ſix weeks warning, and upon that occaſion.

Theſe things among us are ſure enough to be cenſured, but by ſuch only as doe not know the nature of a Commonwealth; for to tell men that they are free, and yet to curb the genious of a People in a lawfull Recreation unto which they are naturally inclined, is to tell a tale of a Tub. I have heard the Proteſtant Miniſters in France, by men that were wiſe, and of their own profeſſion, much blamed in that they forbad Dancing, a Recreation to which the genious of that aire is so enclining, that they lost many who would not loose that; nor doe they lesse then blame the former determination of rashnesse, who now gently connive at that which they had so roughly forbidden. These sports in Oceana are so Governed, that they are pleasing for private diversion, and profitable unto the Publique: For the Theaters soon defrayed their own Charge, and now bring in a good Revenue. All this so far from the Detriment of virtue, that it is to the improvement of it, seeing Women that heretofore made havock of their Honours, that they might have their pleasures, are now incapable of their pleasures, if they loose their Honours.

About the one and fortieth year of the Common-wealth, the Censors according unto their Annuall Custome, reported the Pillar of Nilus, by which it was found that the People were encreased very near one third. Whereupon the Council of War was appointed by the Senate to bring in a State of War, and the Treasurers the State of the Treasury. The State of War, or Pay, and Charge of an Army, was soon after exhibited by the Council, in this Accompt.

By Comparison of which Accompts, if a War with an Army of 80000 Men were to be made by the penny, yet was the Common-wealth able to maintain such an one above three years, without levying a Tax. But it is against all experience, sense and reason, that such an Army should not be soon broken, or make a great Progresse; in either of which Cases the Charge seaseth, or rather if a right course be taken in the latter, Profit comes in; for the Romans had no other considerable way, but Victory, whereby to fill their Treasury, which nevertheless was seldome empty. Alexander did not consult his Purse, upon his designe for Persia. It is observed by Machiavill, that Livy arguing what the event in reason must have been, had that King invaded Rome, and diligently measuring what on each side was necessary unto such a War, never speaks a word of Money. No man imagines, that the Gaules, Gothes, Vandalls, Huns, Lombards, Saxons, Normans, made their Inroads or Conquests by the strength of the Purse; and if it be thought enough according unto the Dialect of our age, to say in Answer unto these things, that those times are past and gone. What money did the late Gustavus, the most victorious of modern Princes, bring out of Sweden with him into Germany? An Army that goes upon a golden Leg, will be as lame as if it were a wooden one; but proper Horses have Nerves and Muscles in them, such for which having four or five Millions, a sum easie, with a Revenue like this of Oceana, to be had at any time in readinesse, you need never, or very rarely Charge the people with Taxes. What influence the Common-wealth by such Arms hath had upon the world, I leave unto Historians, whose custome it hath been of old, to be as diligent Observers of Forreign Actions, as careless of those Domestique Revolutions, which (how sleasant it may be, as not partaking so much of the Romance) are unto Statesmen of far greater profit; and this fault if it be not mine, is so much more frequent with Modern Writers, as hath caused me to undertake this work, on which to give my own judgement, it is performed as much above the time I have been about it, as below the dignity of the matter.

Forces

But I cannot depart out of this Country, till I have taken leave of my Lord Archon, a Prince of immense felicity, who having built as high with his Councels, as he digg'd deep with his Sword, had now seen fifty years measured with his own unerring Orbes.

Plutarch in the Life of Timoleon.

Timoleon, so great a hater of Tyrants, that not able to dissuade his Brother Timophanes, to relinquish the Tyranny of Corinth, he slew him; was afterwards Elected by the People, (the Sicilians groaning unto them from under the like burden)

den) to be sent unto their relief: Whereupon Telechides the Man at that time of most Authority in the Commonwealth of Corinth, stood up, and giving an Exhortation unto Timoleon, how he should behave himself in his Expedition, told him that if he restored the Sicilians unto Liberty, it would be acknowledged that he had destroyed a Tyrant; if otherwise, he must expect to hear that he had murdered a King. Timoleon taking his leave, with a very small Provision for so great a design, pursued it with a Courage not inferior to, and a felicity beyond any that had been known unto that day in mortals flesh, having in the space of eight years utterly rooted out of all Sicily, those Weeds of Tyranny, through the destruction whereof Men fled in such abundance from their Native Country, that whole Cities were left desolate; and brought it unto such a passe, that others through the fame of his Virtues, and the excellency of the soyle, flockt as fast from all Quarters unto it, as to the Garden of the World. While he being presented by the people of Syracusa, with his Town house, and his Country retreat, the sweetest Places in either, lived with his Wife and Children, a most quiet, happy, and holy life; for he attributed no part of his successe unto himself, but all unto the blessing and providence of the Gods. As he past his time in this manner, admired and honoured by mankind, Laphystius an envious Demagog, going to summon him upon some pretence or other, to answer for himself before the Assembly, the people fell into such a Mutiny, as could not be appeased but by Timoleon, who understanding the matter, reproved them, by repeating the paines and travail which he had gone through, unto no other end then that every Man might have the free use of the Lawes. Wherefore when Demanetus another Demagog, had brought the same design about again, and blamed him impertinently unto the people, for things which he did when he was Generall, Timoleon answered nothing, but raising up his hands, gave the Gods thanks for their return unto his frequent prayers, that he might but live to see the Syracusians so free, that they might question whom they pleased.

Not long after being old, through some naturall imperfection, he fell blind; but the Syracusans by their perpetuall visits held him, though he could not see, their greatest object; if there arrived strangers, they brought them to see this sight. Whatever came in debate at the Assembly, if it were of small consequence, they determined it themselves, but if of importance, they alwayes sent for Timoleon, who being brought by his Servants in a Chair, and set in the middle of the Theater, there ever follow'd a great shout,

after which some time was allowed for the Benedictions of the People; and then the matter proposed when Timoleon had spoken to it, was put to the Suffrage, which given, his Servants bore him back in his Chair, accompanied by the People, clapping their hands, and making all expressions of joy and applause, till leaving him at his house, they returned unto the dispatch of their businesse. And this was the life of Timoleon, till he dyed of age, and dropped like a mature fruit, while the eyes of the people, were as the showres of Autumne.

The Life and Death of my Lord Archon, save that he had his senses unto the last, and that his Character is not the Restorer, but the Founder of a Common-wealth, was greater, is so exactly the same again, that (seeing by Men wholly ignorant of Antiquity, I am accused of writing Romance) I shall repeat nothing; but tell you that this year the whole Nation of Oceana, even unto the women and children, was in mourning, where so great or sad a pomp of Funerall, had never been seen or known. Sometime after the performance of the Exequies, a Coloſſus mounted upon a brazen Horse, of excellent Fabrick, was erected in the Piazza of the Pantheon, ingraved with this Inscription on the Eastern side of the Pedestall.
